
SILVERADO SCIENCE CENTER

Silverado Science Center educates visitors about water. The site calls attention to an intersection of moving waters, introducing the SRP canal to the Indian Bend wash. Silverado Science Center utilizes this opportunity to further explore the treatment, maintenance, uses, conservation, and recycling of water.

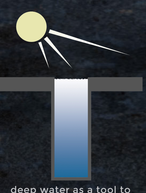
Silverado Science Center features dynamic movement and applications in hopes of creating a space that encourages users to become educated water resource advocates.

0 E Lincoln Dr
Scottsdale, AZ
(480) 717-3676

33.535064, -111.913446
APN: 174-21-0025

bridge
[brij]
1
a : a structure carrying a pathway or roadway over a depression or obstacle
b : a time, place, or means of connection or transition

Merriam Webster Dictionary



deep water as a tool to explore the filtration of light pressure felt on a visitor as a result of being in an enclosed space or the diffrence between experiencing a small low space flowing off of a large open area

density can be experienced in architecture as a combination of depth and pressure, causing one to feel encapsulated by their surroundings

water can be an element which people can walk on/over: a spiritual experience is created