BELIEVE IT OR NOT,
'MYTHBUSTERS' BRINGS
ACT TO LOUISVILLE

PARTNERS IN SCIENCE

By Matt Frassica | mfrassica@courier-journal.com | The Courier-Journal

The hosts of the Discovery Channel show "Mythbusters" have dodged bullets, used explosive C4 as a cooking fuel, and used a speeding motorcycle to pull the tablecloth out from under a banquet.

'MYTHBUSTERS'

Where: Louisville Palace Theatre, 625 S. Fourth St.
When: Next Sunday, 7:30 p.m.
Cost: $29.50 to $150
Tickets and info: louisvillepalace.com

Next Sunday, the hosts of the show, Jamie Hyneman and Adam Savage, bring the live version of their show to the Palace Theatre. And while you're unlikely to witness any very large explosions, expect to see Savage and Hyneman bring their passion for scientific inquiry, fun and showmanship to the stage.

SUNDAY EXCLUSIVE

Don't break the bank for beauty

To look your best, you can pay a pretty price. Lotions, eye creams, makeup and shampoos can do a number on your wallet, but plenty of products are available for less that will bring similar results.

If you're making the switch from high-end products to drugstore versions, just check the list of ingredients to see that you're getting a similar product. Active ingredients — like salicylic acid, retinol and alpha hydroxy acid — are just as effective, whether you're paying $125 for a fancy cream or $10 at the drugstore.

A few affordable skin-care products recommended by totalbeauty.com include Aveeno Positively Radiant cleanser for $7.50, which, like more expensive products, contains soy to increase collagen production.

For an anti-aging serum, why pay $150 when you can get Olay Regenerist Micro-sculpting Serum for $26.99; it has amino-peptides to penetrate deep into skin to hydrate and reduce wrinkles.
