

Randolph Medical Center, located in Roanoke, Alabama, contacted Auburn with a very unique problem and was in need of designs to update their facilities. This update included designs that brought the facilities up to current medical and building standards and also included A.D.A standards. Given that the current site had been built some time in the late 40's to early 50's, special considerations were required due to the concrete construction on the building. My focus on the project was directed at updating the rest room facilities in the building which was challenging due to their limited space.
