The New York Times is proud to present a stunning new collection from its partnership with New York's great museums. "The City That Never Sleeps," created by the New York Historical Society and jewelry designer Cynthia Gale, displays iconic images of the Manhattan skyline. The pendants, earrings and bracelets were inspired by the soulful photography of Irving Browning, whose lens captured the city in remarkable detail in the early 1900s. More than 1,800 prints by Browning reside at the Historical Society.
