I believe that fun is an integral part of the creative process, especially in a team setting. The more energy and enthusiasm people in the group have, the easier it is to come up with innovative solutions to complex problems. Most of my innovative experiences have come from Kaizen events. When a team works well together and is dedicated to meeting a challenge, the whole becomes much greater than the sum of its parts. To help get my creativity flowing I like to run; I find that an hour or so out on the road alone is the perfect way to work through a tough problem or mentally prepare for a big event.
