

The final concept incorporates some of the previous concepts ideas instead of a soft material it was decided that the hard plastic would protect the content inside better. A simple bar with wheels attached would lock in to the container to be able to move the container around it also includes removable straps that can be used to wear the container. The container is oversized to accommodate close to the same amount of product.