Capital Area Thermography

Breast thermography is a state-of-the-art screening procedure utilizing Digital Infrared Thermal Imaging that captures heat images of the breast to aid in early detection of breast cancer. Breast Thermography is safe, radiation-free, no-contact imaging that measures temperature and blood vessel patterns on the surface of breasts. As a tumor grows, it develops a bigger (and hotter) blood supply. An infrared camera picks up this as a heat signal and forms an image. It is then easy for a Board Certified Thermographer to see differences in heat that are present and observe where tumor development may be taking place. These temperatures and patterns can be monitored over time for changes caused by physiological abnormalities, inflammation and/or increased blood flow, possibly indicating a pre-cancerous condition or cancer development. Thermography has been FDA cleared since 1982.

Thermography screenings are by appointment only and are performed by certified thermographic technicians. For more information, go to
