ON THE WEB

>>> This month the featured site is lonelyplanet.com. Lonely Planet is a website that offers everything one could need to start traveling in that foreign land, and embarking on that epic surf trip. It's always a good idea to have a Lonely Planet guide book in tow. Founded by a love for traveling on a budget and the need for sound advice, the Planet was born.

Simply pick a continent, then the country, right down to the city and Planet has the guide for you. Also included, the following sweet features...

- > A trip planner, honestly, could it get any easier?
- > Travel services, including insurance (you are most likely traveling with precious cargo, aka. boards)
- > Where to stay, from luxurious to cheap hostels
- > Mobile, so they're with you all the way
- > Blogs, talk with fellow surfers before you venture out alone
- > Phrasebooks, to help you navigate the land and find that local-travel "fling"

What we here at in the moment love so much about this company, is that they're tried and true experts, not your friend who "kind-of knows-Spanish-and-is-going-to-give-you-a-tour-of-the-real-Mexico". And we always have a copy of LP in our back pocket.

SECTOR 9 SIDEWINDER SERIES

>>> So the surf is flat — bummer. But that's why you have a new Sector 9 board. Sector 9 makes boards ranging from street-course full rip sticks to irie cruiser boards capable of getting the longest tree barrels of your life. They have just released a set of boards with killer Dave Nelson tube shots on the bottom as well as some new skate tech truck ideas to tweak your world.

h20 AUDIO IPHONE ARMBAND

>>> What a more perfect way to top off that tropical barrel of perfection than with your favorite song? Just released H20 Audio has accompanied the tech-savvy bunch of you with your nifty iPhones by making under-water housing. Plan future surf trips, check your facebook, listen to some tunes, all while waiting for the next wave.

OGIO SURF TRAVEL BUS

>>> The Surf Bus bag is pretty much the coolest bag we've seen in a long time. It's got wet/dry compartments, an insulated cooler pocket, and all that good stuff. It's perfect for camping on the beach for those road-trip surf trips. But wait, there's more, this bag actually has a shower in it that has a pump attached to it! A bag with a shower inside, it's more like a travel house.
