In this scenario, the monitoring device alerts the elderly user through the device lighting up as well as a sound that rings to get the user's attention. The user touches the screen to get it out of the screen saver mode and then he sees two notifications to check on the devices desktop. The owner first presses the reminders icon and sees he has to take his medicine as well as check his blood pressure. He then exits out of the reminders window and selects the body vitals icon to measure his blood pressure. When the body vitals window opens the user is shown what to measure and how to do it through written directions and pictures.
