

WHERE does it go from here ?

Illumine went on to win first place in the International Housewares Student Design Competition in 2011 and was featured on numerous design websites such as Core 77 and Yanko Design. It was presented at the International Housewares Show in Chicago, IL where I met thousands of potential buyers from companies such as Home Depot, Walmart, and Ace Hardware just to name a few. The reaction to the product was the same all week “such a simple product to fix such a big problem”. Numerous buyers were interested in seeing more of the product and having it in their stores. The problem with that was I was just a student with limited financial resources and direction to move forward.

I have obtained a provisional patent and would like to see someone carry out this product so that it could do the job it was intended for, saving lives.

Thanks for taking the time to read about this game changing product.
