

Final model for my off road transport inspired by insects project

This is the final model for the project, it was a difficult model as it was larger and more complex than any other but I think it came out ok. As you can see the inspiration from insects was taken from the velvet worm with its unique bendy legs to travel over the impossible, this is what I have tried to achieve through this concept.

