Concept Statement

The Concept behind this project was Branching Out. The overall idea was to refurbish the area, especially the forgotten historic Maverick Park, by designing eight housing units that would hopefully be perceived as the homes of the future. In addition, the housing units would encourage people to change their living habits and think more about sustainable living. Furthermore, they would influence the expansion of other buildings around the area to also branch out from Maverick Park.

A permeable paved path was used to connect the units together and provide easy access to the street and the gathering center. Furthermore, in the design there is a private garden shared by all of the residences and preventing to much of the site from being built on.
