

Prototype Testing

Outside, we tested the bag when the user was running around and jumping up and down. We compared it to the old bag (with weighted Helios model inside) and noted the considerable difference in how secure it was. The prototype bag hardly moved and stayed close to the user's back while the old bag swayed and banged against the back.

The bag was given to the family for a trial week, in which it was very successful. The only feedback was that additional padding may be needed on the straps.
