

RESEARCH ANALYSIS

The current process of moisture measurement is characterized by many different steps with numerous touching points that affect an accurate result. To ensure a correct measurement the probe can not be touched and has to be treated in a specific way. Due to inadequate tools and handling the result is often falsified and leads to several measurements.