

Architectural design is moving increasingly faster to a completely digital environment. This devise anticipates the change and is designed with future technologies for the architects of the next generation.

Mobility, versatility and technology make the V-PAC the future pack for any architecture student. Solar and kinetic energy recharge the unit throughout the day and wireless technologies maintain a constant signal for internet access and student to professor communication.