

Adapting my Design

In response to their new anatomy, I had to re-evaluate my current design. Now that the top portion of their body was frail and fragile, I had to bump up the thickness and security of the top part of the suit. And now that their bottom legs were stronger, I could make the wheel even bigger, making cave purification even more efficient! And to account for the environmental shift I redesigned the extration cones.

