

Phase Three: Toxin Purification

When the moisture has been collected and drained into the hydro-wheel chamber, the Cyptians dismount their wheels and work in pairs in the purification process. Thanks to their squishy porous bodies, they have the ability to plug the lateral purifying spouts into the space between their Seeing Eye and Memori, directly accessing the heat energy from their thermal atrium. This heat travels through the spouts, and boils the contaminated liquid in the hydro-wheel chamber. The purified steam rises out of the drainage veins, while the toxins are left within. The steam saturates the surrounding walls of the caves, creating a new freshly purified atmosphere.

