circa 1905

John W. Hulme founded our company in 1905 as a tent and awning maker. Here, John W. Hulme, his brother, and a store clerk in front of the original J.W. Hulme Co. in St. Paul, Minnesota.

1924

After World War I, J.W. Hulme Co. began to apply its fastidious approach of purposeful design and construction towards producing awnings for the homes of St. Paul's elite.

1917

Hulme began making tents for American soldiers fighting the Great War. Conditions were severe. Using 100 percent cotton canvas that expanded when wet to create a superior barrier against the elements, each stitch and feature was crucial, and either increased the tent's performance or reduced unnecessary weight and cost.

1976

Hulme's product offering grew over time to include leather and canvas sporting bags and accessories. Distinctive Hulme bags became a must-have for the serious outdoor sportsman. As the company flourished it concentrated solely on making bags, including private label bags for other prominent companies.

TODAY, Hulme's iconic character and passion lives on. Every bag and accessory continues to be individually hand crafted by American artisans. Full grain leathers are all sourced from US tanneries and hand-cut by masters using steel dies.

WHAT WE MAKE HAS EVOLVED OVER THE YEARS, BUT NOT WHAT WE STAND FOR.

Our distinctive luggage, bags, duffels, briefcases and sporting accessories are continued to be individually handcrafted by American artisans. All bags and accessories are guaranteed for life, for this generation and the next, preserving John W. Hulme's legacy of outstanding American-made quality.
