

J.W. Hulme develops our exclusive leathers with a small group of artisanal tanneries in our home state of Minnesota, and in Michigan and Tennessee. Our specialized leathers are tanned using old school dyeing and finishing treatments to accentuate the unique striations, color variances, and natural imperfections that highlight the rich beauty of each hide.

We select the finest quality, full grain genuine steer and cow leathers and carefully inspect each hide to make certain it passes our exacting standards before it is hand cut, sewn and finished by our skilled artisans into J.W. Hulme's distinctive leather goods collection.

FULL-GRAIN leather

American Heritage is J.W. Hulme's signature leather. Developed with one of the oldest tanneries in the Southern United States, this unique leather is hand polished and buffed by our leather artists to bring out the individual "highs" and "lows" of each hide, and a rich natural vintage patina that gains character and soul with age.
