

She turns the knob back and forth with her full attention to find that right position. The alarm button turns back after several careful tries.

By the time she shuts down the alarm, she's completely awake.