What is Portland Cement?

Portland cement is the gray powder which acts as the glue or bonding agent that, when mixed with water, sand, gravel and other materials forms concrete. Cement is produced from various and abundant raw materials including limestone, shale, clay and silica sand.

These materials are finely ground and heated in large rotary kilns to temperatures as high as 3400 degrees Fahrenheit. The heat of combustion fuses these materials into clumps of an intermediate material called clinker. When the clinker is discharged from the kiln, it is cooled and later ground with a small amount of gypsum to produce the fine gray powder known as cement. Today, different types of Portland cement are manufactured to meet various physical and chemical requirements.

Portland cement is an essential construction material and a basic component of our nation's infrastructure. It is utilized in numerous markets, including the construction of highways, streets, bridges, airports, mass transit systems, commercial and residential buildings, schools, dams, and water resource systems and facilities. The low cost and universal availability of Portland cement ensures that concrete remains one of the world's most essential and widely used construction materials.
