

hockey, like all sports with equipment has a huge problem with smell caused by bacteria growth, this bacteria can lead to player injury

problem

"Hockey being a body contact sport, you get a cut or an abrasion in your skin, then the bacteria that's been incubating in your skate can go onto your arm or your shoulder and go into that wound," steve franzino, m.d, san jose sharks medical staff

"In the average set of hockey equipment there's over a million living organisms, any one of which can cause you serious harm."
steve silver, founder of sanisport
