

How It Works

The sections zip apart, allowing the backpack to split into three sections. Then the top section zips into the bottom section, creating a backpack about one third smaller than the original.

The removable lid that also serves as a fanny pack.

The full size backpack with all three sections.

The smaller backpack with only two sections.

Benefits:

This backpack allows a backpacker to only need one back. This pack can be adjusted according to trip length and amount of things that need to be carried, making it easier on the consumer to decide which pack to get.
