

Using texture to indicate the function of controls (i.e. volume up/down) can still be pleasing for those without any visual impairment.

The cycle of design-test-repeat was particularly relevant in the process of creating textured controls.

