

This rendering was done during Beginner Presentation Techniques. I was required to pick the final project and I choose to render an interior space. This was my first time hand rendering a floor plan and perspective. This was essential to learning how to convey materials correctly by hand and showing them in a presentation.

The two images pictured above were created in Advanced Presentation Techniques. This was a course that was geared more towards industrial designers but I learned a lot about computer rendering and making objects look realistic. These were some of my final projects during this course.
