

When you finish reading this brochure, you might make one of the most important decisions for your baby's health.

About 1 in 200 babies born in India is affected by a treatable metabolic disorder. Most of these affected babies, if the disorder is undetected and untreated in the first few weeks of life, will suffer from serious irreversible health issues which have adverse consequences.

Take the 1st Step Newborn Screening Test to find out if your baby has a disorder. If so, you can start the necessary treatment immediately, before any harm is done, resulting in a normal healthy life for your baby.

or Expecting Parent?

Q. What is Newborn Screening and why is it important?

A. Newborn Screening is a simple test done 24 hours AFTER a baby is born to identify serious disorders the baby might have been born with. These disorders, if undetected and untreated, can have adverse consequences for your baby.

If a baby is born with a disorder, a Newborn Screening Test helps identify it early so that treatment can start before the disorder causes any harm to your baby.

Q. Can we prevent the disorders?

A. These disorders are inherited and cannot be prevented but they are TREATABLE. Even healthy looking babies and those with no family history of such disorders may have them. If a baby is born with a disorder, early detection and treatment is the only solution. Failure to start the treatment in time may result in mental retardation, physical disability or even death.

Q. How is the 1st Step, Newborn Screening Test, done?

A. The test is done by performing a painless heel prick on the baby and collecting a few drops of blood, 24 to 72 hours, after birth. This sample is sent to NeoGen Labs for testing. Results are normally available within 5 days.

Q. I want to order the test for my baby but I need more information.
