

Exploring Shape

Different shapes that could be used for our concept were looked at to ascertain the best form to make a 3D product.

By not restricting the concept to cubes, it could be determined whether certain shapes would work better, and provide more flexibility in use.

Having decided that a cubed shape would always allow for contact when constructing a product, variations and function details (below) were determined.

