

DORADO

EXTERIOR

JEREMY COVELLI

Dorado departs from the typical explorer yacht style and arrangement, and brings a fresh approach to solving the aspects of mixing part exploration vessel and part luxury yacht. Clean, simple lines define the shape of the hull and the decks above, while a seamless superstructure takes its styling cue from modern vehicles. Hidden sat domes and deck hardware complement the clean look. You'll find a jacuzzi pool with swim up bar, a settee, full bar with cooking equipment, and an alfresco dining table for ten on the main deck aft. All of which is covered by an awning with retractable glass roof.

On the Guest Deck, a full spa with indoor / outdoor pool and a raised area at the bow with seating make enjoying the outdoors simple. The Observation Deck is a great place for whale spotting with its large walk around sun bed.

Dorado's interior balances style and luxury with informality. Matte chrome, dark wood, and hints of red define the color scheme. Missing is the typical starboard foyer, which is replaced by a grand central stair and lift. The stair is topped by a large glass roof letting light in all the way down to the Lower Deck through frosted glass floors. Four guest suites and a kid's room can be found on the guest deck. This level was chosen for the staterooms to maximize views and let each have an outdoor deck area. A master suite takes up nearly two thirds of the of Bridge Deck. An office, sitting room, bath, and large wardrobe complete the rear facing bedroom.

Dorado not only meets, but exceeds the owner's wishes. All of his specially requested areas are on board along with an area he'll most likely be spending more time than his wife wishes, a man cave. Here he can showcase a car or two, watch the game on Sundays, or enjoy a game of pool on the self leveling billiards table.
