

What a fool I've been forty-five years working one long commute backforward backforward how much of my life's been spent underground why didn't I think I did think why didn't I act fool I'd done everything right worked hard played the game that Tom they said he's dependable good for business but for what why didn't I do something about a pension fool I know why retirement was so far away thirty years twenty years ten five now it's hardly poverty I know I could get used to the simple life might be good for me not having all that restaurant food but not being able to buy the bicycle I saw for little Peter just a present for my grandson's birthday no tears damn you don't you cry you still have your family I don't deserve them the blessed ones no tears I said fool.

Retirement should be a word, not a sentence. It should be a happy word. Not one that means punishment. We believe that the best way to secure a comfortable retirement is to start a pension now. Speak to an Independent Financial Adviser about an Aviva pension or visit aviva.co.uk
