

FOR DAVID, EVERY DAY IS REMEMBRANCE DAY.

The Royal British Legion answers 1,000 calls for help every day from serving and ex-Servicemen and women who are experiencing difficulties, usually through no fault of their own. Perhaps they need counselling, job retraining, help visiting war graves David's loyalty cost him dearly in the Falklands. A day after the ceasefire was announced, he stood on a landmine. Despite three operations to save David's left leg, it had to be amputated.

abroad or, like David, assistance in securing the War Pension they're entitled to. Whatever their hardship, The Royal British Legion is here to give them hope. Last year we required £60 million to do our work. And this year we'll need even more. For many of our serving and ex-Service people and their families, the battle has only just begun. But with your help, we can help them overcome the challenges they face.
