

THE 60th ANNIVERSARY OF THE END OF WW2

SAME MAN

NEW WAR

In 1943 George Atkins was drafted into an elite unit, formed to take on the Nazi U-Boats attacking allied merchant ships in the North Atlantic. Not only did he survive the torpedoes, the aerial assaults and the ferocious storms but he helped many others do so too. ■ Sixty years on however, age and illness have left George at rock bottom. Thankfully however, he swallowed his pride, picked up the phone and called the British Legion. And we were able to help by providing support, both financial and emotional. ■ Because we refuse to let the memory fade of what ordinary men and women like George went through, and still go through, to defend the freedom which we consider a birthright. We believe it our duty to remember. Please make it your duty not to forget.
