

Brittany Sharma

Professor Angela Drummond-Mathews

English 1301

26 April 2012

My Class Reflection

My experiences in my English 1301 class this semester are very good ones. I have really learned a lot and I have gained a lot of knowledge. Everything that I have experienced in this class, from experiences that I have had throughout my heroic journey to experiences in the classroom, are things I really think I could take with me to use in the future. I would like to take this time to reflect on my time in this class and the plans that I have for the future.

The one thing I have really enjoyed and learned from the most is the heroic quest that I took throughout the semester. Making the decision to begin learning the Nepali language was a journey I knew would be difficult, but I knew it would also be rewarding in the end. It was something I already wanted to do, but just couldn't seem to get the motivation to do. This assignment to take on a heroic journey through the whole semester was the motivation I needed to finally begin learning Nepali. Embarking on this journey also taught me a lot of things that go beyond having the ability to speak a foreign language. I learned more about the Nepali culture and became closer to my in-laws as well. These were definitely bonuses for me as I went through my quest.

Also, the class projects that we did during the semester were both fun and beneficial to me. Projects like the debates and hero bios really made me think outside the box, and helped me to learn and experience something new. I like debates, and if I feel strongly enough about a topic, I can debate on it all day. The hero bio also gave me the opportunity to learn about different heroes and how they have made positive impacts in the world by doing what they do. These projects were very fun experiences.

For the future, I plan to take what I have learned in this class, and make good use of it wherever I may need it. I know that my heroic journey will definitely be something that will benefit my plans to visit Nepal with my husband in the near future. Now that I am able to speak more Nepali and know more about Nepali culture, I will be able to make my visit to Nepal much more exciting and enjoyable. I will actually be able to speak to my husband's family and go along with their customs. It will feel great feeling more comfortable and at home there.

Overall, my experiences in this class have been very fun and beneficial for me. I have learned many things, which I will take with me to use in my future plans. My heroic journey, class projects, and experiences in the classroom have all provided me with good knowledge, which will benefit me for the rest of my life. And for that I am very thankful.