

After making a material prototype I better understood the material. With this knowledge I further refined my chosen concept's form and added details. Below is a preliminary concept rendering. The concept was put up for a critique. Using the feedback I received, I again began to refine the concept. The bottom of this page displays a few of my refinement sketches.

