

INCLUSIVE PARTICIPATORY DESIGN METHODS STUDY

An increasingly alarming rate of individuals between the age of 3 to 21 are living with some level of intellectual or developmental disability that can benefit from inclusive design interventions. Compared to physical disabilities, individuals with developmental disabilities are given slight consideration with universally designed products. My thesis focused on developing inclusive design methods for children with autism to foster true inclusivity within the product design process.