Improve Visibility and Eliminate Strain for a Relaxing, Complete Shave

Unhelpful Angle.

Shaving with one's foot resting against the edge of a tub is less strenuous than using the wall but creates visibility problems. More water falls from the upper body, washing away soap from the legs. This way it is easy to lose track of what has already been shaved.

Poor Visibility.

It is easy enough to see the top of the thighs and shins, but more difficult to see the backs of the knees, calves, and thighs. Then there's the ridiculous visibility problem when women go to shave... the rest.

Discomfort. Strain.

For best visibility, the foot must be placed high enough on the wall that adequate pressure can be used against the wall without the foot slipping down. This position strains many muscles, not at all desirable while trying not to cut one's self.
