Dave, Laura, and their cat, Milo make a great team. Their design work is eye-catching and their print-making flawless. With notebooks that say, "Get off your ass and make something," you're sure to want everything that is sold on their online store. Check them out!

How was the company started?

Dave: We met in Cleveland, Ohio. Laura got into grad school and we came to Denton. When she graduated grad school, we started looking for a letterpress so she could make art at home because she didn't have access to the one at her school. We found this letterpress in Sanger, purchased it and brought it back here and restored it and that was kind of the beginning of everything.

What kind of work do you do?

Laura: As a company, we design cards. Greeting cards, business cards, stationary, graduation announcements. We print those as well when clients ask to print them. That being said, we do custom work. We also do work for ourselves that we then hope to sell. We hope other people like it. Both Dave and I have a background in web design. Dave is the primary programmer and I'm the primary printer so it kind of works out evenly.
