MARY WALKER

MARYWALKERMUSIC.COM

DFW Musician Mary Walker has a unique style. Her pop-like music has jazz and soul influences making her more refreshing than most. Even more surprising, she throws in a little rap to mix it up. We know you'll love her just as much as we do.

How did you get involved and why are you a solo artist?

Mary: When I was 16 [and] I was a heartbroken teenager and I remember I heard "Love Song" by Sara Bareilles. It was such a radio hit and it had the most amazing pop piano. I loved that song and I just wanted to sing it for some reason. I had never really done music at all before that but I looked it up on Youtube and I figured it out. My dad was like, 'I'll give you lessons for your birthday.' I had the most amazing teacher. She taught Norah Jones and taught me the skills and I was just addicted to it. I would skip school to go home and write music. I didn't put together a band until maybe two or three years later but I enjoyed being a solo artist because I liked having complete control. Even now, I still feel very territorial over my music...I like to make sure my vision is communicated well before anything.
