Iceland May Ban Online Pornography

The Icelandic government may use Internet filters to block citizens from viewing pornography online, potentially becoming the first Western democracy to impose strict Internet blocking technology like that used by China and other authoritarian regimes.

What do you think?

"Norway had better prepare for a wave of pervert immigrants."

Lorine Koenig,
Quail Farmer

"As a passionate believer in free speech, I abhor any type of censorship. But mainly the kind that makes it harder to masturbate."

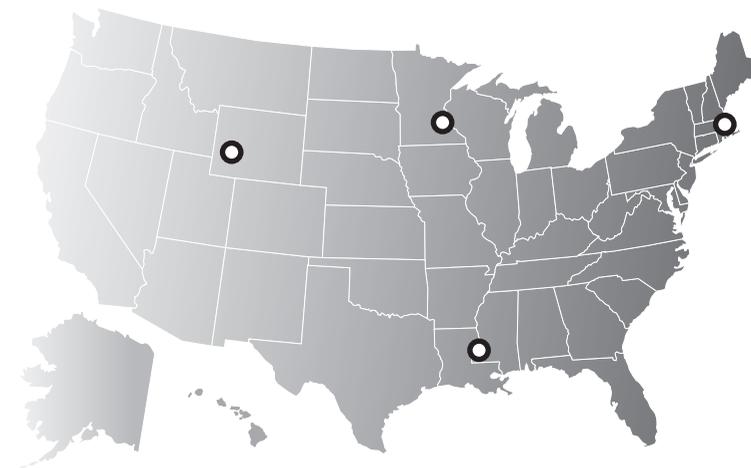

Mike Ruck,
Hydraulic Jack Operator

"Hopefully, Icelanders can live vicariously through volcanic eruptions."

William Morshower,
Latex Spooler

NATIONAL NEWS HIGHLIGHTS

NATCHEZ, MS—Local shop owner Daniel Kerr, 37, realized the success or failure of his small business depended almost entirely on the lunkeheads who live around him.

NEWTON, MA—Chrissy Leon didn't like those starving kids in the banner ad staring at her, so she refreshed the webpage until something else came up.

MINNEAPOLIS—Sean Renst, 23, imagined a really hot girl living directly below him as he made it the closest he's ever been to playing "Blackbird" all the way through on guitar.

LEWISTON, ID—Area man Mitch Lamaar, 31, was determined to create a clever new idiom, but the best he could come up with was "Cake as a reward is tastier than cake for no reason."
