MODERN DANCE for children with MICHELE OWENS

MODERN DANCE for children

MICHELE OWENS, B.A., M.A.

Michele grew up dancing in her Mother's dance studio, London School of Dance, in Dallas. Michele has been performing, choreographing, and teaching dance for over 30 years. A high energy dance educator, Michele has worked with hundreds of students in private and public settings.

A graduate of the University of Texas, Michele received an M.A. from the University of Utah, where she received the Dee R. Winterton Award for Excellence in Dance. Michele believes in dance as a universal experience that can touch people of all ages, backgrounds, and abilities. This drives her work in the public sector, including WINGS, a dance project with Life Skill students from Crockett High School. Directed by Michele since 1993, WINGS tours the schools and performs for students every Spring. In 2008, WINGS II was created to bring community dance classes to people with disabilities at McBeth Recreation Center. Michele also directs the preschool dance program at Mt. Olive Lutheran School. This is the 21st year of the Modern Dance School for Children at Cafe Dance. Bold and dedicated, Michele transmits the joy and meaning of modern dance to students in an innovative and loving environment.

THE CLASSES

The primary goal of the classes is for students to come to know and value themselves through modern dance. Classes encourage creative power through dance and stimulate the physical, emotional, mental, and social development of students. Classes promote:

- * the understanding of modern dance as an art form
- * self-expression through improvisation and choreography exercises
- * the development of freedom and control of movement
- * the growth of strength, coordination, flexibility, and body awareness
- * the ability to work with others and share diverse ideas
- * the development of a strong foundation for all other physical activities
