

scoop on history. Handcrafted by artisans in the Indian village Pratapgad, these polished brass forms revive a traditional style of cooking spoon from India's 16th-century Mughal Era. Historically, every dish in India is served with a specific ladle. Joined by a brass ring for wall display, this sculptural trio includes the smallest for ghee (clarified butter), the medium for curd (yogurt) and the largest for dal (lentils). For decorative use only.
