The housing works proves that for her in a 90% discount if she goes on a good day. She doesn't really need to thrift she thrifts because she wants to, because it's "in" and because she's bored at home. Lastly, this Upper Eastside woman can be any race e.g. Caucasian, African American, Persian, Hispanic, and Asian American.

Research Methodologies:

To come to conclusion on the target audience and demographics, we have interview the store manager of what kind of customers came in, observed which products were sold, and looked around the neighborhood to determine the demographic. Also, we have separately observed a section of the store and saw what kind of customers geared towards what product. From there we will separate the different demographics for apparel and furniture and determine the target audience. We also looked at the research that was done, the age, gender, income and education and it helped us understand our customer better.

Proposed Time Line:

Week 3: Go to the Market and Research the location of the store.

- Notice the gender
- Age
- What products the store has to offer
- Shopping habits.

Week 4: Finish up the research portion and get into the design proposal.

Week 5: continue working on the design Element

- Logo
- Cards
- Store Front
- Identity Package
- Market Incentive

Week 6: Continue working on the Design Element

Week 7: Finish the identity package and the incentives have that cleared and finalized by the ending of week 7.

plan in the store (including windows displays) location to make it appeal to that demographics .Next, using our marketing/promotional plan we will pave the way for the new Housing works thrift store to be known and recognized by the larger demographic. This will be done mainly through print ad, Social media and Housing work website. In the contemporary market our team finds it completely essential for a successful business to be on top of its image online as much as it is in person. Keeping tabs on social media such as Four-Square, where customers check-in and comment on a business's physical image and staff is vital. Our team plans to re-brand and re-design the Housing Work Upper East Side thrift in the Cyber world as well as in the actual world. Our team intents to set –up a fully functional thrift store with longevity and appeal in the market place.
