6 Yard Features Limestone is Ideal For

Available in various shades of brown and white, features built with limestone look rugged and experienced, like they stepped straight out of the past. But just because limestone looks natural doesn't mean it still can't hold up. Here are some of the best uses for limestone we've seen yet:

Walls – Limestone is excellent for walls of any height. Even smaller borders that surround gardens help protect from entry when made from limestone.

Patios – A patio made using limestone weathers the elements and stays firm for many years of lounging and get-togethers.

Stairs – No matter how often you need them, limestone stairs won't wear down. Different cuts of limestone rock can be used for stairwells of any size and length to fit your yard perfectly.

Fireplaces – A limestone fireplace retains heat and helps radiate it outward long after the timbers have cooled, and it provides an instantly recognizable and inviting focal point for your yard.

Fire pits and rings – For an easy place to gather with friends and toast some marshmallows, look no further than a cozy limestone fire pit.

Tables – No need to hide lawn furniture from the elements when limestone's got it covered - tables and other furniture made from limestone hold up in all kinds of weather.
