Caribbean rum has played an important role in the history of the Virgin Islands. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the production of Caneel Bay rum and sugar cane was at its peak, with most being shipped to Denmark and other European ports. In operation until 1885, the Caneel Bay Sugar Mill (now the Equator Restaurant) was one of many sugar and bay rum mills on the island of St. John. Since the 1950s Caneel Bay has become a world-renowned resort.

Please sample this taste of Caneel Bay with our compliments.
