A Mexican Volcano Expedition with Jeff Evans!

Mexico's volcanoes offer an exciting trip for individuals seeking the challenges of climbing at moderate altitude amidst an interesting cultural backdrop. It is an excellent objective for learning climbing skills, and gaining experience with climbing at altitude. Our schedule gives us the opportunity to attempt two of Mexico's grand volcanoes while embracing the wonderful Mexican interior culture. Orizaba is the third highest peak in North America, towering over Mexico City at 18,700 feet above sea level, and surrounded by small Indian villages. Iztaccihuatl (Ixta), known as The Sleeping Lady, offers interesting and varied climbing at an elevation of 17,373 ft. The special combination of good weather, spectacular climbing and views, and interesting culture make the volcanoes of Mexico a unique climbing destination.
