

Save the Children is an NGO that actively works to revitalize and promote awareness of improving the lives of children around the world. Similar to the work of Save the Children, the site of their new office located on Potsdamer Straße has recently been an area of major redevelopment projects turning it into a new bustling region of Berlin. Together the goals of Save the Children and the site formed the concept of active revitalization for the design of the new office space which is expressed through the connection of spaces and materials.
