

The term "Alliance" is used today to refer to those supporting the Space Force. Could this Alliance be between humans and non-humans, who are building ARVs for military and alien use? They provide technology. We manufacture replacement vehicles. They live below ground. We live above ground.

Charles Hall and the Tall White ETs

Charles Hall's Millennial Hospitality book series, describing his encounters with a race of human-like extraterrestrials – the “Tall Whites” (TW) - during a two year duty assignment at Nellis Air Force Base from 1965 to 1967, is a story with tremendous visual impact. Situated on Nevada's vast Desert National Wildlife Range, a scenic wilderness containing almost no artificial structures, the Nellis Ranges consist of almost nothing but breathtaking scenery.

This is the backdrop against which Hall's story plays out. Every event he describes can be said to consist of the same basic elements: the landscape, the weather, the people (humans and humanoids), the craft, sometimes the weather shacks... the occasional glimpse of a hangar door and, believe it or not, the TW children's playgrounds.

The story cries out for visuals of these elements. Yet it was not possible for Hall to provide us with anything other than his memories.

Visuals would have had value beyond the esthetic: they also would have demonstrated the feasibility of some of the things Hall describes. For example, he writes that he was able to view the Tall Whites' main hangar entrance high in the mountains 30 miles north of his Range 3 theodolite position on the desert floor. A photograph of that unlikely view would have helped to support the story.

Twenty years after his discharge from the Air Force, Hall began writing down his experiences, and after another twenty years, published them – at first presenting his books as works of fiction. Had he never reversed himself and begun claiming them to be true stories albeit slightly modified to protect the identities of some of the characters, there would have been no point in going back and trying to reconstruct the events as they took place on the ground.

When he was writing his stories, he did not know that it might be possible to reconstruct how they fitted into the landscape and in that way test the possibility of what he claimed to have viewed.

He did not know that high resolution elevation data and satellite imagery of the Nellis ranges would ever be made available to the public, or that software capable of rendering photorealistic images from the raw data would be widely available.

And yet, these things have come to pass, and this makes it possible to create realistic illustrations and even a video animation of at least one element of his story: the landscape in which it takes place.

I first began experimenting with the geological data, the satellite images, and landscape rendering software in late 2004, hoping to have a first look at “geometric feasibility” and to add interest to Hall's narrative.

The results were successful on both counts. In each instance, the views described by Hall turned out to be confirmed by the graphic renderings. And the images were pleasing and even dramatic to look at.

One unexpected benefit from this work has been the opportunity it has given Charles Hall to relive his old experiences through viewing these illustrations. Here is what he wrote in an e-mail after having been shown the report as a work-in-progress:

They are so impressive, I can hardly describe them. The memories they bring back to me I am not able to describe in this short email.

Indeed, working with these images has given me the feeling that I know the terrain well, and they can bring that closeness to you also.

But what of the other elements that we would like to have: weather, people, spacecrafts, and structures?

Here we are dependent on what Charles Hall remembers and is willing to help us recreate in terms of drawings and verbal descriptions. He has supplied two sketches of spacecraft shapes, and from this a graphic model has been developed. This is included in the report.

Weather and lighting conditions are amply described in his books where relevant, and it has been possible to recreate that aspect in the landscape renderings.

Hall also describes the weather shacks in some detail, and they do play a role in his experiences. I have elected not to take on the task of rendering architecture in the present report, however, as this would require significant additional effort, and it remains to be seen if there will be any interest in it.

[2012 note] In fact, there has been considerable interest in our page, which has probably been by far the most-read page in the zeitlin.net domain. However, we have had no requests for graphic renderings of buildings, and we are not currently in close working touch with Hall, which would be needed to pursue this effort.

On the other hand, were this to be undertaken today, Google Earth would probably provide the best approach, giving views of today's structures... unless these views were restricted. In fact, readers could use Google Earth at home to do it... one would think. For now, we'll leave it at that. [End 2012 note]

As to the rest, we can hope that this report itself will stimulate Hall's memories to the extent that he will be able to contribute more information that can be included in future updates.

Airman First Class Charles James Hall

Nellis Air Force Base with its associated "restricted ranges" occupies more than 5000 square miles of southern and central Nevada desert. Nellis is a vast military reservation, home of "top gun" flight training, exotic and leading-edge R&D projects. To the civilian airman, Nellis lies under restricted airspace, which makes it in effect a "no-fly zone". To the rest of us, it is a no-man's land, a blank spot on the map, a black hole out of which no information may come.

That is, no information is supposed to come, although fabulous stories have emerged over the years. Recently there has been a new one, told by a one-time air force weather observer whose assigned duty took him to a desolate outpost on the ranges of Indian Springs AF Auxiliary Field, ninety miles northwest of Nellis AFB proper, for extended periods between 1965 and 1967.

Note: Indian Springs AF Auxiliary Field was renamed "Creech AFB" on 20 June 2005. As most of the information contained on this page refers to activities prior to 2005, and the page itself was mostly written prior to that year, the name "Indian Springs" has been generally retained, but will be updated to "Creech" on an opportunity basis as appears advisable, and as the page itself is updated. See [Creech Air Force Base for further information.]

Today Charles James Hall is an information technology specialist, actively employed in Albuquerque, NM. In 1965-66, Airman First Class Charles Hall was Range Weather Observer for several gunnery ranges. There was nothing at all exotic about his official duty assignment, and that is what makes it possible for this story to be told today. Hall's job was to release and track weather balloons, measure the "winds aloft", and call in reports to Nellis. What was unique about his situation was that as he was performing his weather observing duties, he was almost continuously surrounded by a group of extraterrestrials observing him. Tall, white-skinned – Hall eventually dubbed them “the Tall Whites” - somewhat human-looking but clearly not of any known Earthly race of human, the beings would be found in his weather shacks, all over his equipment, even watching him shower in his (otherwise-deserted) barracks, coming and going with complete freedom.

This curious feature of his work was apparently never directly discussed with his superiors. Did they know? Of course they did, and they let Hall know that every person who had previously held that assignment had been seriously attacked or at least warned away on threat of death. Over a period of seven years, at least 41 weather observers had been compromised while trying to perform their duties on the Nellis ranges. Some had required hospitalization and were given medical discharges from the air force, and some had been killed. One of them actually deserted the air force and moved away from the area. His buddies covered for him until the day of his actual discharge, when he showed up to sign the papers.

On one occasion the beings even turned on Hall without warning, grievously wounding him in the neck, and leaving him to bleed his life away in the desert dust. In that desperate situation, alone and miles from any human help, Hall found a way to save his own life by using his body weight to press his wound against the soft earth, stemming the flow.

A comment by Dr. Michael Salla from his Prepare4Contact Yahoo Group (April 2, 2005):

The incident where he was shot and left to die by the tall whites who then watched him stage a miraculous recovery was very strange. The message here was "we have power over you and expect you to die but will applaud you if your tenacity and will to live allow you to pull through". Quite sinister really but Hall just accepts it all and continues his work after his close encounter with death. The whole incident and Hall's response is strange. Still Hall admits to being hypnotised by the tall whites so it might be expected that some of his recollections may have been programmed into him. So parts of his story may be how the Tall Whites want him and us to think about them.

Showing talent for being a survivor, Hall was eventually told he could have that lonely job on the ranges as long as he wanted, and was offered an officer track through the Air Force Academy and an eventual permanent assignment as Nellis Range commander (with time out for other career-enhancing assignments).

Hall's experiences were never classified but his orders were highly classified. The reason for this mysterious arrangement is novel and highly surprising. Hall's own explanation is provided under Correspondence in the sidebar at the right -- but it would be best to read the rest of this page before looking at that, because you will then be able to appreciate how it actually adds consistency to his story.

Hall's experience with the extraterrestrials at Nellis / Indian Springs is too long and complex to be told here. He has published the complete chronicle in his Millennial Hospitality quartet. Follow the link for access to excerpts at the publisher's website. Additional links to online pages containing research reports, a radio interview, and other material are provided in the sidebar at the right.

The first three books were presented as fiction, and Hall went to great lengths to fictionalize the locale as well as names of the characters, including his own. However in the fourth book of the series, and in current interviews, Hall now acknowledges that the events described in the books are otherwise factual.

To "decode" the story as told in the first three books, simply apply the following:

Salient Characteristics of the Tall White ETs

Hall has described these beings as tall - ranging upwards of 6-7 feet in height - and quite thin and frail. The skin color is chalk white. They are physically different from us in several noticeable ways, yet the most important physical aspect is that they are humanoid, a fact that is filled with significance.

Their life span is about ten times ours. They do not age as we do, but after around 400 earth years' time they undergo a second stage of growth, eventually reaching around nine feet in height. They die of organ failure at an age of approximately 800 years.

According to exobiologists, extraterrestrials are not supposed to resemble us, as they should have developed independently via natural selection with randomness and varying environments leading to innumerable "genetic" paths. On the other hand, some scientists speculate that there will be resemblances due to the universal utility of various aspects of the human form (i.e., what's good for us should be good for everyone).

Meanwhile, a number of encounters known in the "UFO" field are with entities that can look quite human - so much so that a deep connection simply has to exist. The present case is one of these. (See Appendix 2.)

The Tall Whites have a physical form similar to ours in all gross aspects. That is, they are upright bipedal vertebrates; they have human-like faces, etc. With suitable clothing, they can and do pass as humans during well-guarded forays into Las Vegas.

They have the faculty of speech, but some of their speech sounds are outside the audible spectrum for humans. In other words, we can't hear the sounds.

Normal speech sounds "like a dog barking or a meadowlark singing". However, some Tall Whites can mimic human speech and in fact carry on normal conversations with humans. Some have demonstrated an ability to imitate specific humans so well that the imitation cannot be detected when used over a telephone.

They also can use a device that projects speech so that it is heard by humans within their head. This works only over a short range (several feet) and requires the human to turn the head sideways to the Tall White.

The device is also a language translator. According to its settings from time to time, Hall was occasionally able to overhear Tall Whites conversing among themselves as though they were speaking English.

As stated, there was a pattern of confrontations with our personnel, in which panic led to injury and death of our soldiers. These beings are all well-armed, and they can and do kill, sometimes at the tiniest provocation. They react and move much more rapidly than humans can, so if they decide you have threatened them, you may be cut down and bleeding out without having even been warned.

Every Tall White adult carries a pencil-like weapon that can be set to stun, kill, immobilize, or "hypnotize" humans. It can also administer severe pain, and they frequently use it to discipline people who act in ways that annoy, frighten, or endanger them. The weapon's actions and effects are accomplished by varying the frequency of focused microwaves to interact with specific ions in the human body.

Although they can be friendly, they are at times arrogant and insulting. They appear to be sensitive to our social structures (i.e., classes), for example cultivating relations with high-ranking military officials, some of whom were often seen working with them, while holding lesser-ranking persons in disdain. Hall got along with them by letting them treat him as their "pet", a term they used in his presence.

In time, the term "Teacher's Pet" became Hall's code name that was respected among the ETs and the ranking military who were aware of his activities. He was selected by "both governments" to function as the point man in a pilot program to explore paths of cultural acclimatization between the tall whites and ourselves. Because of everyone's tendency to panic, and the ETs to strike with their weapons, Hall was awarded commendations for the rare bravery that he exhibited during this period.

The Tall White group at Nellis have family structures, not unlike our extended families. They often point out family members – uncles and cousins, etc., - who are living and working with them on the Nellis Base. They seem to care greatly for their children, who are growing up and being educated out there in the sagebrush.

They have what we would call serious issues over "control". They felt the need to control their pet, just as they observed us controlling ours.

In all our fantasies of extraterrestrial contact, we probably never imagined it would be like this. They are altogether too much like ourselves for our own comfort. Is that cause to doubt the authenticity of the story? Beware of that logic.

This aspect - that the Tall Whites deport themselves much as we would when establishing a small base with family quarters in the midst of a hostile land - deserves much more discussion. The point has natural interfaces with other pages in Open SETI and will connect to the Open SETI paradigm at several levels. This will be addressed over time. (See Open SETI At A Glance and also Search Engine Results for "paradigm".)

Origin of the Tall Whites

A ripple of emotion passed through the crowd when I mentioned the star Arcturus, some 36 light years away. After a short pause, the older lady asked with some surprise, "Teacher, does Charlie know where we come from?"

The Teacher replied, "No, not quite, but he is close."

When asked where they came from, they would usually evade the question by reminding him that he would not recognize the name of the place if he heard them speak it. This is disingenuous as they well knew that we had our own names for many celestial objects and they could use them as well as they could communicate anything else in English to Hall. Typically they would laugh among themselves (in their barking way) whenever they threw this response to Charles -- their little joke on him. Charles wisely refrained from protesting.

In fact, they treated such topics as being what we would call "sensitive". However, Hall, via the telepathic link they often established with him, was able to perceive that the star Arcturus or something close to Arcturus is very important to them.

Their ultimate home may be somewhere else. In recent correspondence, Hall stated:

I was never able to determine which star the tall whites called their home star. However, my best guess was a star that is roughly 105 light years away.

Hall's "best guess" was most likely an excellent guess, as he had been able to figure out their route transit times from very careful observations of the different craft and their schedules.

The date of their establishing the present Earth base location is ambiguous. Hall received mental imagery suggesting they knew the area prior to the arrival of European-Americans. Furthermore, one of them suggested she had arrived here during the administration of our President Madison. However the various bunkers and interior spaces that Hall observed looked as though they had been built for the Tall Whites by U.S. construction firms sometime in the 1950s.

Hall was led to believe that they use their Earth base as a sort of waystation along lengthy interstellar travel routes, as though this were the only intermediate station for them. As Hall puts it, our solar system lies in the middle of a large open space that the Tall Whites must traverse between their home location and a certain distant destination.

But a glance at a table of distances to the closest stars from our system puts that explanation in some question.

The Nearest Stars

distance (l.y.)	name
4.22	Proxima Centauri
4.35	Alpha Centauri
5.91	Barnard's Star
7.70	Wolf 359
8.20	BD+36.2147
8.40	L-726-8A
8.60	Sirius-A
8.60	Sirius-B
9.40	Ross 154
10.40	Ross 248
10.80	Epsilon Eridani
10.90	Ross 128
11.10	61 Cygni

Clearly, if their route begins at Arcturus, there are many alternative choices for a relatively nearby base. If their route begins some 105 light years from here, then there is a much greater choice of possible waypoints. This means that if it is even true that the Tall Whites must have a base to use on the way from their home location to somewhere beyond here, there still must either be something special about our solar system and the Earth, or other choices are denied to them.

One thing that could be special is the simple fact that they like the climate and environment of the Nevada desert and would not consider any other place in our solar system. Not even another place on the Earth, apparently. It is possible that they need conditions that rather precisely match those of their home, and we are in no position to guess how widespread or rare such may be. They may, for example, require some trace element in our atmosphere.

At this point it is worth mentioning that Michael Salla has been thinking about what the more hidden purposes or activities of the Tall Whites might be. Since we have at this time only the most tangential information bearing on the purposes of the Tall Whites, it is worthwhile for the reader in making his own evaluation to examine Dr. Salla's statements. His Comment #25 (see links in the sidebar) is particularly recommended.

At any rate, if Arcturus or something close to Arcturus may be significant in connection with the activities of the Tall Whites, it would be well to review a little basic information about this star.

Arcturus, the alpha star of the constellation Boötes, is the fourth brightest star in the sky. A spectral type K1 star, an orange giant, Arcturus has ceased fusing hydrogen in its core. With 1.5 times the mass of our Sun, it releases 215 times more radiation, a considerable portion of which is in the infrared.

Boötes is one of the oldest defined constellations, having been mentioned in Homer's The Odyssey. This constellation has figured in other contact cases.

The following image links to a 3-D view of the solar neighborhood out to 50 light years. You will find Arcturus near the top, well above the plane occupied by our sun. As you gaze at this lovely image, ask yourself: Our solar system is the only possible base on the way from Arcturus to WHERE?

Note that the map shows only the brightest 10% of the roughly 1400 star systems contained within this volume of space, but most of the fainter stars are red dwarfs. Every G-type star is shown.

The linked page also contains full catalog data on each star shown.

A study of this image merely reaffirms that the geometry of travel routes in this part of the Galaxy in no way makes our solar system a standout choice for a waypoint

The Tall Whites' base seems to have a core of permanent residents but also hosts transients, such as visiting scientists. While here, they study such human behaviors as are available for observation around Nellis.

Technology

The Tall Whites obviously possess highly-advanced technology. Hall confined his descriptions of their technology to brief discussions of their deep space craft, the scout craft used for travel near the earth's surface and around the solar system, a weapon that they always carried, and special suits that afforded them limited levitation and also a defensive force field.

Brief descriptions of the deep space and scout crafts are scattered throughout Millennial Hospitality. From those descriptions and some private communication with Charles Hall, simple details of the two types of craft have been provided in the following table and figure.

	Deep Space Craft	Scout Craft
Dimensions	500' L, 300' W, 70' H	Size of bus or RV
Color	Black (Titanium)	White
Cockpit	2 large centered 1/3 up from bottom	Wraparound
Windows
Portholes	4 rows each side	1 or 2 rows each side

Hall also was able to catch at least a glimpse of a scout ship's propulsion system, which appears to be based on “fiber optic coils” with a very large number of windings. From his observations of this system, Hall developed a physics theory that could describe its mode of operation.

The deep space ships were capable of faster-than-light travel, and could take the ETs to their home star system within two or three months' time.

The scout ships, surprisingly, were assembled here on Earth with components provided by humans for the ETs according to their specifications.

From an interview with Michael Salla:

In book two I describe the afternoon when The Teacher and Range Four Harry were showing me the inside of one of the scout craft. Many of the items, such as the seats and the overhead compartments, still carried the mold markings placed on them by various American industries such as Boeing aircraft and Lockheed corporation. The overhead compartments were obviously "off-the-shelf" items from companies such as Airstream corporation. Many of the clothing items that the tall whites were wearing were obviously purchased straight out of the Sears and Montgomery Wards Catalogs.⁵⁸

Yet these craft were capable of what appeared to be gravity-free and massless operations and could accelerate to superluminal speeds.⁵⁹ They were not as reliable in operation as the aliens would have wished.

Hall noted a very important limitation of the propulsion system used in these ships: its tendency to overheat, threatening the integrity of its fiber optic coils. The need to minimize active propulsion phases of interplanetary flights (i.e., earth approaches and cislunar flight paths; little is known relating to interstellar operations), leads the Tall Whites to make maximum use of ballistic trajectories, and this in turn enabled Hall to correctly deduce the times of scheduled earth arrivals and departures.

In his tour of the scout craft, Hall noticed two rows of touch-sensitive buttons just inside the door. Significantly, they bore cartouche-like symbols, Egyptian-style except with more pictorial elements in them than typical cartouches would have.

Hall notes that touch-sensitive buttons were just beginning to appear in human-made systems at that time.

And incidentally, the scout craft buttons were not the only example of hieroglyphs or cartouches encountered by Hall. He describes having found a hangar door open one day, with no one guarding, so he took the opportunity to go a short distance inside. He found the walls to be covered with cartouches, oddly colored pink against a white background.

Information about Tall White technology is scattered throughout the Millennial Hospitality series. An ongoing program of technology transfer is described in MH III and in the Karmapolis interview (use link at right).

For more information about their technology, please refer to the published books and to material available at various websites (see links at right).

Where Was/Is the Base at Nellis?

It has been possible to reconstruct views of the locations of Tall Whites' operations and facilities according to Charles Hall's recollection. Although readers will not be able to verify this information on the ground, it still seems useful to go through this exercise in hopes that it may aid in the overall evaluation of the case and the situation, to say nothing of enhancing the sense of place in a way that text alone cannot provide.

To set the scene, and for basic reference, we present two topographic maps of the area showing land use and topographic features. The gunnery and bombing ranges (not shown on these maps) are located at the southern end of Indian Spring Valley and the next valley to the east, between the Pintwater and Desert mountain ranges, known as "Three Lakes Valley".

Relief view of area encompassing Tall White activities

Hall is aware of at least seven entrances concealed in the mountain canyons. The main entrance to housing is through the hangar on the east side of the mountain range, top right in the above chart.

Notice the three gunnery and bombing ranges located just north of the Indian Springs area. Hall made use of “weather shacks” located on each range. The position of the theodolite at the Range Three weather shack is shown. Hall writes (personal communication):

The tall whites had at least 5 areas of interest visible from the Range Three theodolite stand.

These five areas included:

- 1) The main base and its deep space craft hangar located northwest of Dog Bone Lake. It had an associated children's playground...

Arriving deep space craft were observed to first hover or land at Dog Bone Lake near the upper end of Three Lakes Valley, then to proceed northwest to the hangar entrance, which is built into a mountainside. Arrivals always occurred at sundown, full moon.

Sun-Earth-Moon configuration for approach of deep space craft. This is a rough two-dimensional representation. Sizes and distances are not to scale. Hall observed that arrivals always occurred at sundown on full moon days.

Hall believes that this configuration, with the sun on one side of the earth and the moon on the other, and the earth moving away from the approaching craft, provided the “smoothest” gravitational field through which the craft needed to maneuver. This might have been an oversimplified explanation, yet clearly, with the crafts' propulsion units' tendency to overheat, the Tall Whites were not free to choose any arbitrary entry into the earth-moon system. They needed a path that minimized the required use of the propulsion system. It is also possible that the craft were hand-navigated on the approaches and that this factor played a role.

Deep space craft departures took place at midnight at the time of the new moon.

Configuration for deep space craft departures. Not to scale. Hall observed that departures to deep space always occurred at midnight at the time of the new moon.

Arriving deep space craft proceed northwest, along the line of sight viewed in this image, from Dog Bone Lake to this peak. The hangar, which is also the main entrance to the Tall Whites' underground housing, is built into the top of the peak; its entrance is just below the top, facing south, approximately where a patch of sunlight from the setting sun can be seen. Approaches are made at sundown on full moon evenings

2) The main underground alien housing area with its tunnel entrances and associated childrens' playground...

Let's stop and investigate how much of this main northern facility can be seen with Hall's theodolite, positioned as it is, some 30 miles to the south.

There are two considerations: does the terrain profile permit this view, and what would be the effect of the telescope's optics and magnification?

Addressing the first question, the next image shows the viewing path from the theodolite up the valley. Clearly the valley is relatively flat and the high terrain in the distance would seem to be unobstructed.

3D view of terrain looking from theodolite position toward the facilities thirty miles north at the north end of the valley. Dog Bone Lake is in valley to the right (east).

The next image is a landscape render of the ground-level view from the theodolite stand, showing that much of the high terrain to the north is indeed visible.

Ground-level (elevation 2 m) view from the theodolite position toward the high ground at the north end of Indian Spring Valley. In other words, this is the view along the green dotted line in the previous image. The peak containing the main hangar and housing is faintly seen on the distant skyline to the right of center. This image provides no information on land use (roads, etc.).

[The above image] is so well done, I found myself reliving some of those beautiful afternoons when I took my truck for a joy ride up the valley.

When you look at the center of the picture , and then a little to the right, right down on the desert where the desert floor meets the base of the distant mountains, just behind the near set of hills and just far enough to the right so that the near set of hills does not block the view of the more distant mountains, there is a small valley. It was in that valley that the Tall Whites would typically post a scout craft to parallel me and watch me from a distance whenever I would take my truck up the valley for a joy-ride... as I describe in Book II, in the chapter entitled "Day with a view".

We will return to this point later. This watching of Hall on his trips north could have been for his protection, as at one point he had a nearly disastrous encounter with a government security patrol on one of these excursions.

As to the effect of the telescope's optics and magnification:

Deep space craft hangar and underground housing area as seen from range 3 theodolite position through typical theodolite scope with 1.5° field of view. Distance is about 30.5 miles. "I was shocked by the accuracy of [this image], the view through the theodolite. On many, many summer mornings, those mountains looked just that way through my theodolite."

Similar to previous figure but “taken” just before sunset. Hall mentioned that his ability to see the hangar and picnic area on this mountain was best just before sunset, as here, and just after sunrise. Nevertheless 30 miles of obliquely-illuminated haze does seem to be causing a problem with seeing in this rendition.

The peak containing the hangar, viewed along the line of sight from the Range 3 theodolite (which was Hall's usual viewing position), but only 4.2 km from the peak. The time is just before sunset. The blue/white star marks the position of the hangar entrance. The red/white star designates the location of a picnic area (!) which is what first caught Hall's attention. The hangar door was hidden among the trees and was hard to spot (through the theodolite from 30 miles away) when closed. Note: the landscape renderings on this page do not actually depict trees.

Approach from Dog Bone Lake to Hangar

Suggestive rendition of departure of a scoutcraft from an important landing area northwest of the main housing area which is under the mountains. (The craft is a 3D workup of a crude sketch given to us by Hall.) View is toward the southeast at dawn, the time of day when Hall observed scoutcraft departing with military guests for visits to the moon, which would be directly overhead. Canyons in these mountains contain at least seven concealed tunnel entrances - back doors to the underground housing.

3) Their favorite scout craft hangar and underground rest area located in the arroyo just northwest of the dry lake bed on which sat the old Range Four. It had an associated childrens' play ground....

This facility can be located at the very top of the following image.

We'd like to call your attention at this point to an excellent study by "Majestic" at "Project Maji" that appears to identify at least one current ground structure in this area. See [Possible Tall White Alien Facilities Located.

On June 13, 2013, David Hilton (once "Majestic" as seen above), wrote to us and informed us of his more recent work since 2010 on these and more structures.

Ever wonder what would happen if you trained the new enhanced Google Earth on this Nellis Range and took the results to the authorities for their comment?

Hilton did exactly that. Watch his YouTube videos as he tries to explain his interest in bighorn sheep and wildlife guzzlers:

- Evidence for the Tall White Aliens
- Tall White Alien Rest Areas Revealed
- Evidence for the Tall White Aliens - Part 2

Even Charles Hall now admits to a resemblance between the Tall Whites and bighorn sheep: a certain look in the eye.

How the mighty have fallen!

But this is not the first time! Anything but! If you will permit what appears as a bit of digression, here from our Ages of Uraš site is a quote from Anton Parks:

In the course of your reading, especially in Ádam Geniš, you will learn that the Celestial Bestiary that fell on the Earth had the sorry tendency to assimilate the Earth ancestors to animals, in fact, to small livestock, more precisely sheep! This concept may seem strange, but it was widespread in the past.

But what about those horns, you ask? Yes. Well, from Parks again:

Take the simple example of ancient Egypt where the sheep were called Undu (or Undju)... and... UN-DU7 = horned rabble.

Can you see where this is leading?

Can you guess why Charles Hall was not their favorite character and one of them danced around his body when she thought she had killed him (MH III)?

The specific references from Parks are found in The Meaning of Religions.]

Back now to our story.

Notice the "Scoutcraft Parking" area in the middle of the above image. This was a sheltered area in which Hall often saw a scout craft "parked" when he drove by, headed north. The next image shows the situation a bit more clearly.

The road running north-south (note the compass rose) at the foot of the hills was used by Hall on his excursions to the northern end of Indian Springs Valley. He often would see a scout craft parked in the little valley to his right, in the center of the picture, observing him as he passed by. The craft would then follow or “parallel” Hall’s truck from a distance

A closer overhead view of the favorite Tall White rest and play area. An anomalous white object or spot can be seen at left center (i.e., over rough terrain to the west). Parallax studies indicate that this object is on the ground.

It sure brings back the memories. However, there is an additional arroyo that [this figure] does not show because of the resolution. It runs through the center of the valley." This image was prepared from 1/3 arcsecond-resolution elevation data.

4) Two other scout craft hangars and underground rest areas with associated childrens' play areas located in the lower mountains in the northern parts of the Indian Springs valley. These two are not otherwise described in my current books and writings. One of them appeared to include additional food storage and processing facilities but I'm not certain of the details.

In an e-mail to Dr. Richard Boylan, Charles Hall stated, "In the 1965-1967 time frame, I personally and frequently observed on many separate occasions the tall white scout craft and the tall whites entering and leaving the valley just below French Peak. Several of the range maintenance men at that time informed me that the tall whites had at least a scout craft base dug in toward the top of French Peak."⁵⁸

He also writes (in other correspondence):

I'm not certain where the scout scraft hanger on French Peak is located. However, my friends reported seeing the Tall Whites gathering grass seeds and other seeds in the fall, on the mountains that I have circled in red.

Sometimes, I also saw scout craft in the valleys below that area.

Several of the other scout craft hangers in the northern end of the Indian Springs valley were hidden down in narrow east/west valleys with steep sides. For these reasons, I, myself, would look for the scout craft hanger inside of the red ellipse as well.

French Peak. Text describes Tall White activities in the area enclosed by the ellipse and the broad valley to the north.

In addition, the map shows the entrances to the Indian Springs valley on the west (in yellow, etc.) which the tall whites liked to use when they were traveling between Indian Springs Valley and the valleys that lead up to French Peak. They used these corridors sometimes on a daily basis.

Remember these corridors allowed them to safely travel from place to place without showing up on the FAA radar screens. I'm certain they terrain-followed these corridors up to the base of French Peak.

As Hall has explained, while their presence at Nellis was sanctioned at high levels, the Tall Whites maintained a very low profile, and tried to avoid unnecessary radar detections of their craft when operating in the ranges. Hall describes "radar evasion corridors" used by the Tall Whites' scout craft transitioning between the lower Indian Springs Valley (near Range 3) and the area south of French Peak.

View west into "radar evasion corridors" used by the scout craft. This is as they would be seen from an elevated position near Range 3... in other words, a "pilot's eye" view of the parallel ridges. Craft would "terrain follow" just north of these ridges below the ridgeline to avoid detection by radar on Charleston Peak, well to the south.

The next image shows the configuration of Charleston Peak, the theodolite positions for ranges 1 and 3, and the radar evasion corridors.

The radar station of concern to the Tall Whites is installed on Charleston Peak, a recreational area to the south of the ranges. The ski area, seen as a small white blotch at the tip of the labeling arrow, plays a crucial role in the Christmas Eve emergency arrival of a deep space craft, to be described below.

Radar evasion corridors as seen from just over Charleston Peak where radar is located. Scout craft would “terrain follow” behind the low ridges seen in the distant haze, beyond the foreground ridge and to the right of center. “I was equally impressed by this figure. It clearly shows why the Tall Whites preferred to terrain-follow close to the desert and hide in the radar corridors.”

Some of my friends who were range maintenance men said they had observed the tall white scout craft continuing on up the sides of French Peak to another scout craft hangar entrance up towards the top.

Christmas Eve Emergency Arrival of a Deep Space Craft

An important episode in Hall's story dealt with his role in facilitating the arrival of a severely damaged Tall White craft from deep interstellar space.

From the evidence, it appears the problem with the arriving craft had been known by the local Tall Whites and by our military for at least two months.

As in so many of his encounters at Nellis, the landscape itself played a significant part. Hall's actions took place at Ranges 1 and 3, while the craft itself made its initial arrival at a ski development on Charleston Peak, which became a base for the operation, after being evacuated for this purpose.

The last two figures in the previous section, shown in connection with the “radar evasion corridors”, along with the figures in this section, demonstrate the geometry of the landscape underlying this event, and show what can be seen from each of the ranges.

Children of the Tall Whites

Notice the reference to playgrounds at virtually every Tall White facility. In fact, Hall's weather shacks were playgrounds for the Tall Whites' children. He especially endeared himself to them by leaving his theodolite open and allowing the children to look through it whenever they wished.

In one of his radio interviews, Hall mentions that "The Teacher's" constant refrain was "We love our children more than you do," and in fact if you know what's good for you, you will open every conversation with a Tall White female by saying "I know you love your children more than we love ours."

In his interview with Salla, Hall mentions:

One of the big items [supplied to the Tall Whites by the US military] was children's clothing. In the mid 1960s, on at least one occasion, the USAF purchased more than $600,000 [1965 dollars, as one of Salla's readers points out!] worth of children's clothing from the Sears stores and warehouse in Los Angeles, California, picked it up in government trucks, and shipped it to Indian Springs Auxiliary Field, Nevada. The trucks delivered the clothing to the main Tall White base at the north end of Indian Springs Valley.

Let's do a bit of arithmetic. A children's "outfit" today might sell for around \$75. That might be equivalent to, say, \$15 in 1965. Very roughly, the shipment then might have contained some 40,000 "outfits". A child might have required, say, three outfits for their wardrobe at one time. But our children outgrow their clothing. So would those of the Tall Whites. Furthermore, since the TWs in general live ten times as long as we do, their childhood years might also run ten times ours. Therefore if an Earth child, outgrowing clothing from time to time, might go through or wear out some five sets of clothes, then each Tall White child ultimately speaks for $3 \times 5 \times 10 = 150$ outfits. That means the order would have equipped some 250-300 children with their clothing needs.

It would be useful to determine how many children were present in the colony. If there were significantly fewer than 250 children, this would suggest that some of the clothing was for use elsewhere - either elsewhere on the planet or off.

In a letter linked under "Correspondence" at the right, Hall indicates that the number of children present may have fluctuated greatly over time, but could have occasionally exceeded 200.

Since there was considerable flux into and out of the colony, children could have been taking their "Earth outfits" with them when they left.

To further help understand why there had been a single large purchase, I asked Hall if the body build or anything else about the TW children would have required special tooling on the part of the manufacturer. That could have helped to explain the large size of the order, as the manufacturer would have needed a large order to cover the retooling cost. Here is Hall's reply:

As regards the children's clothes question, remember that Sears made and marketed children's clothes in every conceivable size and variation. The TW children were the same size as human children of the same height who are simply on the thin side.

Clothes for the TW children did not have to be specially made.

Remember also that the TW mothers also make and alter clothes for their children, just as human mothers do. One night, in an episode that does not appear in my books for various reasons, The Teacher came with her little girl. Her little girl was wearing a simple frill [flounce] around the waist of her suit similar to the type of frill that little girls typically wear on their bathing suits.

The Teacher proudly informed me that she had added the frill (meaning that she had personally constructed the frill and added it to the suit - sewing, etc.) because she wanted her little girl to feel like a littl girl.

The Teacher occasionally expressed concern because all of her little girl's TW playmates her age were boys.

She stated, for example, that one reason she liked to have her little girl play with the little girl described in Book one in the Chapter entitled "In Remembrance Of ME" was because she wanted her little girl to have playmates who were also little girls. The TW little girl and the human little girl were so very similar in personality. They were both simply "little girls", even down to the clothes they both enjoyed wearing.

It must be said: perhaps the TWs had good reason for doubting how much we love our children. Consider what they might have observed of our everyday life down there around the base and in Las Vegas.

To which I might add that the story, The Wayward Wind, reproduced on Paola Harris' page, shows how the TWs were overwhelmingly impressed by Hall's letter to his father, expressing love for him.

This little note to Hall's father was so very important to the TWs that - who knows? - it might have affected our relations with them then and into the future.

Several notable points come to mind here:

- They sew. We apparently share a sense of fashion with them.

- Where are all the little Tall White girls? Little TW girls must exist somewhere because TW adult females are present in the colony. Why did they not come here?
- They evidence "love" among their own kind; little for us. But then, where have we shown anything resembling love for them?

Tall Whites vs. Gods, Genes, and Consciousness

Author Paul Von Ward presents in his book Gods, Genes, and Consciousness (Von Ward, 2004) a schema for "Advanced Beings" into which the Tall Whites could be placed as an interesting possible example. Although their technology is quite beyond ours at this time, evidence suggests that by other and less tangible measures - "wisdom", "intelligence", "moral stature" - these beings might be quite comparable to ourselves.

Conclusion

This report never seriously questioned the authenticity of Charles Hall's contact with a colony of "Tall White" extraterrestrials on the Nellis Range. The reason for that is the generally convincing nature of Hall's reporting, however subjective that assessment may be. If a "scientific study" is required, others may conduct one.

This editorial stance is consistent with the position taken throughout this Open SETI Initiative website, in which I assert that "contact with ET" or even "searching for ET" should never have been left in the hands of the scientific establishment in the first place. It is unlike anything that science normally does; it is more a matter of intelligence gathering, which is probably the way the most productive work in this area has been accomplished.

This report is exactly what it claims to be: an illustrated adjunct to Hall's narratives.

Nevertheless, if in the process of preparing this report, I had encountered issues or contradictions calling Hall's story into serious question, then certainly those problems would have had to be resolved before the report could be completed and published – at least in its present form.

Nothing of the kind has happened.

The next question is to consider where that leaves us. There was, as recently as the 1960s, a well-established and possibly very old colony of extraterrestrial humanoids living on the Nellis Range, and at that time the arrangement appeared to be secure for long into the future. Furthermore the relations of the colony with its present hosts – the U.S. Military and government – were congenial; technology transfer was taking place and larger cooperative programs (which seemed benign to all parties, by the way) were contemplated.

Hall believes that the arrangement continues to this day, although he has had no contact with it since leaving active duty.

The parameters of the contact activity or colony are such that it would have zero impact on our society, other than the filtering down of anything resulting from technology transfer. It seems to have been physically confined to the military reservation, although there are troubling aspects, such as what is being done with all of the scout craft based there. Where are they going and what are they doing?

Hall's books and interviews have been available to the public for several years, and have made no impact whatsoever outside of a community of interested cognoscenti. Certainly this report will not materially change the situation.

One would think, given the general lack of interest in this sort of thing on the part of average citizens, that nothing whatsoever is called for in the way of a response to these reports.

On the other hand, even with no more information than we have available through Hall's books, the research value of the details reported by Hall are immense... immeasurable. The mere knowledge that beings from such distant points of origin can so closely resemble us is enough to cause a revolution in our life sciences, particularly biochemistry and genetics. That is, it would be enough if correctly used.

Consider also the implication of the close cultural correspondences, such as the ability of these beings to recognize and work with our social hierarchy. "Take me to your leader", indeed.

The parallels with our own culture are... either breathtaking or damning, depending on whether one believes they can possibly be true.

This... familiarity of their cultural (and physical) styles is actually one of the largest challenges to the story, because so very much rides on it.

My position is that it is true and we would do very well to begin to try understanding what it means.

Epilog: A Possible Identity for the Tall Whites

Who are the Tall Whites?

What do we mean by that question?

We mean: what group of beings, about whom we may have independent knowledge, might the Tall Whites be?

In fact, there is a candidate group. In our report on the work of French writer Anton Parks, The Ages of Uraš, we describe a number of nonhuman races that seem to have shaped our history and genetics, and are possibly influencing or manipulating human society even today. One of these, the Imdugud, known to the Babylonians as Anzu, actually are native to our solar system. They are not the famous "Anunnaki." In fact they long ago lost a war against the Anunnaki for the mastery of this system.

Among the interesting matching characteristics of the Tall Whites and the Imdugud:

1. Very tall humanoid "Nordic" with white skin
2. Often have blue eyes
3. Emit barking or whistling sounds
4. Solitary

5. Warriors/soldiers

Parks adds in private communication that the Imdugud are among the very few that practice natural childbirth and raise families. (Most use genetics and cloning, and take advantage of very long or indefinitely long life spans. In other words, they are immortal.)

Yet there are contradictions, perhaps the most noteworthy being their apparent home base. Although the Tall Whites would never reveal this information to Charles Hall, they allowed him to believe it was not local, and via circumstantial data Hall has placed their home tentatively at the star Arcturus. However, it is also possible that Arcturus is simply another base -- a "second home."

Parks "remembers" that as of three or four thousand years ago, our solar system was their home base. Although they could always travel out, it was not their preoccupation to do so.

We will be tracking this new development. Meanwhile, interested readers should look at Possible Extended Contact with Imdugud, or find mention of Imdugud(Anzu) in the section on Races.

'Tall Whites' Living Among Us in Nevada Under Military Cover

When aliens or UFO's are mentioned, some people say it's just a hoax or somebody's "imagination gone south." Others when they hear the "magic words" just shut off the television, reserving judgment for the next time they belly up to the bar. Still others, deep down inside, believe they exist, but don't have the courage to admit it publicly.

And, finally, there are those true believers, those who have seen the light and have personally made contact. Charles Hall of Albuquerque, NM, says he is one of those true believers.

The following is his story.

Some stand more than 8 feet tall, run 40 mph, and live 800 years. They speak like a dog barking or a bird chirping, write similar to Egyptian hieroglyphics, and have learned English quite easily. They have large blue eyes that wrap part way around their heads, small noses, and tiny ears pressed tight to their scalps. Their thumbs are small with four long slender fingers and two claw-like appendages instead of fingernails.

They all have thin, straight blond hair, usually worn short and the women can be distinguished by a feminine-looking shortcut. Their hips are shaped like ours, but they walk quite differently since they are used to a stronger gravity pull. They typically can be seen wearing aluminized chalk white jumpsuits resembling a canvas-like fabric with gloves of the same material and an open white motorcycle helmet.

What's unusual is the suit emits a three-inch field of white fluorescent light, the intensity varying from soft to bright, a brightness that can actually hurt the human eye.

They are extremely intelligent and process information speed several times faster than humans. However, secretly they fear our intuitive ability and extra-sensory perceptions. They have individual talents, differing intellectual capabilities, and physical traits, a race definitely not carved from a cookie-cutter. Some are teachers, some are pilots, some are workers and some are leaders. When bored, they like to go star gazing on hot summer nights, take weekend trips to the strip in Las Vegas, or visit the Lincoln Monument in Washington D.C.

They like to recreate and procreate and their children, considerably shorter in size, are fun-loving, energetic, and inquisitive. The children enjoy hide and seek but they also like to play catch with soft objects since their bodies are frail, bruising easily. Mothers are highly devoted to their children to the “Nth” degree, existing solely for the purpose of meeting the needs of their offspring. They believe in a “tit for tat” system, believe their word is their bond, and place special importance on honoring agreements, especially verbal or written.

However, it is unknown whether they believe in God per se or form religions to advance their beliefs.

Although they are highly individualistic, one similar characteristic is they all have white chalky complexions - very white chalky complexions. For this reason, they have been called the Tall Whites. And for this reason, most people think they are nothing but fictional characters conjured up from a past Star Trek episode.

But the Tall Whites are more than just fiction, says Charles Hall, an educated man with a master’s in nuclear physics and former weather observer for the United States Air Force.

According to Hall, who claims to have communicated with the Tall Whites, they are very real, very complex, and very much a part of the community living at Nellis Air Force Base, a highly secretive 5,000 square mile “no-fly zone” military compound in the southern and central Nevada desert.

Nellis is so secret, so secluded, so guarded by military police, according to Hall, an attempt to enter, an attempt to locate the Tall Whites, who live under the sand dunes in concrete and steel bunkers, would be like committing suicide.

“You can’t go hunting for them or approach them. They have to come to you and the children are especially curious by nature,” said Hall from his home in Albuquerque, NM., saying he hasn’t attempted contacting the Tall Whites since his tour of duty ended in the Air Force in 1967 when he left to serve in Vietnam.

“It was a traumatic experience being isolated in the desert, alone with someone so different and obviously more advanced than us.

“At first I thought I was going insane. But I learned over time how to communicate, how to approach them and to never try and force them to do anything. Their nervous systems operate very quickly and they are very protective, very suspicious of our intentions.”

Asked why he never returned to Nellis, he simply said:

“I just don’t feel the need to go back. If you went through what I did, as I have meticulously recorded in my three books, you probably wouldn’t want to go back either as it was at times frightening and emotionally draining.”

Hall’s “out of this world” recollections are not the product of an overactive imagination or drug-induced hallucinations, but from personal experiences and actual face-to-face contacts with the Tall Whites while stationed at Nellis from 1965-1967.

He claims to have spent two years interacting with this alien race countless numbers of times, but only recently went public with his “earth-shattering” statements in a set of three books entitled Millennial Hospitality.

“I just decided to wait for all these to not jeopardize the well-being of my children while they were in school,” said Hall, adding the accounts in his books are true with only names and places changed to protect the innocent.

“Along the way, I confided with my wife and friends, but now that the children are on their own and grown up, I’ve decided to tell my story to the public.”

He says the facts in his book are just the tip of the iceberg in what just may turn out to be one of the most detailed, most convincing, and most sought-after alien stories of all time.

“Just read my books and you’ll see what I mean,” added Hall, referring to the time they wanted to impress him with their technology superiority by having him throw a rock and then stopping it in mid-air. “They also can suspend bullets or other faster-moving objects.”

Academic Heavyweight Lends Support

Not only is Hall convinced about the Tall Whites alien origin and their exceptional powers, but so is academic heavyweight Michael Salla, a doctor of political science and former head of a Washington think-tank after extensively interviewing Hall in 2004.

What is even more astounding is that Salla has put his otherwise impeccable reputation as a political researcher and thinker on the line, to stray off an “earthly path” for the first time in his career.

Salla has held academic appointments in the School of International Service, American University, Washington, D.C., and the Department of Political Science, Australian National University, Canberra, Australia. He also has taught as an adjunct faculty member at George Washington University.

He is the author of The Hero's Journey Toward a Second America Century and Why the Cold War Ended, as well as Essays on Peace.

“I have never before researched the UFO phenomena, but after talking to Charles I am a believer,” said Salla on recent radio interview.

Salla's in depth discussions were revealing, giving Hall's previous books and writings third party independent credibility instead of just biased approval from UFO groupies.

Besides the obvious questions concerning alien quirks, characteristics and intentions, Salla centered on the cooperation and agreements supposedly entered into by the Tall Whites with the U.S. government through military liaisons at Nellis Air Force Base.

“I found Charles Hall to be very credible and compelling in his response to questions. He displays great integrity and is quite sincere in describing solely the facts concerning his experiences,” said Salla, who never before delved into UFO stories but has admitted he has come to be a believer.

“The emotions that Charles objectively described in great detail conveyed the extent which what he was experiencing shook his world view and the views of those around him.”

Government Agreements with the Tall Whites

However, the relationship between the Tall Whites and our government, explained by Hall, is mind boggling, shocking, revolting and seemingly impossible in a democratic society. But Hall insists these agreements exist, insisting the Tall Whites have been exchanging technology for earthly resources since the early 1950s and maybe even sooner.

Hall recalls in one of his books that in the late 1960s the military provided over $600,000 in clothing from Sears, having seen the shipment being hauled with military trucks into the desert compound where the Tall Whites lived. He also recalls the military providing food, aluminum, titanium and other commodities, perhaps used for interstellar trading as the Tall White’s roam the universe, contacting other civilizations.

In his interview, Salla ventures to guess what has transpired since the 1960s and whether the military has been involved in more sinister deals and agreements without public disclosure.

Regarding nondisclosure, Salla effectively argues that the military may be compromising America’s resources and its future survival by not allowing a public debate on issues concerning the welfare of its own people concerning issues involving trade agreements with the Tall Whites.

“The American people have a right to know and the knowledge Charles brings regarding the Tall White’s interaction with the U.S. Air Force generals is very enlightening in terms of the way agreements were followed to the letter,” he said.

“It appears that the Tall Whites are quite legalistic and this seems to be something that the U.S. military finds to be helpful in working with them. According to Charles, the Tall Whites were quite clear that only certain categories of technology would be shared, categories that presumably would not give the U.S. military deep space capability. They apparently pride themselves in being trustworthy and expect the same in return. A broken promise to a Tall White is the worst kind of evil and dealt with very harshly.”

Hall also emphasizes the Tall Whites have no ulterior designs regarding Earth in terms of colonizing it or taking over governments with their obvious advanced technology.

However, in his books he details how the Tall Whites would threaten to kill humans who disobeyed or scared them. Hall cites one frightening incident where an American general allowed a serviceman to be killed by a Tall White after one of their children was threatened.

“I think the American military felt the servicemen were expendable and of little importance in comparison with keeping the Tall Whites satisfied,” said Hall.

Other Unique Characteristics of Tall Whites

As previously mentioned, the Tall Whites can grow to be over 7 feet tall. However, most adults in the first half of their lives usually range in size from 5’10 to 6’5”.

“Their life span is ten times greater than ours,” said Hall, adding that it takes them 10 times longer to heal, too.

“They do not age as we do, but at about 400 earth years, they undergo a second stage of growth, eventually reaching about 8 feet tall. They then die of organ failure at an age of approximately 800 years. Since on their planet, days are longer so are their sleeping patterns, usually staying awake for two earth days and then followed by sleeping the same amount of time.”

“Although they can be quite friendly, they are at times arrogant and insulting. But they appear sensitive and understanding to our social structures and have cultivated relationships with high-ranking military officials, some of who have worked side by side with the Tall Whites. They held lesser ranking persons with disdain and I got along with them by letting them treat me as their pets.”

Asked what the Tall Whites thought was unique about humans, he said.

“They couldn’t get over how we interacted with animals. They commented several times that we were the only life form they met that kept animals as pets. They appeared to be extremely frightened of our animals and couldn’t figure out why we would interact with something so potentially deadly.”

Where Are They From?

Hall said he learned very little about the origin of the Tall Whites during his two-year encounter.

“They really shared very little about their history and origins,” recalls Hall.

However, one incident took place with a Tall White he called “the Teacher” which revealed they may have come from near the star Arcturus about 36 light years away.

In a passage from one of his books, he said:

“A ripple of emotion passed through the crowd when I mentioned the star Arcturus. After a short pause, the older lady asked with some surprise, ‘Teacher, does Charlie know where we come from?’

“The Teacher replied: ‘No, not quite, but he’s close.’”

Hall believes the reason they are here is that Earth provides a perfect way station for the Tall Whites in their interstellar travel routes.

Nellis Air Force Base provides a perfect location since the remoteness of the desert provides excellent cover for takeoffs and landings.

“They arrive with new replacements on one of their larger spaceships every month at the time of the full moon,” said Hall. “I’ve seen the ship arrive and have gotten as close as the outside entrance of the hangar but never inside.”

How do they travel?

Hall witnessed three different types of spacecraft, ranging in size from a small nuclear-powered scout craft and a large interstellar craft able to travel faster than the speed of light. This large black craft was approximately 70 feet high and 360 feet long. Hall said the technology of the small craft was shared with the military, but the large craft remains a mystery.

Regarding their hangar and living facilities, he added,

“I was able to observe the repair facilities from a short distance and to the best of my knowledge I am the only person to have been allowed to view these facilities.

“The American generals would do anything to maintain good relations with the Tall Whites in order to get their technology,” said Hall, who maintains he saw them together many times and even sat together across negotiating tables.

“The exchange was done on the basis of what would benefit the Tall Whites and they sometimes participated in classified meetings, helping with technology development.”

What do they eat?

Hall said the military definitely supplied the Tall Whites with any type of food requested but noticed them carrying prepared bags of what looked like mushroom pudding.

“I saw them once inspecting the food storage rooms in Indian Springs chow hall,” he said. “And once I saw a couple of them in a Las Vegas restaurant with a full meal but they didn’t touch their plates before leaving the restaurant.”

Hall surmised they were plant eaters, as he noticed them collecting seeds on various occasions.

“They are not meat eaters. That I know for sure,” he added. “The food that I saw packaged and sealed in plastic bags on the scout craft, looked like mushroom pudding. I was told by one of them it was prepared primarily for the children or for when they were out in the desert hiking.

“I was also told it wasn’t a good idea to eat their food as it would have adverse effects on my body. It was my understanding that eating those foods made a person feel very high and somewhat similar to drinking large amounts of liquor.”

Have Others Seen Them?

More than seven years prior to Hall’s arrival at Nellis, log books showed 41 weather observers had been compromised while trying to perform their duties in the Nellis ranges. Some required medical attention, others were given medical discharges from the Air Force and some were killed.

In fact, the weather observer who preceded Hall deserted his duties and moved away from the area. So how did Hall survive when others before him didn’t?

He attributes this to his ability to understand their habits and essentially being adopted by one of the Tall Whites called the Teacher, who seemed to take a special interest and liking to him.

Although he was never able to take photos, he said a New Jersey housewife traveling through Nevada had acquired a number of authentic-looking photos which she included in a paperback book published on the Tall Whites.

Even though this would have provided third-party corroboration, he was unable to recall the name of the lady or the title of the book.

“It always has upset me that I couldn’t remember her name, but I know the Tall Whites were viewed by many other servicemen on the range. I think someone there must have given her the photos,” said Hall.

Did President Harry Truman See Them?

Encountering Tall White’s at close range was such a shock to the servicemen at Nellis, frequently the sightings were reported as ghosts, angels or other types of fantastic creatures.

Official accounts also revealed that President Truman in the late 1940s thought he encountered ghosts in the White House usually before retiring to bed.

The reports go on to say he thought he was mistakenly seeing the ghost of President Lincoln, telling White House employees of his sightings on a number of occasions.

“My suggestion is that you research the stories of Lincoln’s ghost and the ghost of Donna Anna County in Las Cruces near the White Sands Missile Range,” said Hall.

He suggested President Truman most likely encountered Tall Whites in the White House instead of ghosts.

“Remember, many of the range maintenance men who saw the Tall Whites actually thought they were seeing ghosts.”

Are the Tall Whites in India?

Credible news reports this month from the New Delhi Times and several other Indian dailies have reported their government is in the midst of an internal debate on whether to go public with alien encounters.

Many in the largest democracy in the world are eager to explain to its citizens and to the world about the ongoing contact with UFO's and aliens. However, there are others who want to bend to the will of the world's superpowers who are now trying to convince India to keep quiet about UFO contact.

According to overseas news reports, America and other super powers are engaged in "economic bribery" in order to keep the Indian government silent about alien contact.

How Can You Meet Them?

Asked this question, Hall suggests:

"Drive to Indian Springs Nevada during the hot part of summer in late May through early September. They like it hotter than we do. On the south side of town, there is a large open vacant section of desert. Pick a location where you can see the mountains located in the distance at the north end of Indian Springs Valley (that means they can see you).

"Make sure you're having fun - get involved with your work such as painting a picture, etc. That is very important - they're bored - they like entertainment. Be very conscious of the passage of time. If you have any missing time, such as 20 minutes, remember any "dreams" that you might have had during this missing time.

"Take note of any florescent light that you see at night no matter how far up in the valley it might be. The Tall Whites used to like to come out between 11:30 and 12:30 at night and return up the valley sometime after 4:30 a.m. Take note of any fuzzy white flying craft that you see just after the sun comes up along the western side of the Indian Springs Valley.

“If they come, they prefer to approach you from behind so sit out in the open where you have a good view. Never, never panic - I know talk is cheap but never pursue them. Just stay standing or sitting in one place. It’s OK to walk (not run) away if you become frightened.

“NEVER NEVER NEVER try to touch their children no matter how close they come. The children are willing to come right up to you, closer than arm’s length. If you touch them, the mother will kill you. Sing quiet songs to yourself.

I used to sing Ricky Nelson’s song, “It’s Up to You” and I’d pray a lot. It calmed me down and I have no idea what it did for them. But It seemed to calm most of them down too.

“Good Luck.”

Concluding Thoughts

Whether Hall’s story is true, of course, is debatable. However, no one can argue it is compelling, detailed, and filled with interesting facts.

If there are lingering doubts, they come from lack of corroboration, lack of physical evidence, and Hall’s inability to provide the names of those persons who may also have first-hand knowledge.

If he is telling the truth, this added information would only give credence to his incredible story. And as they say, until further evidence comes forward, the jury is still out!

But for those too impatient to await a final verdict, maybe a trip to Indian Springs Valley is the next logical step.

Canada's Former Defence Minister Claims that Aliens Are Real

Have you guys seen this video of Canada's former Defence Minister Paul Hellyer chatting freely about how aliens are real in the presence of six American congressmen in Washington? As someone who spent all winter stuck to my couch watching X-Files and fantasizing about Mulder taking me away to a far-off alien planet, this is basically like watching porn. What's particularly intense about Hellyer's speech is that he's not some kooky guy off the street who claims an alien came through his bedroom window in the middle of the night to abduct and probe him. Hellyer is an educated engineer and author who served a long career in Canadian politics. The man undertook the enormous task of unifying the Canadian Navy, Air Force, and Army into one single organization now known as the Canadian Forces. He also helped found Canada's only international UFO landing pad in St. Paul, Alberta. Based on his impressive career, every unbelievable claim he makes about alien life must be 100% true. Right?!

Here's a breakdown of those claims:

- There are at least four types of alien species, and they have been visiting Earth for thousands of years.
- The different species probably have different agendas and should not be considered as one entity.
- One of the species is called the Tall Whites. Hellyer claims that two of them are working with the United States.
- There are live E.T.s on earth at this present time.
- A cabal formed by the Council on Foreign Relations, the Bilderbergers, The Trilateral Commission, the international banking cartel, the oil cartel, and select members of the military are planning to create one world government. They are the ones suppressing information about aliens from the public.

But of course, this most recent extraterrestrial testimony isn't Paul's first involvement with the alien awareness movement. In 2005, as part of his crusade, he confessed to a Toronto audience that he had once seen a UFO with his wife and friends. Two years later, Paul asked for public disclosure from world governments on alien technology that could potentially save us.

So yes, Paul's ideas might be a little out there, but his resume certainly lends some credence to his assertions. But it's his mention of the Tall Whites that specifically piqued my interest. Who are these guys? What are they up to? Anyone who has researched the Tall Whites will know that former airman Dr. Charles Hall is the go-to expert in the field. Dr. Hall spent two years working as a weather observer on a military base in the Nevada Desert. That is, of course, where the Tall Whites live. Charles says they travel through space in egg-shaped pods because that's simply a more efficient way to speed across deep space. Some intrepid believers were able to spot large egg-like objects on Google Earth in the precise location where Hall said the Tall Whites lived. This means that these guys exist!

I'm now obsessed with Tall Whites —I personally can't wait to touch their soft alien skin. Charles claims they're skinny, pale-looking humanoids made of flesh and blood like the rest of us. They look Scandinavian. Their eyes are blue and twice the size of human eyes, with transparent blonde hair.

They can live up to 800 years old and instead of becoming old, short, and wrinkly like us humans, the Tall Whites start growing taller when they reach 400 years old (Charles says that's the equivalent of 40 human years). For most of their lives, the Tall Whites are about 5'11", but they can grow as tall as 10 feet, which would make them really good at dunking on fools. Unfortunately, as they grow taller, their organ growth does not keep up with their skeletal growth, so they basically endure a deterioration process of four centuries as they slowly inch toward a natural death. Sucks for you, Tall Whites!

Ostensibly, the Tall Whites struck a deal with the American government shortly after arriving on Earth. Charles Hall has alluded to some kind of technology exchange program, and Hellyer has also implied that many of society's wonders are actually just swagger-jacked from alien discoveries that have been clandestinely shared with our government. It's unclear what the Tall Whites got in exchange, perhaps their secret base, stocked with human food and human clothing, in the middle of the desert was enough for them—and if that's true—they are certainly a low-maintenance type of alien. It seems perplexing that a hyper-advanced species that is able to travel through galaxies, learn English (oh yeah, apparently we taught them English), and establish contact with us would be dumb enough to give their scientific knowledge away in exchange for a couple of shirts. But maybe that's me just being a puny and materialistic human blob.

The truth is no longer out there, the truth is right here in this blog post. Or perhaps Paul Hellyer is just suffering from dementia. I would prefer to believe that super Scandinavian aliens are real. Curiously enough, Hellyer did mention that there was more information about the aliens than what he was ready to disclose publicly. He didn't think we were ready to hear the whole truth. Hopefully, we can move toward a more acceptable society that is ready to learn the secrets of alien life, and then maybe we can start seeing movies where these beautiful Tall Whites are the stars. Unless of course, this is already happening.

TALL WHITE ALIENS

The “Tall White” (Nordic) aliens are not earthly Nords, they created them, like all other human races. All nations and races of people on Earth must live in peace and respect for each other!!! There is an extraterrestrial race, which Mr. Charles Hall called “Tall Whites Aliens”. This race is the origin of the stars near Arcturus.

Some stand more than 8 feet tall, run 40 mph, and live 800 years. They speak like a dog barking or a bird chirping, write similar to Egyptian hieroglyphics, and have learned English quite easily. They have large blue eyes that wrap part way around their heads, small noses, and tiny ears pressed tight to their scalps. Their thumbs are small with four long slender fingers. Their skin is completely white, like chalk.

They all have thin, straight blond hair. Their hips are shaped like ours, but they walk quite differently since they are used to a stronger gravity pull. They typically can be seen wearing aluminized chalk white jumpsuits resembling a canvas-like fabric with gloves of the same material and an open white motorcycle helmet.

What's unusual is the suit emits a three-inch field of white, fluorescent light, the intensity varying from soft to bright, a brightness that can actually hurt the human eye.

They are extremely intelligent, and process information speed several times faster than humans. They have individual talents, differing intellectual capabilities, and physical traits. Some are teachers, some are pilots, some are workers and some are leaders.

Normal speech sounds "like a dog barking or a meadowlark singing". However, some Tall Whites can mimic human speech and in fact, carry on normal conversations with humans. Some have demonstrated an ability to imitate specific humans so well that imitation cannot be detected when used over a telephone.

They also can use a device that projects speech so that it is heard by humans within their heads. This works only over a short range (several feet) and requires humans to turn the head sideways to the Tall White. The device is also a language translator. According to its settings from time to time, Hall was occasionally able to overhear Tall Whites conversing among themselves as though they were speaking English.

They like to recreate and procreate and their children, considerably shorter in size, are fun-loving, energetic, and inquisitive. The children enjoy hide and seek but they also like to play catch with soft objects since their bodies are frail, bruising easily. Mothers are highly devoted to their children to the "Nth" degree, existing solely for the purpose of meeting the needs of their offspring.

Although they are highly individualistic, one similar characteristic is they all have white chalky complexions – very white chalky complexions. For this reason, they have been called the Tall Whites.

Every Tall White adult carries a pencil-like weapon that can be set to stun, kill, immobilize, or “hypnotize” humans. It can also administer severe pain, and they frequently use it to discipline people who act in ways that annoy, frighten, or endanger them. The weapon’s actions and effects are accomplished by varying the frequency of focused microwaves to interact with specific ions in the human body.

Although their technology is quite beyond ours at this time, evidence suggests that by other and less tangible measures – “wisdom”, “intelligence”, and “moral stature” – they might be quite comparable to ourselves.

Among the interesting matching characteristics of the Tall Whites and the Imdugud:

- 1. Very tall humanoid “Nordic” with white skin*
- 2. Often have blue eyes*
- 3. Emit barking or whistling sounds*
- 4. Solitary*
- 5. Warriors*

Parks adds in private communication that the Imdugud are among the very few who practice natural childbirth and raise families.

But the Tall Whites are more than just fiction, says Charles Hall, an educated man with a master’s in nuclear physics and former weather observer for the United States Air Force.

According to Hall, who claims to have communicated with the Tall Whites, they are very real, very complex, and very much a part of the community living at Nellis Air Force Base, a highly secretive 5,000 square mile “no-fly zone” military compound in the southern and central Nevada desert.

Nellis is so secret, so secluded, so guarded by military police, according to Hall, an attempt to enter, an attempt to locate the Tall Whites, who live under the sand dunes in concrete and steel bunkers, would be like committing suicide. "You can't go hunting for them or approach them. They have to come to you and the children are especially curious by nature," said Hall from his home in Albuquerque, NM., saying he hasn't attempted contacting the Tall Whites since his tour of duty ended in the Air Force in 1967 when he left to serve in Vietnam.

"It was a traumatic experience being isolated in the desert, alone with someone so different and obviously more advanced than us.

"At first, I thought I was going insane. But I learned over time how to communicate, how to approach them and to never try and force them to do anything. Their nervous systems operate very quickly, and they are very protective, very suspicious of our intentions."

Hall's "out of this world" recollections are not the product of an overactive imagination or drug-induced hallucinations, but from personal experiences and actual face-to-face contacts with the Tall Whites while stationed at Nellis from 1965-1967.

He claims to have spent two years interacting with this alien race countless numbers of times, but only recently went public with his "earth shattering" statements in a set of three books.

"I just decided to wait all these so as to not jeopardize the well-being of my children while they were in school," said Hall, adding the accounts in his books are true with only names and places changed to protect the innocent.

"Along the way I confided with my wife and friends, but now that the children are on their own and grown up, I've decided to tell my story to the public." And he says the facts in his book are just the tip of the iceberg in what just may turn out to be one of the most detailed, most convincing and most sought after alien stories of all time.

Other Unique Characteristics of Tall Whites

As previously mentioned, the Tall Whites can grow to be over 7 feet tall. However, most the adults in the first half of their lives usually range in size from 5'10 to 6'5".

"Their life span is ten times greater than ours," said Hall, adding that it takes them 10 times longer to heal, too. "They do not age as we do, but at about 400 earth years, they undergo a second stage of growth, eventually reaching about 8 feet tall. They then die of organ failure at an age of approximately 800 years. Since on their planet, days are longer so are their sleeping patterns, usually staying awake for two earth days and then followed by sleeping the same amount of time."

Where Are They From?

Hall said he learned very little about the origin of the Tall Whites during his two-year encounter.

"They really shared very little about their history and origins," recalls Hall. However, one incident took place with a Tall White he called "the Teacher" which revealed they may have come from near the star Arcturus about 36 light years away.

In a passage from one of his books, he said:

"A ripple of emotion passed through the crowd when I mentioned the star Arcturus. After a short pause, the older lady asked with some surprise, 'Teacher, does Charlie know where we come from?'

"The alien replied: 'No, not quite, but he's close.'"

How do they travel?

Hall witnessed three different types of spacecrafts, ranging in size from a small nuclear-powered scout craft and a large interstellar craft able to travel faster than the speed of light. This large black craft was approximately 70 feet high and 360 feet long. Hall said the technology of the small craft was shared with the military, but the large craft remains a mystery.

Regarding their hangar and living facilities, he added, "I was able to observe the repair facilities from a short distance and to the best of my knowledge I am the only person to have been allowed to view these facilities.

"The American generals would do anything to maintain good relations with the Tall Whites in order to get their technology," said Hall, who maintains he saw them together many times and even sat together across negotiating tables.

"The exchange was done on the basis of what would benefit the Tall Whites and they sometimes participated in classified meetings, helping with technology development."

What do they eat?

Hall said the military definitely supplied the Tall Whites with any type of food requested but noticed them carrying prepared bags of what looked like mushroom pudding. Hall surmised they were plant eaters, as he noticed them collecting seeds on various occasions.

"They are not meat eaters. That I know for sure," he added. "The food that I saw packaged and sealed in plastic bags on the scout craft, looked like mushroom pudding. I was told by one of them it was prepared primarily for the children or for when they were out hiking in the desert. I was also told it wasn't a good idea to eat their food as it would have adverse effects on my body."

Whether Hall's story is true, of course, is debatable. However, no one can argue it is compelling, detailed, and filled with interesting facts.

CONTACT WITH ALIENS

Researching "Nordic-type" alien by Donald Worley

(article excerpt)

For the last 35 years, I have specialized, for the most part, in alien human abduction and Nordic-type aliens. My conclusions will be based on 45 of my cases where the Nordics were involved.

At this point, I will describe a Nordic, and this description will apply to all the abductees in the cases I will discuss. These beautiful, tall, entities with angular faces usually have long blond hair, and breath-taking, unfathomable blue eyes. Females and a rare child have been seen. The beings wear skin-tight garments or beautiful white robes. Their telepathic communications are soothing, and they project an intense feeling of love for the abductee. Let's now look at the cases I have chosen.

Colorado State, USA.

This happened in my home State of Indiana on a farm near Floyd's Knob in the summer of 1954. A brilliant light beam came through the ceiling of Nell's bedroom and in it stood a blond-headed, blue-eyed figure in a resplendent robe. Taking Nell by the hand he said, "Do not be afraid my child. These are mine." He indicated the little "Grey alien" standing around the room. He then said, "I am the light of the world." The shaft of light returned, and he rose through the ceiling with it. Nell and her sister went up next. During the time that the child was in the UFO she managed to ask the glorious figure an important question. She asked, "Are you an angel?" The entity replied, "Yes, but not like you have been taught."

Donna Butts, Kansas

In a November incident, a large truck traveling on I-70 in Kansas was hit by a beam of light and Donna, who was behind it had her first abduction. [Note: Other people have reported being nearly hit by a large truck just seconds before the start of a highway abduction, which has caused them to wonder if the image of a truck was a screen memory for a UFO.]

At 2:00 a.m. one night, an alien appeared in the hallway of Donna's home. Once they were in the UFO, she was instructed to stand under a light that caused her to feel electrified. In still another abduction, a device that an alien called a "Monotron" was implanted at the base of her brain. Donna's case is very extensive, and she too received Earth devastation messages as well as many other predictions.

When Donna went public her life became a living hell. One group branded her a satanic disciple and harassed her. Had these fanatics known the truth about the "Blonde Aliens" they would not have become so overwrought. Then the day came when the alien appeared as a sparkling white figure in a uniform right in her front room. He looked solid enough but she and the others present could see through him before he faded away.

In the next abduction, she was taken aboard a spaceship. With the "blond alien" in the lead a number of things happened.

She was given another light treatment, drank a hauntingly beautiful blue liquid, and received an implant through her ear. Later Donna was privileged to see many things and learn a lot. Her predictions are as told to her by her benefactors are many.

"We can look at the Bible with the understanding of advanced intelligence. It has been termed as a coded message unable to be understood until the last days. These are most assuredly the last days.”

Miriam Delicado was contacted by “Tall blond aliens”

(article excerpt)

Miriam: In 1988 I was living a very normal, average life as a young adult. I’d just moved from a small town into a big city in Vancouver, British Columbia. And my friends and I had decided to take a road trip to my hometown. And on the way up there, everything was normal. We took the drive and everything was fine. But on the return journey, everything changed.

There were four of us, four adults, and a young child in the car. And the trip... we were driving for hours. I was sleeping in the back seat of the car. And then it started to get dark out. The people who were driving wanted a break, so they went into the back seat, and I went up into the front, into the passenger side with my friend.

And right away these big balls of light... they looked like truck lights, actually; that’s what we thought that they were for the longest time... came streaming up behind us rather quickly in the car. And as that happened, we were wondering why they were traveling so fast.

Now, these particular lights followed us for hours and hours in the darkness. And every time we came up to a car or any kind of house or buildings at all, the lights would fall back on and disappear.

So after hours of this going on, eventually we went through a town where we thought for sure that we had lost the lights. And as soon as we got to the other side of this town, into the forested area, at an absolute moment we said: Okay, we’re clear. There’s no way they can catch up with us... and literally in the blink of an eye, there they were, these balls of light that were probably about this big. [holds hands about 12 inches apart]

And they came up behind us. And then – poof – and at this point, after hours they had been appearing and disappearing, appearing and disappearing, and in the blink of an eye. So, my friend got very, very nervous, as I did. Neither one of us was comfortable with what was happening at all, and the people in the back seat were still sleeping.

So, all of a sudden, I screamed at her, and I said: Pull over the car right now! It's not you they want. It's me! And I went to grab the steering wheel to pull her over, when all of a sudden, she just sort of flopped, you know, like a Raggedy Ann doll, flopped her head over and started pulling over and stopped at the side of the road.

And by that time the car filled with light from every direction. And these balls of light were sitting behind the car. So, at that point – I was the only one conscious at that time – when I turned from the back of the car to the front, I saw a craft on the road.

Now, I couldn't make out any detail because it looked almost misty and very, very bright. And these beings that were about four feet tall walked... were walking towards me. They were very androgynous, almost childlike in their nature. And they had big round black eyes. They didn't have any oval eyes at all. These were round black eyes.

And they were directing me to get out of the car, which I did. And I was very scared. I wasn't terrified though, and that distinction needs to be made. I was not terrified. I was scared.

So I got out of the car. They led me down the highway a little bit, and at this point, I wasn't even thinking about my friends, I was just wondering where they were taking me.

And on this embankment on the left... they led me up the embankment where I saw, when I looked up, a larger craft that had two beings standing in this doorway. And they had blond hair – and I mean blond as in snow white hair – and the most brilliant blue, Mediterranean water blue, eyes that you've ever seen, and quite incredible. And the beings, the short ones, took me to the craft, and when I got to the doorway, I walked onboard the craft.

But what was interesting was that just before all of this happened I'd had a dream in the back seat of the car. And in this dream that I had, this man and woman told me, they said:

We are coming for you soon. Do not be afraid. We are your friends. We are your family. Do not be afraid. And then, when I saw these two tall beings, the moment that I laid eyes on them, I said in my mind: What are you doing here? Why can't you just leave me alone?

And then I walked onboard the craft.

K: And did you have any memories of what happened on the craft at that point?

Miriam: From the moment I walked off that craft, I had very clear memories. And I have had those clear memories for twenty years.

K: Clear memories of what happened on the craft? Or just clear memories up to the point you've told us?

Miriam: Both. Once I was boarding the craft, I remember a great deal of what happened to me. I do not by any means remember the full three hours. I don't. And I don't know if I ever will or not, because up to this point... I mean, I have not had hypnosis done to recover memories. So that's a very important point for me to make to anyone watching, is that these memories have come from conscious memories.

So, in other words, I walked onto the craft, and I had this encounter. It took me some time, but I didn't realize that it was a total of three hours. It was very clear math that I did to work this out. So, there were three hours of missing time. And I remember quite a bit of the information that they gave me at that time.

There were, ah... Some things have stayed with me so clearly that even as I'm looking at you I can still see the images in my mind every time I hear about... you know...

K: Can you give us an idea of what was conveyed to you at that time?

Miriam: When I was onboard the craft, I was sitting in what I call a "light chair," and it was... you could look at it just like this. [points to the chair she's sitting on.] Except, instead of it being a chair, it was made from pure light, so it almost glowed. And I sat in this chair, and I looked across the room, and I had a being on either side of me. And a screen popped up. And the screen was quite large. It was probably about this... as large as the chair, and you know. Two or three feet high. And as I looked at the screen, there was information that came across it. And images. These images would be accompanied by information that was given to me by these beings, either through telepathy or – meaning they would directly speak to me – or it felt like there was just a constant flow of information being sort of placed within my mind.

Now, one of the things that they shared with me was the creation of man. This is very much related to the Hopi and all of the indigenous people us.

So, to make this story short, they explained that they had a hand in creating mankind, but by no means were they God. They were the helpers of this Earth to ensure that... They were overseers, so that they would be here to watch over the Earth, to help man become more than what they currently are.

The 2013 MUFON Tall Whites Report

"This past weekend I was spending some time out by Lake Arcadia. The location of the site was right by the shore of the lake.

It was about one o'clock in the morning and I was the last one there and had been by myself for around thirty minutes. It was my responsibility that night to let no one drive back home while intoxicated and make sure the campsite was in good shape when we were done. As a result of my duties that night, I was completely sober and had not been drinking or using any drugs.

Right after I loaded the last bag of trash in the back of my truck I had this strange urge to look at the lake. The best way to describe that feeling was as if I had been daydreaming. There was nothing unusual going on out there all of a sudden there was a bright glowing light under the water. At this particular distance, I could tell exactly how large the circle was, but it was big.

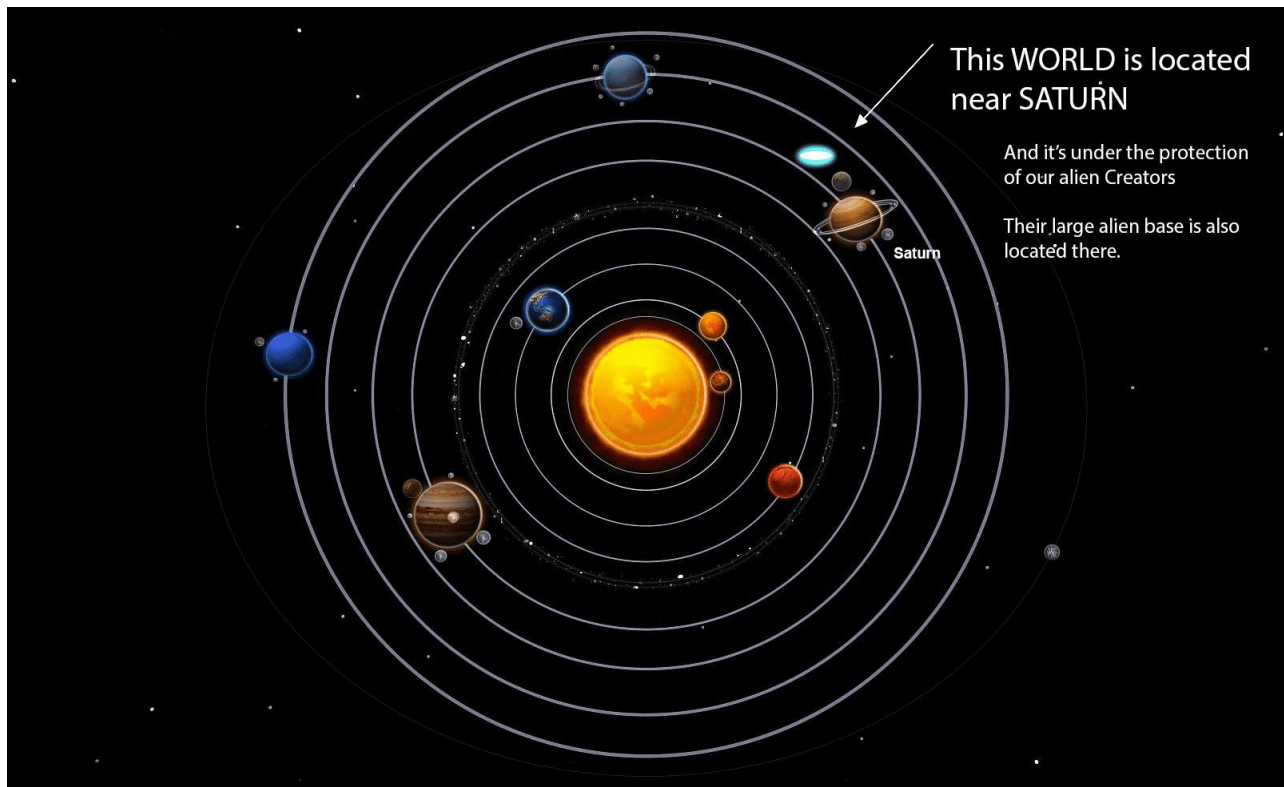

The shape was circular and had a light green/yellowish glow with occasionally pulsating red and blue lights. I stared at it dumbfounded as it was moving slowly under the water from one side of the lake to the opposite side. The object moved from one side and back to the other two or three times for about five minutes then it stopped almost near the center of the lake. The object glowed brighter and brighter then shot straight out of the water and into the sky.

After that, I turned around and ran as fast as I could to my truck. Once I got to my truck I stopped and fumbled around in my pockets for a couple of seconds looking for my keys and seemingly out of nowhere a bright light appeared above and slightly behind me.

I turned around to see what was behind me and there was this giant ship. It wasn't a saucer-shaped one that everyone talks about but it had more of a cake shape. It hadn't landed but just hovered around twenty to thirty feet off the ground for a couple of seconds. Then it shot back up into the sky.

I turned back to my truck door and tried to unlock it when I caught something at the corner of my eye. I jumped back against the side of my truck and about 15 feet away stood three people staring at me that had not been there before this incident. There were two very attractive women and one very tall man that was at least ten feet high. All of them had blonde hair that was almost white and blue eyes.

They did not say anything to me directly but I heard one of the women's voices in my head. I know you're probably thinking that I am crazy, but it did happen. She said, "(my name) please do not be afraid. You have an important role to play if you would like to help us." I said out loud in a shaky voice, "Okay, but I don't know how?" Then the woman said, "Don't worry you will know in time." Right after she said that everything went black. Eventually, I woke up around two thirty. Lying about thirty feet away from my last remembered position at the side of my truck."

This is where the cause of atheism is to be found! I, therefore, assert that medical science bears the full blame for the rise of world atheism and political differences. Researchers verifying that the opposite is true, namely that man has an astral soul, are viciously attacked and dismissed most unfairly. I will select just one crass example of a medical contortion:

Every amputee still feels the limb he physically lost. He feels the limb of his astral soul. Every nerve is present. Physicians explain this phenomenon by asserting that we are only dealing with memory here, an echo of one's senses. Those aware of the truth would have to laugh, – if the consequences weren't so dire.

The broader masses within nations assume that a scientist with a doctor's degree is, based on his academic education, able to think more logically and reliably than your average citizen. This is another worldwide mistake that has dire consequences.

I have quite often pointed out the eternal existence of human life to you. I don't mean the human "flesh and blood" existence, but the spiritual existence of man. Man is a part of the universe, a perpetual particle of God. The universe is our common God. You mistakenly paint the image of God in the form of an wise old man. We gave the fact that there is no peaceful coexistence on Earth a lot of thought. The reason for this can be found in the level of spiritual development on Earth.

One also thinks too superficially in high politics and in diplomacy. A large part of the brain lays completely neglected. It is very important to look far ahead. You are incapable of such projections. The moment your thoughts reach a certain point, they stop even though all important things still remain uncomprehended.

This is the reason why most people on Earth find it impossible to grasp the things that lie beyond their demise, the things that await them after they die. You must get used to the fact that your consciousness is immortal.

Question: Dialectic Materialism asserts that the human consciousness is tied to the physical body.

Answer: To list all its mistakes would fill a whole lexicon. Consciousness is not tied to physical matter whatsoever; it exists free within the cosmos. Only an illusion gives people a feeling that their consciousness is inside their head. When a lunar probe sends pictures via a satellite down to Earth so that these appear on a television screen, nobody will insist that these pictures are situated inside the television set. This is one example of the mentioned illusion. Even though consciousness can have an expansion of millions of miles, the end-effect is still within the body.

This however means that the end-effect can also be in a spirit body or in an antimatter body. Consciousness requires an instrument, but this instrument does not necessarily have to be made of flesh and blood. When a human being dies, consciousness does not die with it, even though the brain ceases to function. It is the brain's assignment to exactly adhere to the individual FREQUENCY of one's consciousness. The slightest shift within this FREQUENCY has dire consequences, consequences one calls "insanity". The brain is not there to think, only to CONTROL the FREQUENCY.

Question: It's unclear, why the well-known scholars ignore or even deny the latest evidence regarding the future life of the human soul.

(For this reason, Professor, Dr. the University of göttingen Walter Ginz said, "All observations indicate that the man after his death discards the earthly body and as a Spirit, I along with a body soul enters another world. Religion of humanity proclaimed it for a long time.")

Answer : — Paradise. You can't even begin to imagine this World.

First, it is the World of Light, where nothing is what's called undertones. This is the place where the sun's light is refracted so that everything is absolutely transparent and at the same time it is full of light and color.

In this world there will be those horrendous landscapes of your former planet, where you can see the fruits of human activity in all its "glory."

New Earth is a place of peace, of goodness, and you have to understand that here you have to be very correct in your feelings and your thoughts.

It will be a completely different world than the one to which you are accustomed. There is no place of envy, resentment, all those manifestations that you can still find in your Arsenal of senses. The new Earth is characterized by the qualities that will bring you to what you should be more attentive to their thoughts and feelings. Because all what you will think, everything that will feel, will become known to all without exception the creatures around you. In the New Earth all will have great empathy, and all your feelings and thoughts will be known to all. So now watch them try to take anything and everything as they are, without judgment and bias.

About humanity

Question: We have great trust in what you say. Almost all those that read your words were impressed by them. One is however surprised that you cannot talk to us via our radio networks.

Answer: I thank you for the trust you show me. We naturally also took this option into consideration. Our ways of communicating, however, took different directions. We did undertake such trials just the same. But we know from experience that radio transmissions from our spaceships are not taken seriously. One thinks that they are falsifications produced by amateurs. Besides, our side utilizes a far better method, namely communication via telepathy; because there is no hindrance and no spatial limitation, and besides, it is the fastest that we know of.

Question: Our scientists and technicians think that mankind on Earth achieved a high rate of intelligence in this respect. We have made enormous progress over the last 50 years. How do you assess this development?

Answer: Yes, I have to admit that you achieved a lot. However, one can never equate overall achievements with that of an individual when assessing intelligence. This is unfortunately the decisive mistake you make. The grade of intelligence of individual people on Earth is still very minimal from our point of view. Even when I look at electronics engineers who design computers, I find that we're dealing in all cases with experts with lopsided, run-off-the-mill knowledge. However, in other fields of knowledge or regarding human beings' higher development, they can be virtually the greatest failures. A Nobel Prize Laureate might rightfully deserve his title, respectively deserve to be honored in this way, but could still have a terrible character. We often find these people working in the armament industry or political life. I do, however, not want to define individual personalities. You know some of them.

Question: We undoubtedly acknowledge that regarding higher knowledge, you are far superior to us. How is it possible that some of your personalities possess such comprehensive erudition in all fields of knowledge?

Answer: We often experience periods of all-time lows on our planet. We did, however, recognize in time that progressive development is only possible when one acknowledges an ingenious CREATOR and his HIERARCHY. This insight takes a lot of the wind out of the sails of the negative. But the exact opposite is the case with you; this is why you should not be surprised when you get stuck in many blind alleys from whence there is no escape. The dissemination of ignorance regarding life after death in itself leads to a lot of things along false tracks. In addition to this is the constantly deteriorating state of health of all terrestrial human beings. Man's genetic inheritance is damaged through and through. I have mentioned this before.

We improved our general state of health and prolonged our lifespan in the process. We live much, much longer than you and this alone allows us to do a lot more for our spiritual maturity. Hygiene alone is not enough, and sport cannot arrest the general deterioration of the public's health.

Question: What is most obvious in your eyes?

Answer: Every one of you can see this every second of the day. Smoking is a vice that has spread all over the world. An incredible industry contaminates the whole terrestrial human race. We are not dealing with enjoyment here but with a deadly, creeping poison with great effectiveness. Such a development would be unthinkable on our planet. You have statistical materials telling you the extent of the problem. Tobacco poisons the nerves, and the blood vessels disintegrate cells and offer mutations and maldevelopment many opportunities. But tobacco also lames the will, retards the brain's functions, and leads to liability regarding all decisions making processes. The situation is even worse when alcohol abuse enters the equation.

Charles Hall and Tall White aliens

Charles Hall's Millennial Hospitality book series describes his encounters with a race of human-like extraterrestrials – the “Tall Whites” (TW) – during a two-year duty assignment at Nellis Air Force Base from 1965 to 1967.

(excerpts)

“Hall saw Air Force generals return from distant, hours-long trips with Tall Whites on their antigravity craft. Hall says, “When the USAF Generals got off the craft, they were laughing as they had just come back from the world's best amusement park.”

I would like to be clear that even though Charles Hall has given incredible details about the Tall White aliens there is much supporting evidence from other sources making this case pretty darn solid.

Here is another interesting bit of supporting evidence found by Tom Fox who himself has seen the Tall White near Indian Springs while camping in the desert and Las Vegas.

I will put his story below the other links I have been accumulating that show many people have been interacting with the TW over the years.

George LoBuono said:

I connected the dots on this one:

“Col Major Wilson had begun his duties at the Papoose Lake installation, still not knowing what existed 30 stories farther down.

He had been well indoctrinated in Top Secret work and knew all the consequences of keeping the nation’s most guarded secrets. The past six years had been slow and boring, he recalls, and other than what he saw at Wright-Patterson AFB, he felt that he was in a vacuum going nowhere.

He was sitting in his office at S-4 mulling this over one morning, when Lieutenant Colonel Bennet came in. He asked Wilson if he was busy, (“Like he gave a damn,” Wilson recalls), and said, “Let’s go.”

Wilson followed the Lieutenant Colonel, and they eventually wound up two stories down at the super-secret “S-4” UFO technology area. As they came out on landing there, Wilson saw eight different kinds of UFOs!

There were intellectual-looking people all over the area, whom he guessed were scientists. He glanced at Bennett, who cut off his implied question with a curt “Forget it.”

The Colonel and the Major went into a cubicle where there were about twenty officers and civilians sitting around. Wilson was startled, when a woman came in who was at least eight feet tall. There was not an ounce of excess fat on her body, he recalls. She wore a strange-looking jumpsuit, which had a * HI * pattern on the right side above the breast line.

To this day Wilson recollects the details of this striking encounter.

“The woman had finely chiseled features. Her blonde hair cascaded neatly past her shoulders. Her eyes were the bluest blue I’d ever seen. Somehow, she was different. Little did I know then, how different! She sat a large crystal on the table, and without warning, her fingers began to glow as she ran them over this crystal.

A 3-D hologram began to form above it! I looked around the room and everyone’s mouths were hanging open, and suddenly I noticed mine was, too.

Little did I realize that at that moment my life would forever change. My past teachings slipped from me as I stared. My whole concept of life did a 180-degree turn, as I watched the Hologram, complete with sound, unfold the mysteries of the past and the present, and of other worlds.”

Colonel Wilson related that among the scenes, in which the female extraterrestrial’s crystal hologram displayed for the assembled group, was the history of the Earth and of extraterrestrial involvement with it.

That involvement included fashioning the consciousness of Jesus and sending him to live among Earthlings to point to a better way to understand life and to live. The extraterrestrial woman also showed the officers and scientists scenes from inhabited planets of other star systems. Wilson was transformed by this experience.

When it was over, I knew that whatever part I was to play in all of this, my life as I knew it had ended forever.”

I have run across cases that seem to be Tall White cases on the Internet.

The many reports of Tall Whites, not just by Charles Hall, have not yet captured the imagination of the UFO community.

INCIDENTS

Hall for example describes one Tall White female who wanted to kill a military serviceman who unknowingly had hit her child with a stone and broke the child’s arm. The serviceman threw a stone at what he thought was a white dog stalking him around his hut base.

Since the Tall Whites often stalked the servicemen, many servicemen thought they were wild animals and were quite frightened of them. The incident led to the Tall White threatening the servicemen with death if he didn’t leave immediately and promised to never return.

This is how the serviceman in question described the incident to Hall:

I tried to reason with her. I told her that I hadn't broken any little boy's arm and that I liked to play with kids. She wouldn't hear any of it. She told me that I was too stupid to know what I had done.

Then she told me that the American generals had asked that I be given one warning before she and her friends killed me. She said that this was the warning. She said that if I ever came back out to the ranges alone, their Captain would kill me.

Other servicemen had similar negative encounters with the 'Tall Whites'. One incident, in particular, is very revealing since it involved a cook at the Army Base who inadvertently went into the kitchen area on a day when the base was closed. He was threatened with death because he simply frightened some of the Tall White children. So, there weren't any broken bones or hurting of the children, he simply scared them.

Here's how Charles 'Charlie Baker' Hall described the incident as the cook narrated what happened:

"They're back there, Charlie. Don't go back there. You'll scare them like I did. They'll kill you if you scare them. They told me so. That tall one in the corner, he told me so. He said he'd kill me if I ever scared their children again".

WHERE THEY COME FROM?

Now as to the identity of the 'Tall Whites'. Hall points to Arcturus as their origins as implied in the following passage where Hall addresses a group of tall Whites:

A ripple of emotion passed through the crowd when I mentioned the star Arcturus, some 36 light years away. After a short pause, the older lady asked with some surprise, "Teacher, does Charlie know where we come from?"

SALIENT CHARACTERISTICS OF THE TALL WHITE

Hall has described these beings as tall – ranging upwards of 6-7 feet in height – and quite thin and frail. The skin color is chalk white. They are physically different from us in several noticeable ways, yet the most important physical aspect is that they are humanoid, a fact that is filled with significance.

Their life span is about ten times ours. They do not age as we do, but after around 400 years of Earth's time, they undergo a second stage of growth, eventually reaching around nine feet in height. They die of organ failure at an age of approximately 800 years.

The Tall Whites have a physical form similar to ours in all gross aspects. That is, they are upright bipedal vertebrates; they have human-like faces, etc. With suitable clothing, they can and do pass as humans during well-guarded forays into Las Vegas. The Tall Whites have the faculty of speech, but some of their speech sounds are outside the audible spectrum for humans. In other words, we can't hear the sounds.

Normal speech sounds "like a dog barking or a meadowlark singing". However, some Tall Whites can mimic human speech and in fact, carry on normal conversations with humans. Some have demonstrated an ability to imitate specific humans so well that imitation cannot be detected when used over a telephone.

They also can use a device that projects speech so that it is heard by humans within their heads. This works only over a short range (several feet) and requires the human to turn the head sideways to the Tall White. The device is also a language translator. According to its settings from time to time, Hall was occasionally able to overhear Tall Whites conversing among themselves as though they were speaking English.

As stated, there was a pattern of confrontations with our personnel, in which panic led to the injury and death of our soldiers. These beings are all well-armed, and they can and do kill, sometimes at the tiniest provocation. They react and move much more rapidly than humans can, so if they decide you have threatened them, you may be cut down and bleeding without having even been warned.

Every Tall White adult carries a pencil-like weapon that can be set to stun, kill, immobilize, or “hypnotize” humans. It can also administer severe pain, and they frequently use it to discipline people who act in ways that annoy, frighten, or endanger them. The weapon’s actions and effects are accomplished by varying the frequency of focused microwaves to interact with specific ions in the human body.

Although their technology is quite beyond ours at this time, evidence suggests that by other and less tangible measures – “wisdom”, “intelligence”, “moral stature” – they might be quite comparable to ourselves.

Among the interesting matching characteristics of the Tall Whites and the Imdugud:

1. Very tall humanoid “Nordic” with white skin
2. Often have blue eyes
3. Emit barking or whistling sounds
4. Solitary
5. Warriors

Parks adds in private communication that the Imdugud are among the very few who practice natural childbirth and raise families. (Most use genetics and cloning and take advantage of very long or indefinitely long life spans. In other words, they are immortal.)

Yet there are contradictions, perhaps the most noteworthy being their apparent home base. Although the Tall Whites would never reveal this information to Charles Hall, they allowed him to believe it was not local, and via circumstantial data, Hall has placed their home tentatively at the star Arcturus. However, it is also possible that Arcturus is simply another base – a “second home.”

WHERE WAS THE BASE AT NELLIS?

Some stand more than 8 feet tall, run 40 mph, and live 800 years. They speak like a dog barking or a bird chirping, write similar to Egyptian hieroglyphics, and have learned English quite easily. They have large blue eyes that wrap part way around their heads, small noses, and tiny ears pressed tight to their scalps. Their thumbs are small with four long slender fingers and two claw-like appendages instead of fingernails.

They all have thin, straight blond hair, usually worn short and the women can be distinguished by a feminine-looking short cut. Their hips are shaped like ours, but they walk quite differently since they are used to a stronger gravity pull. They typically can be seen wearing aluminized chalk white jumpsuits resembling a canvas-like fabric with gloves of the same material and an open white motorcycle helmet.

What's unusual is the suit emits a three-inch field of white, fluorescent light, the intensity varying from soft to bright, a brightness that can actually hurt the human eye.

They are extremely intelligent, and process information speed several times faster than humans. However, secretly they fear our intuitive ability and extra-sensory perceptions. They have individual talents, differing intellectual capabilities, and physical traits, a race not carved from a cookie-cutter. Some are teachers, some are pilots, some are workers and some are leaders. When bored, they like to go star gazing on hot summer nights, take weekend trips to the strip in Las Vegas, or visit the Lincoln Monument in Washington D.C.

They like to recreate, procreate and their children, considerably shorter in size, are fun-loving, energetic, and inquisitive. The children enjoy hide and seek but they also like to play catch with soft objects since their bodies are frail, bruising easily. Mothers are highly devoted to their children to the "Nth" degree, existing solely to meet the needs of their offspring. They believe in a "tit for tat" system, believe their word is their bond, and place special importance on honoring agreements, especially verbal or written.

However, it is unknown whether they believe in God per se or form religions to advance their beliefs.

Although they are highly individualistic, one similar characteristic is they all have white chalky complexions – very white chalky complexions. For this reason, they have been called the Tall Whites. And for this reason, most people think they are nothing, but fictional characters conjured up from a past Star Trek episode.

But the Tall Whites are more than just fiction, says Charles Hall, an educated man with a master's in nuclear physics and former weather observer for the United States Air Force.

According to Hall, who claims to have communicated with the Tall Whites, they are very real, very complex, and very much a part of the community living at Nellis Air Force Base, a highly secretive 5,000 square mile “no-fly zone” military compound in the southern and central Nevada desert.

OTHER UNIQUE CHARACTERISTICS OF TALL WHITES

As previously mentioned, the Tall Whites can grow to be over 7 feet tall. However, most the adults in the first half of their lives usually range in size from 5'10 to 6'5”.

“Their life span is ten times greater than ours,” said Hall, adding that it takes them 10 times longer to heal, too. “They do not age as we do, but at about 400 earth years, they undergo a second stage of growth, eventually reaching about 8 feet tall. They then die of organ failure at an age of approximately 800 years. Since on their planet, days are longer so are their sleeping patterns, usually staying awake for two earth days and then followed by sleeping the same amount of time.”

Charles Hall, The Tall Whites, and Richard Boylan

In a December 11, 2016 report, secret space program whistleblower Corey Goode described an announcement of the existence of Tall White extraterrestrials as an option being considered for a limited disclosure initiative orchestrated by the U.S. Air Force, Defense Intelligence Agency, and the National Security Agency. Goode said:

Another potential plan that is in the “optional” category involves the possible disclosure of a single ET group known as the “Tall Whites.” This is the group that Charles Hall and others have met up with. The Cabal might try to introduce us to this group, explain they have been around for a really long time, and hope that they can get us to follow a mystical new religion offered by these beings. This would definitely not be in humanity’s best interest.

In order to acquaint readers to Charles Hall and his testimony concerning the Tall Whites, and why Goode’s conclusion about them is accurate, I have decided to re-post a series of articles and interviews about Hall’s testimony, which began in November 2004. What follows is the first article in the series.

Michael Salla, Ph.D.
Dec 15, 2016

[Repost: November 18, 2004] I recently received a message from one of Dr Richard Boylan's lists discussing his views on the Tall Whites discussed in Charles Hall's memoirs, Millennial Hospitality, vol 1-3. (the message is copied below). I find it quite disturbing that Boylan has moved quickly to unambiguously promote the Tall Whites discussed in the Charles Hall book to his various lists. Since Boylan has large lists and therefore has some influence in shaping the perceptions of a quite a number of people about different ET races, I'd like to elaborate a little on an earlier post in a discussion forum where I discussed the Tall Whites and Boylan's advocacy of them.

Let me also reaffirm my earlier view that Hall's information is an accurate reflection of what occurred at Nellis Air Force base during his Tour of Duty and therefore deserves serious attention. The researcher Paolo Harris has thoroughly investigated Hall's claims and finds him to be credible making this an important case to fully understand in terms of its exopolitical significance.

Hall describes the Tall Whites as quite intimidating in terms of behavior and how they regularly stalked military servicemen on duty at the remote desert location where Hall served. The Tall Whites regularly caused powerful emotions of fear and even terror among the military servicemen who didn't understand these Extraterrestrials or weren't ready to interact with them in a friendly way. Yet the Tall Whites were also capable of exhibiting friendship qualities and of being teachers as in the case of Hall (see his website for details and extracts).

I've now completed the first two volumes of Hall's memoirs and so far the behavior of the Tall Whites strikes me as very similar to abductee/experiencer reports of the behavior of the 'Tall Gray' category of ETs (the following references give the volume and page numbers from his book). There is an arrogance in the disposition of the Tall Whites and a contempt for humans displayed in their interactions with military servicemen who didn't understand them or were frightened by them. This is similar to how 'Tall Grays' supervise many abductions and control/punish humans who resist the genetic experiments.

Hall for example describes one Tall White female who wanted to kill a military servicemen who unknowingly had hit her child with a stone and broke the child's arm. The serviceman threw a stone at what he thought was a white dog stalking him around his hut based. Since the Tall Whites often stalked the servicemen, many serviceman thought they were wild animals and were quite frightened of them. The incident led to the Tall White threatening the servicemen with death if he didn't leave immediately and promise to never return. This is how the serviceman in question described the incident to Hall:

I tried to reason with her. I told her that I hadn't broken any little boy's arm and that I liked to play with kids. She wouldn't hear any of it. She told me that I was too stupid to know what I had done. Then she told me that the American generals had asked that I be given one warning before she and her friends killed me. She said that this was the warning. She said that if I ever came back out to the ranges alonges, their Captain would kill me. (vol 1, p. 247)

Other servicemen had similar negative encounters with the 'Tall Whites'. One incident in particular is very revealing since it involved a cook at the Army Base who inadvertently went into the kitchen area on a day where the base was closed. He was threatened with death because he simply frightened some of the Tall White children. So there's wasn't any broken bones or hurting of the children, he simply scared them. Here's how Charles `Charlie Baker' Hall described the incident as the cook narrated what happened:

"They're back there, Charlie. Don't go back there. You'll scare them like I did. They'll kill you if you scare them. They told me so. That tall one in the corner, he told me so. He said he'd kill me if I ever scared their children again" (vol 1, p. 469).

Well Boylan makes a point in his post below about the Tall Whites using 8" microwave stun guns to incapacitate people. Well stunning humans is not apparently the Tall White practice as revealed in the following section where a female Tall White is talking about how Charles Hall saved her daughter to an Air Force General:

"You know general, before now, I would have never thought it possible. If my daughter had tried to approach any of the others, the way she walked right up to Charlie today, they would have panicked and we would have had to kill them all" (vol 1, p. 452).

If the Tall Whites are so humane with their stun guns, why would they have to kill all the panicking soldiers rather than just stun them as Boylan describes?

Now Charles Hall saved the life of a Tall white child whose mother was a `Teacher' and subsequently he became known as the `Teacher's Pet' in a project she started to get Tall White children used to humans. This is how the `teacher' introduced `Charlie' to the mothers of some Tall White children:

This is `Charlie Baker,' [Hall] the teacher stated proudly. "He is just perfect for my pet project. See how gentle he is, and see how easily we can control him" (vol 1, p. 448).

So it's clear how controlling these Tall White ETs are, and the condescending attitude they have for even those humans who have done them a service. Nevertheless, the role Hall played in the teacher's project gave him a certain value as the "teacher's pet" which meant that the tall Whites would kill other servicemen who may have threatened the life of Charles Hall in the sensitive security environment surrounding the tall Whites base of operations. In the following passage, a Sargent narrates to fellow military security guard the consequences, according to a tall White known as 'Harry', if they threatened the "teacher's pet". Apparently, in a security drill they had drawn their guns on someone claiming to be the "teacher's pet":

Harry said the Real teacher's Pet is too valuable for us to ever draw our guns on him. He said if the Real Teacher's pet were ever killed, he could never be replaced. Old Harry said that if Sam and me had been facing the Real Teacher's Pet, once we actually pointed our guns at him, or once he fell to the ground, both of us would have been killed instantly, before we were even aware that we were being fired on. He said those were the direct orders he'd received from the Teacher. He said both Sam and me would have been killed without warning and that neither of our guns would have ever fired. (vol 2. 179).

Yet despite having saved the teacher's child and being the "teacher's pet" would not save Hall if he inadvertently hurt a child in the teacher's project as evidenced by a mother talking to her Tall White son in front of Hall:

"Alright", replied his mother, "You may join the teacher's pet project. Remember! Do not get too close to him, and remember, if anything ever goes wrong, if Charlie ever touches you, I will ask your uncle Harry to kill him (vol 1, p.449).

Hall was also threatened with death if he in some way interfered with the plans by the tall Whites as described in the following conversation with a tall White who was guarding a procession of tall Whites while Hall was present :

Then the Guard said forcefully, "You know that if anything goes wrong with this plan we can kill you any time we want to." Standing my ground still shaking in fear, I replied, "Yes, but I haven't given you any reason to kill me. Anyway, you haven't killed me yet so you are probably not going to." The guard smiled and replied, "You are quite right. We could have killed you in the shack the other night if we wanted to." Then he turned and walked back to the procession. Stopping for a minute near the shorter woman he said: "See. Now he knows for sure that we will kill him if anything ever goes wrong. (vol 2, p. 113.)

Finally, if there is any doubt in the reader's mind as to whether the Tall Whites actually kill humans who disobey/threaten them, here's a section describing what was told by one sergeant to another who were part of a military group that accompanied a Lt-General at a high level meeting with the Tall Whites:

Tell them [a group of sergeants] to remember the teacher has ordered them to stay out of sight behind the lounge. Remember if they disobey the teacher's orders, she will kill them as she killed the others, and there is nothing I can do about it. (vol 1, p. 447)

So here we have a very brutal doctrine of killing military servicemen who disobey orders and that this has occurred in the past.

Now as to the identity of the 'Tall Whites'. Hall points to Arcturus as their origins as implied in the following passage where Hall is addressing a group of tall Whites::

A ripple of emotion passed through the crowd when I mentioned the star Arcturus, some 36 light years away. After a short pause, the older lady asked with some surprise, "Teacher, does Charlie know where we come from?" (vol 2, p. 147)

However the intimidating behavior of the tall Whites is not at all consistent with descriptions I've seen of the Arcturians. If there is some connection with Arcturus, it may be purely genetic as the Tall Grays have a reputation for extracting genetic material from different races. The Arcturian connection may have been no more than a period where Arcturians were involuntarily taken on board Gray ships and incorporated into their genetic experiments in much the same way that humans are taken up by Grays on Earth. Thus Gray-human hybrids may be taken to other solar systems and claim to be Earthlings, yet this is purely a genetic connection.

Now as to the Nordic appearance of the Tall Whites, again, this is likely due to some genetics taken from a Nordic race. For example, George Andrews describes in his book, Extraterrestrial Friends and Foes (p. 153), how a contactee was told how the Grays allegedly took over the Nordic world on Procyon as follows:

The Grays began to visit us, first a few as ambassadors, then as specialists in various domains where their expertise could be useful to us, as participants in different programs that involved mutual collaboration, and finally as tourists. What had begun as a trickle became a flood, as they came in ever-increasing numbers, slowly but surely infiltrating our society at all levels, penetrating even the most secret of our elite power groups.... Just as on your planet they began by unobtrusively gaining control over key members of the CIA and KGB through techniques unknown to them, such as telepathic hypnosis that manipulates the reptilian levels of the brain, so on Procyon through the same techniques ... they established a kind of telepathic hypnotic control over our leaders. Over our leaders and over almost all of us, because it was as if we were under a spell that was leading us to our doom, as if we were being programmed by a type of ritual black magic that we did not realize existed."

Hall mentions in his book that the Tall Whites began to establish a presence in the Nevada area in 1954 (vol, p. 236). This is the same year that Eisenhower met with and established agreements with the Tall Grays from Orion. My conclusion is that the Tall Whites are closely associated with the Tall Grays from Orion. Furthermore, these most likely come from Rigel, Orion which was a former Nordic world taken over by the Grays. I've described this incident in my ET Motivations Report here. This accounts for the Tall Whites Nordic features that Hall describes, and their Gray/Reptilian characteristics such as 4 digit hands with two inch claws rather than nails.

My overall conclusion is the same with all the extraterrestrial races who have struck agreements with the US government and established a presence on Earth in exchange for extraterrestrial technology, and working in joint projects. They should be very closely watched and frankly regarded with much suspicion in terms of their motivations for participating in such agreements. Now given the disturbing behavior of the Tall Whites as Hall describes them, frankly I'm appalled that a researcher such as Boylan would consider such a race as exemplary Star Visitors which we should befriend, as he is currently advocating.

As I've described in my report on extraterrestrial motivations, there are many other extraterrestrial races who are more honorable and display much more elevated qualities. Reading the 'contactee' reports of these extraterrestrials Pleiadians, Andromedans, Lyrans, etc., doesn't leave one with feelings of distrust and apprehension. On the contrary one often feels a great degree of love and joy, coming through. For example, I recall reading George Adamski's discussion of the 'Venusians' and how they would rather give their lives when cornered rather than inflict injuries on other sentient life forms (http://www.universe-people.com/adamsk_e.htm). It sounds very Christ-like, and while I don't personally agree that such an attitude is very practical, it does have an emotional impact to know that some ETs actually practice elevated ethics that most would consider Christlike. The contrast with the 'Tall Whites' Hall describes couldn't be greater.

Importantly, contactees such as Billy Meier, Alex Collier, Enrique Castillo, etc., say that the Pleiadian and Andromedan extraterrestrials they interacted with, warned about working with the Grays who have a reputation for infiltrating worlds and taking them over and using the captive population for genetic material.

This finally takes me to Dr Richard Boylan who is now openly advocating his supporters to establish telepathic communications with the Tall Whites in a series of experiments. As one can see from his post he doesn't mention the disturbing incidents described in Hall's book, and just gives a glowing assessment of the Tall Whites, and the need to get in touch with them.

Boylan has consistently ignored all the evidence of negative behavior by the Grays and other ET races such as the Reptilians, and criticized researchers or 'abductees' who have pointed out the negative behavior. I wrote a short piece some time ago pointing out the flaws in Boylan's research approach in doing this, but he has not taken the hint to change tack.

Boylan is essentially behaving like a propagandist for the Tall Whites ignoring the negative incidents involving the Tall Whites which were reported by Hall himself. This is spinning of the information something Boylan has down with other whistleblowers such as Michael Wolf. Paolo Harris for example interviewed Wolf and found that he responded to a question on the benevolent/hostile ET issue in terms of an 'alien barrier' that quarantines the Earth in the following way: "The negative ETs might get through occasionally, and that is what anti-alien UFOlogists point out."

Now Dr Wolf is here acknowledging the existence of negative ET's so it certainly is not disinformation to posit negative extraterrestrials unless Dr Wolf himself is spreading disinformation. Yet Boylan has been careful not to acknowledge this information or allow it to be distributed on his lists. He has done similar things with other whistleblowers such as Robert Dean and Clifford Stone who refer to negative extraterrestrials.

To summarize, Boylan is dismissing the negative incidents described in the Hall book and giving an upbeat assessment of the more positive interactions of the Tall Whites. Dr Boylan is now acting as a Tall White propagandist, and advocating them as a kind of exemplary model of `Star Visitors' that we should eagerly seek to cultivate.

In conclusion, the Tall Whites are likely a genetic variation of the Tall Grays, and most likely originate from the Rigel star system of Orion where a Nordic world was allegedly infiltrated and taken over according to the testimonies of a number of contactees. This Nordic world whose genetic material is used along with other races such as the Arcturians is used to build hybrids that ultimately appear to be Nordic ETs, but are much closer to the `tall Grays' and their questionable agendas.

The Tall Whites should be treated with extreme caution and suspicion. I recommend that individuals choose to establish contact with more benign extraterrestrial races such as the Sirians, Pleiadians, Andromedans who don't have a track record in abductions or intimidating humans. The thought experiments Dr Richard Boylan is advocating to his members to get in touch with the Tall Grays is based on a propagandized version of the Tall White `star visitors'.

In peace

[Extract of Message from Dr Richard Boylan:
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/DrRichBoylanReports/message/1226>]

Friends,

Recent communication exchange with former USAF Airman Charles J. Hall, author of the "Millennial Hospitality" trilogy, coupled with content revealed in his books, brings forth the following interesting revelations. There exists an extraterrestrial race whom Mr. Hall has called the Tall Whites. This race originates from a location near the star Arcturus. These Tall Whites are in adulthood around six feet in height and have generally humanoid features. They have blond hair, generally worn short, and the women tend to wear their hair in a feminine form of short cut. They are blue-eyed, and have larger-than-human eyes which wrap part-way around the side of their head. The Tall Whites otherwise look quite human, except that their skin is a chalky-white in color. They have hands with four fingers, which do not end in finger nails but rather in harder, two-inch-long claw-like appendages. The typical clothing of the Tall Whites is an aluminized, chalk-white jump suit of canvas-looking fabric. They also wear gloves of the same material, and an open, white, motorcycle-like helmet. Both the suit and the helmet emit a three-inch-out field of soft-white fluorescent light. The intensity of this emitted light can be varied from soft to too bright to look at without strain.

These Tall Whites have very high intelligence and an information-processing speed which Mr. Hall estimates at 3-1/2 times faster than bright humans. The Tall Whites's technology is advanced. One element of their technology is a transporter suit which they put on which provides personal antigravity levitation and above-ground movement, as well as force-field protection against attacks, e.g., would slow a bullet to where it would fall to the ground.

Another element of their technology is their spacecraft. They operate smaller scout ships which can transport a limited number of individuals. And then they have deep-space vessels that can travel between star systems. Their scout crafts are white in color, ellipsoidal or egg-shaped, with a molded flat bottom. It has a row of large windows on each side, sort of like an airplane. Its size is comparable to that of a passenger train's diesel engine and has two windows in front like such a train diesel engine.

The range of these scout craft permits them to travel as far as the Moon or even Mars. But not deep space. Their deep-space vessels are very large, sleek, black antigravity craft, 70 feet high, 300 feet wide, and 500 feet long. These vessels also have pilot windows, as well as regularly spaced running lights along their edges. Their range extends out many light years into space. Their top speed exceeds the speed of light by a considerable margin. Yes, Einstein was wrong about that.

The Tall Whites in their interactions with humans often carry stun devices for protection, eight-inch-long white tubes which can emit a microwave beam that can excite the sodium atoms in the nervous system of a threatening human and render the human unconscious for a limited period of time.

A contingent of Tall Whites have been resident in the Indian Springs Valley region of central Nevada since before the first Euro-American settlers moved west. These Tall Whites have found Earth to be a convenient waystation in their travels within this sector of the galaxy. As Charles Hall explains it, Earth's sun is located in the middle of a very large, 10-light-year-diameter empty section of the galaxy. Most stars occur in groups, with another star within two light-months distance. Thus, for civilizations living on star systems near this empty-space "bubble", Earth serves as a handy mid-way rest, supply and repair station.

The Tall Whites have established a residential location within French Peak, about 25 miles north-northwest of Indian Springs Auxiliary Air Force Station, Nevada. They also have a main base and space vehicle repair facility which is also built into the side of a hill at the north end of Indian Springs Valley, not too many miles from their residential location.

When Tall Whites deep-space vessels approach Earth from space, they make an initial landing at Dog Bone Lake, 25 miles east of French Peak on the Nellis Air Force Range, Nevada. Then they make a lateral transition to the main hanger, where huge doors part to admit the vessel, then re-close. Presidents (including LBJ), select top Senators and Congressmembers, and select Generals and Admirals are aware of, and have actually met Tall Whites, either at carefully-arranged events in Washington, DC, or on the Nellis Air Force Base Range, Nevada The Tall Whites have made arrangements with the U.S. government at the highest levels to have their central-Nevada facilities undisturbed. In exchange they provide advanced scientific and technological information which has permitted rapid advances in science and technology on Earth. Some of their scientists work as technical consultants at advanced laboratory installations, including northern California, Nevada, and elsewhere.

The Tall Whites facilities in central Nevada serve as locale for Visitors from other star system to come and study the English language and American culture. These Visitors are intensely curious about life and customs on Earth.

Evidence for the Testimony of Charles Hall and the Tall Whites

Was Charles Hall telling us the truth the whole time?

Charles Hall was a contactee was an airman who worked at Nellis Field and Indian Springs, Nevada, throughout the 1960s, enlisting in 1964. Later he was sent to Vietnam and patriotically served his country in that war. I've heard many people online dismiss him and criticize him as a liar or kook; however, I believe his testimony to be legitimate. In fact, I found his testimony to be some of the most legitimate of any of the genuine contactees I have found. It was his case that verified for me that ET contact is real and proven as a reality. A few years ago, I had an email exchange with him about the tall whites' technology, and he confirmed parts of his story for me.

Who is he? Born in Wisconsin in the mid-part of the 20th century, he had a difficult and strange upbringing, although, in many ways, it was like other boys of the era. Later, he joined the Air Force and was stationed at Indian Springs, Nevada, near Las Vegas as a weather observer. However, what he did there was definitely more than just the weather. In his memoir, Millennial Hospitality, he describes how he was often alone on the ranges until he started seeing horse-shaped lights in the distance. The legends of locals of “range-four Harry” and a “radioactive horse” pervaded, especially since this was close to the Nevada Test Range, where nuclear testing was conducted.

He was terrified and thought he was hallucinating, or crazy, yet he still went out onto the ranges like he was ordered. Eventually, he learned they were radioactive, not a horse, but humanoid extraterrestrials that wore bright outfits that could float. The tall whites were normally human-sized but could grow up to 7 or 8 feet tall in old age, were very thin, and had a pale white complexion. They wore human clothes, however, also wore bright suits that allowed them to float. They had white “tic-tac” shaped spacecraft that could float silently and travel thousands of kilometers an hour. He noticed the schedule of their deep-black spacecraft that flew on the schedule of the moon.

He eventually befriended some and believed they came from a star close to Arcturus in the constellation Bootes. There were difficult situations like the woman “Pamela” that he met that shot him with what was basically a phaser. A microwave beam weapon that incapacitated him. In fact, the technology the tall whites possessed isn’t that different from Battlestar Galactica, Star Wars, or Star Trek. “The Teacher” was a guide to their culture and people, and in many ways, they weren’t all that different from modern Americans; however, in other ways they are quite distinct. They didn’t eat meat; they were only vegetarian, could be capricious, or caring; they could also read Charlie’s mind with the help of technology they used, like Alan from the White Sands Incident.

Their appearance reminds me of Castithan from the SyFy series Defiance or the engineers from Prometheus. Blue eyes, tall, pale white, thin, and gaunt. Hall states that they have been here for a very long time, at least since James Madison was president, and that they can live up to 600 years old, meaning they could have been here since the 18th century at least. They looked human enough that they walked into Las Vegas to gamble, with sunglasses and makeup, and not be noticed. Charles himself has stated that there are enough weird-looking people in Vegas that they wouldn't be noticed.

These tall whites could be brave, and he befriended them despite the mutual fear. I wish Charles learned more about what was going on in the dusty desert days he was out there.

Evidence

However, the skeptics will immediately retort, “Charles Hall is a fraud or a liar.” This isn’t true; I can prove it. First, the military records he has in his books prove he was at Nellis and was in the military doing some of what he claimed he did. Read the books yourself and determine this for yourself; he wasn’t lying about that. His service record speaks for itself; he was stationed at Nellis as an airman. Secondly, Paola Harris, the noted researcher, has done extensive research on Charles, even taking him out to Indian Springs again so he can guide her to where the ranges were located. Many describe him as intelligent, likes to play chess, and experienced something strange, confirming the legends of “range Four-Harry.”

Key parts of Hall’s story, like the building of an underground spaceport for the Tall Whites, are documented in newspaper articles of the time.

According to the article around $300 million dollars were spent, inflation-adjusted, that would be around $3.5 billion dollars today. What kind of simple housing facility costs $3.5 billion dollars? For reference, the nearby housing complex at Ft. Bliss cost \$4.8 billion, housing more than 37,000 soldiers and 10 million square feet of space. However, Ft. Bliss is like a small city. It was more like they were building a small city out in Indian Springs than simple barracks. Indian Springs, today Creech AFB, has some facilities but nothing that seems like it would have cost that amount back then.

Indian Springs Project Keyed to Defense Plans

The Indian Springs project, preliminary work on which already has begun, will not be an A-bomb program but definitely will be tied into the defense plans, it was learned from authoritative sources this morning.

The contract, which recently was awarded to the McKee Construction company, is a preliminary project, it was stated, and is for the construction of housing facilities at the Indian Springs base.

It is understood, from reliable Washington sources that the over-all expense of constructing the project may run somewhere around $300,000,000 and will be even larger than the huge Basic Magnesium plant as a construction job for southern Nevada.

The actual details of the program are cloaked in a security blackout and no information will be released regarding the use to which the construction will be put when it is completed.

Las Vegas Review-Journal

Paola's research is the most extensive and indicates to me that Charles was telling the truth in part in regard to his experiences near Las Vegas. David Coote also interviewed some of Charles' military colleagues and they remembered Charles and the legends about the tall whites. I myself have done some research and found what could be the tall white scout spacecraft in the mountains near the ranges Charles talked about.

The evidence for Charles' story is mounting, and any debunker needs to somehow prove that all the evidence is made up and that all the co-witnesses to Charles are liars. I think Charles will be proven right concerning his contact experiences.

Hall's Other Experiences

Hall had encounters with other aliens, like the typical grays close to Desert Center, California. Some of them had green-yellow skin and were possibly reptilian in origin. As well as the human group he calls “Norwegians with 24 Teeth,” whom he encountered in his youth. They look exactly like humans from Northern Europe, and Charles himself surmised he was related to them genetically. They arrived from a nearby red dwarf star, contacted Edward Teller, and wanted to build a spaceport in Scandinavia. Incidentally, this confirms the information in the book by Lyssa Royal, The Prism of Lyra, which states that humans from the constellation of Lyra, off-world, colonized Earth centuries ago and gave rise to the different human races as the book describes it.

It could be that South Park was right, and Charles Hall is just one among many confirming this. Legends among Native Americans of ancestors from the stars abound, like the Hopi and the legends of Chuhukon. Charles outright states that northern Scandinavian people like the Saami and Finnic peoples also have descent from these off-world humans. Whether he is right, I do not know. However, I do this, Charles was honest about his experiences. Robert Bigelow, the noted investor, also believes the same in a 60 Minutes Interview he gave.

Critics might say this sounds more like sci-fi; however, science fiction might be more real than just fiction. I've wondered whether Charles could have hallucinated it all, but there is enough supporting evidence to suggest something strange happened to him. Other possible explanations like deception are possible, however, the motives here are unclear. He waited for decades to publish his memoirs and if money were a motivating factor then the monetary explanation doesn't make much sense. In addition, his records supporting his career as an airman support the argument that these were real experiences not just fabrications.

A purely psychological explanation is possible and I cannot rule it out, either for Hall or even myself. However, the independent corroboration and other experiences indicate this isn't as likely to be the case. Listen to interviews with Hall, read his books, and decide for yourself. In time I hope we can come to some conclusion about what really happened and learn more about humanity itself in the process.

Interview of the Month – Insider Charles Hall and the Tall Whites

What evidence is there that Extraterrestrials are interacting with Humans on this planet?

In addition to my own experiences, the best evidence that I have consists of the verbal reports given to me during the 1965-to-1968 time frame by the other men who served with me in the USAF. I myself, do not have any physical evidence, photographs, logbooks, anything printed, or written reports. However, over the years, I have seen several pictures and highly reliable reports published in books by other authors that showed and reported on the tall whites. The pictures also showed one of the Tall White's scout crafts. One of the most interesting reports was published by Alan J. Hyneck of Project Blue Book fame. He reported having chemically analyzed material that was reported to have fallen out from the bottom of a UFO. In his report, published back in the late 1960's, (not sure of the exact date of publication) he stated that its chemical composition was similar to the composition of slag taken from an aluminum furnace that had been heated to approximately 1100 degrees F (I am doing this from memory and believe that I have the proper temperature).

He failed to notice that the chemical composition of that “aluminum slag” is the same as the composition of modern fiber optics that has been heated to its melting temperature. Optical fibers have a chemical composition that is very high in aluminum. If he had noticed the similarity, he would have had strong evidence for the existence of UFOs that also pointed the way toward understanding the construction of their anti-gravity drive power plant. If American scientists would inspect the sub-atomic particles that are easily created, (such as mesons, baryons, etc.) to see which ones can have their path of flight controlled by optical fibers, his work would have resulted in one of the major discoveries in physics of all time.

The physical construction of the tall white scout craft and the tall white deep space craft is further described in my books. In addition, in the appendix of Millennial Hospitality III the Road Home, I describe my theory of physics entitled “Hall Photon Theory”. I believe that it explains why the construction of the tall white craft allows those craft to rapidly accelerate to velocities greatly more than the speed of light.

Can you speak from personal experience?

Yes. My three-book series entitled “Millennial Hospitality”, and associated writings, describe in detail my personal experiences at Indian Springs, Nevada, and my personal interactions with the tall white extraterrestrials, whose Base is located in the mountains north of Indian Springs, Nevada.

What was your job and position on the Nellis Base? Please state the dates.

I enlisted in the USAF in July 1964. After completing basic training at Lackland AFB in San Antonio, Texas, I was trained as a USAF weather observer at USAF Weather Training School at Chanute AFB, Illinois. My duties were that of a USAF weather observer during my entire service in the USAF. In late March or early April of 1965, I was assigned to the weather squadron stationed at Nellis AFB at Las Vegas, Nevada. I was stationed at Nellis AFB from the early spring of 1965 until May 1967. While I was permanently stationed at Nellis AFB, Nevada, I was assigned to several temporary tours of duty as the duty weather observer to the Nellis gunnery ranges that are located in Indian Springs, Nevada. Temporary Duty meant that I received extra pay and benefits while serving on the Indian Springs ranges. However, my chain of command, my pay records, and my mailing address remained at Nellis AFB. In between my temporary tours of duty at Indian Springs, I could return to Nellis AFB for duty for various short periods.

For example, I returned to duty at Nellis AFB for the Christmas holidays of 1965. As described in my first book, Millennial Hospitality, at first, the other USAF weather observers and I shared and rotated the duty at Indian Springs. However, during the late summer of 1965, and at least twice again in the very early spring of 1966, in separate incidents, my replacement weather observers reported being terrified and threatened while out on the ranges. One was very badly attacked and given a medical discharge. Another two-man team of weather observers refused to go out onto the ranges because they reported that they were followed and harassed when they were out there. After those events, as described in my first book, a committee of high-ranking USAF officers and government officials was formed and they decided to send me alone as the primary duty weather observer for the Indian Springs gunnery ranges, while still maintaining the temporary duty status with its extra pay and privileges. I was given special orders, as described in my first book. From that time on, I was stationed almost continuously at Indian Springs. I returned to duty at Nellis AFB only for a few short periods to rest and take leave, etc.

Description

Extra-terrestrial
Species: SAM_Nordics
Aliases: Swedes, Tall whites, Nordics
Height: 5 - 6.5 feet
Weight: 120 - 240 pounds (estimated)
Eyes: Human
Hair: Blonde
Skin: Pale white
Sex: Male and Female
Communication: Telepathic
Location of Origin
Mt Ziel - Northern Australia
Distinguishing Characteristics
Share common physical features with human beings
(especially Scandinavians)
Are taller than the average human
Have more of a muscular build than the average human

Map of Indian Springs Facility

On 07 May 1967, I was transferred from Nellis AFB to Binh Thuy AFB, Republic of South Vietnam. I was stationed at Binh Thuy from 07 May 1967 until 08 May 1968. I was stationed at Binh Thuy over the Communist Great Tet Offensive. Having completed my Vietnam tour of duty, I returned to the U.S., and I was honorably discharged from the USAF on 08 May 1968 at Travis AFB, California.

Were there others besides you who saw the Tall Whites?

Yes, the tall white extraterrestrials were seen out on the Indian Springs Ranges by many other USAF personnel. These USAF personnel frequently encountered them at close range in and around the buildings located out on the various ranges during both day and nighttime operations. Encountering the Tall White extraterrestrials at close range was such a shock that they were frequently reported as ghosts, angels, or fantastic creatures. For example, weather observers who saw a group of them standing side by side would commonly report having seen a radioactive floating horse named "Range Four Harry." Other USAF personnel would report seeing short glimpses of the tall whites at close range and then report having had a "Missing Time" experience or having had an unusual dream.

Were they ever in the company of another military and when?

Yes. As reported in my books and writings, I frequently saw the tall white extraterrestrials accompanied by USAF Generals and other high-ranking USAF officers.

When was your first encounter with these white beings?

In late May 1965 and early June 1965. However, it took me many months to control the shock, the terror, and my natural fear of them, and to accept the reality of my experiences. As described in my books and writings, for many months I lived in denial of my experiences, preferring instead to believe almost any other explanation for what was happening.

What message did the teacher give you and how do they wish to interact with us?

The Tall White female who called herself “The Teacher” explicitly stated to me that all they really wanted was for people to enjoy them, while they were here.

Do you still think they are there?

Yes. I believe that they are still there because the main hangar and their living quarters were permanent constructions located in the mountains at the north end of the Indian Springs valley. The aliens live underground. The main hanger is underground and dug into a mountainside. It has an ideal location. It allows the tall white deep space craft to easily arrive here on earth, land in front of the hanger entrance, and to enter and later leave the hanger without being easily observed and without interfering with civilian airline operations in the Las Vegas area.

Do you believe that there could be other races on Earth and Where?

Yes. In the third book entitled “Millennial Hospitality III, The Road Home” I describe the second race of aliens that I have personally met that are here on Earth. In my book, I refer to them as The Norwegians. I believe that they are coming here from one of the nearby stars such as, perhaps, Bernard’s star, which is approximately 5.5 light years away. They might also be coming from the next star past Barnard’s star, which is approximately 6 light years away and located in the same general direction.

I encountered them in Cambridge, Wisconsin in 1961, and again in Madison Wisconsin in the fall of 1962 and the very early spring of 1963. They look exactly like people from southern Norway, except that they have only 24 teeth and slightly webbed toes. Humans, of course, have 32 teeth. The teeth on these aliens have much shorter roots than human teeth, and they can replace any tooth that they may accidentally lose. This means that they are not limited to only two sets of teeth the way humans are. I would think that there would exist some dentists, both in Madison, Wisconsin and in northern Europe in other University communities in the colder portions of the world that could verify their existence. Incidentally, as described in my books and writings, the ones that I personally met, had unusually calm and pleasant dispositions. They seemed to want only to fit into our society and enjoy life.

Why did you write Millennial Hospitality?

I wrote The Millennial Hospitality series because I want my children and grandchildren to understand how I felt when I encountered the tall white extraterrestrials out in the Indian Springs Valley in Nevada.

E.T. Race: The Tall Whites

Out of the massive lore of dozens of supposed alien races that make up the UFO phenomenon, the Tall Whites (sometimes referred to as Nordics) are probably one of the least frightening because they appear similar to humans. They are humanoid appearance often has them mistaken as Pleiadeans, to which at first glance they seem interchangeable. However, the Tall Whites are an entirely different race and winners of the most original name award. Whistleblowers claim the United States military has been in cahoots with these E.T.s since the 1950s, specifically the Air Force. They're described as human looking for the most part... just huge; sometimes taller than 8 feet. They have blonde, white hair (Often stark white) across the board. In appearance, they're very individualistic just like humans. The Tall Whites share the physical traits of a white chalky complexion. The aliens' most common eye color is blue- though there have been reported exceptions.

The Tall Whites walk funny on Earth because their bodies are used to stronger gravity. They're normally reported to wear jumpsuits of white or blue; contactees have reported a variety of colors though. They live to be insanely old, up to 800 years, and don't age similar to how human beings age at all. The only comparison to humans is size- until they reach the age of 400. Then their growing process goes crazy; depending on age these E.T.s can appear like giants to us.

The Tall Whites have individualized talents and interests with varying intellectual capabilities just like us on Earth. They use technology to communicate with humans telepathically and are known to carry devices on them with telekinetic capabilities they use to defend themselves or perform manual labor with. On their home planet, days are much longer, so they usually stay awake up two to three days at a time on our world, then sleep the same amount of time they were awake. Comparably, the Tall Whites spend more time sleeping than humans, equal to half their lifespan.

The Tall Whites have never revealed their homeworld to any contactee but seem to revere the star Arcturus. It's very important to them, or at least something by it is. Maybe their teachers are another alleged E.T. species known to reside in the star system, the Arcturians, who are said to be a blue-skinned spiritually orientated loving race.

Arcturians

The Tall Whites don't die of old age like most humanoid species in the cosmos. Some unstable nature of their genes causes them to outgrow their bones as they get older. Researchers have speculated that one of the reasons aliens have such an interest in humans is their genetic stability and adaptability. The Tall Whites' painful death by essentially outgrowing their bodies could be from genetic tinkering gone wrong. However, any such notions on the matter have no basis in factual encounters given by contactees.

There are many historical references ancient alien theorists point out indicating the Tall Whites visited Earth in our past. But they say that about all aliens and sadly it's become kind of a joke to the E.T. research community. Like the Aztec mythology of white gods and such. Though what little evidence exists of their presence on Earth suggests they didn't land here until the 1950s.

Throughout the Tall White's history, their spacecraft technology has often changed drastically, their current ships are all different from one another according to Charles Hall, a nuclear physicist U.S. Air Force Whistleblower. So, the UFO witnesses have different tales on what their spacecraft look like. However, the classic saucer shape is the most common. The Tall Whites allegedly shared some of their technology with the Air Force over a decent amount of time. The classified meetings took place on a remote no-fly zone base in the desert with extremely limited access. Charles Hall, one of a handful of non-combatant Air Force personnel, was allowed to sit in at these meetings for the nuclear physicist's scientific input. He and others like him were integral to the Air Force commander's less scientific minds during the decision-making process. Hall interacted with the aliens many times during the technological exchanges, even sitting across from them during negotiations. He concluded they were plant-eaters, never eating any of the food the Air Force provided at the meetings. Instead, they would eat from prepared bags of what looked like mushroom pudding to Hall. He also noticed them collecting Earth seeds on many occasions, concluding the Tall Whites were most likely to be vegetarians.

The Tall Whites are indifferent to Earth. While not being hostile they're not friendly either. They have their own agenda.

It's also rumored the E.T.s had a meeting with President Eisenhower to end the government's nuclear warhead building in exchange for advanced technology. This happened in 1954, under the guise of Eisenhower needing immediate dental surgery, but that was just a cover story so he could meet the Tall Whites in secrecy. This meeting didn't end well. It's said shortly after the Greys offered Eisenhower a different deal for advanced tech, and he could keep developing the nukes. The Greys just wanted to abduct people and experiment on the American populace without question. With any civilian stories or worries suppressed by the government. Supposedly, President Eisenhower accepted this deal. A boon in the tech industry shortly followed.

Contactees often say the Tall Whites don't pose a threat to humans and principally engage in exchanges with governments. They also mainly used Air Force bases as a type of rest stop for their deep space travel. They seem to have no ulterior motives and don't go around abducting humans against their will. Not much is known of any religion the Tall Whites may subscribe to either, though they do seem to have a spiritual aspect to them. Whistleblower, Charles Hall overheard a woman reference God while talking to the aliens, and they seemed to understand the reference, treating it respectfully.

Hall has mentioned the Tall Whites being envious of certain human abilities. Like the ability to multi-task. The aliens for the most part only focus on one thing at a time, which can make them seem robotic. They also admired the tremendous physical damage human bodies can take, and how quickly our bodies heal. However, that doesn't mean they view humans even close to their level as a civilized culture. They look at humans as "rough and tumble creatures" to quote Hall. Our discovery of nuclear weapons greatly frightened them in the 1950s because they didn't want to see a planet capable of supporting life wasted in meaningless war. The Tall Whites would never step in against our will as a species though. There seems to be a code of conduct in the galactic community that doesn't allow space-faring civilizations to interfere with developing sentient species.

There is some kind of protocol aliens have to follow if they interact with humanity

Many Tall Whites never learned English during their stays at the Air Force base. If they didn't have the technology on them that allowed communication telepathically with humans, they would point and grunt to get their point across. The way they communicated with each other is very different than our form of speech. The Tall White's vocal cords emit frequencies humans can't comprehend by ear. This made some people on the base think they communicated telepathically with one another because many found it odd that their mouths would move but they didn't hear anything. The aliens almost rely completely on their technology to communicate with humans.

The technology that was exchanged helped us to create better radios and electronics. Allowing better quality of overall products being produced as well as the quality of our building materials. They exchanged information relating to medicine, food, clothing, the solar system, and plastics. In return, the Tall Whites received a deep space base, as well as future trade goods, promised based on what they gave to the Air Force. The Tall Whites had no interest in exchanging any weapon technology despite being asked many times by the military. The E.T.s refused outright to give any technology that outstretched our current level of development as a species too.

Of all the alien encounters in the UFO phenomenon, the Tall Whites are incredibly rare to be encountered. Even rarer in recent times. The race of extraterrestrials has no negative stigma attached to them for the most part, and their interactions with Earth are pretty much only business-orientated. Well, other than trying to convince us to get rid of our nukes that is.
