

Mystery Space Machines by John Lenard Walson

- A Review -

2008.

It seems that some of the stars above us are not stars at all...

In 2007 a John Lenard Walson has invented a new gadget capable of extending his amateur telescope resolution. The new way to extend the capabilities of his eight inch Meade telescope to shoot his videos has enabled him to achieve optical resolutions - at almost the diffraction limit - not commonly achievable. The discovery was first publicized by Jeff Rense at "Mystery Space Machines Above. Black Ops, Star Wars Or ET? Or All Of The Above?" in December 2007.

Walson claims he could film not only the International Space Station (ISS), but that he discovered that many "stars" in the sky are in fact HUGE structured objects - giant machines are "fixed" in the sky. With this new-found ability, he has proceeded to videotape, night and day, many strange and heretofore unseen objects in earth orbit. Walson claims that he can record them in plain daylight at noon and that he can record sounds from the machines in space. The resulting astro-photographic video footage has revealed a raft of machines, hardware, satellites, spacecraft and possibly space ships which otherwise appear as 'stars'... if they appear at all.

Photographing the International Space Station (ISS) and satellites was proved possible and this may support Walson's finds. You can read this article on the NYT about amateur enthusiasts who actually track and image orbiting objects. Also see Excerpt from BBC's "The Satellite Story" on the subject matter about By Mike Tyrrell and Phil Masding. More amazing shots of the ISS by Mike Tyrrell and Phil Masding can be seen on Tyrell's website.

In my opinion the imagery of Walson does not look any much different from Tyrrell's images:

The discovery has been of great debate and controversy ever since with convincing evidence on both sides. Debunkers like forgetomori argue that the technology of the video recording was not revealed and the images are hoaxes since it is possible to reproduce very similar images. In fact, "waveguide3" suggests he recreated the videos using models made with aluminum foil, shot at a distance and distorted with mirrors and glasses.

Are We Supposed To Be Seeing These Things?

What is John Lenard Walson videotaping with his proprietary telescope videocam technique? Are these just satellites and space junk? Or, are we seeing large and very sophisticated spacecraft for the first time that we AREN'T supposed to see? Walson received the following comment about one of the videos:

"Hello again. And, again, my congratulations on your superb astrophotography. MIT Lincoln Laboratory is the group which has built some of the things you are seeing. Much of what they do is what used to be the Star Wars project, which no doubt involves some of your objects."

Maybe some of Walson's images ARE of sensitive, secret US military Star Wars machines. Maybe even 'secret' weapons platforms in space, which the US military has been rumored to have for at least 20 years. It's clear the major space powers are far more heavily-invested in space than they will admit. As a reflection of that reality, there has been a lot of recent talk about 'anti-satellite' weapons 'needed' by competing countries to 'protect themselves.' Most recently, China has been discussing its anti-sat programs and even threatened to destroy or disable all GPS satellites which over-fly Chinese territory. It's anyone's guess how many billions the US military and government have poured into black ops NASA-facilitated programs of 'secret' spying and surveillance programs, and military space weapons systems over the decades.

John Lenard Walson's video images and sounds may well show some of these advanced machines. So, what you see could be spacecrafts, and maybe even space ships, parked or stationed in orbit above the Earth. It is also within the realm of possibility some of these items might be products of non-human intelligence.

There is much more to the John Lenard Walson story...

Let's start with one such object in orbit as videotaped by John Lenard Walson. Once again, here is what the ISS looks like through the telescope and video camera lens of astro-photographer Walson... It is the International Space Station... the ISS... take a look... Keeping that image and it's relative size appearance in mind, now ask yourself, what is THIS?

And here is the actual video footage from which the above freeze frame is taken followed by some footage of something that is NOT the ISS:

There are indeed hundreds of satellites in Earth orbit as you will read in the summary which follows. It is also possible to track these machines. (See: Real Time Satellite Tracking.) However, the images you see are clearly of large and sizeable machines which have not been seen before.

According to the Union Of Concerned Scientists about orbiting spacecraft and satellites in Earth orbit:

- There are more than 800 active satellites currently in orbit.
- Amazingly, they represent four percent of the total number of objects currently cataloged by the U.S. space surveillance network; the rest includes abandoned satellites, spent rocket boosters, and other debris.
- The United States owns more than 400 active satellites, just over 50 percent of all satellites.
- Russia and China have the second and third highest number of space assets, owning 89 and 35 satellites, respectively.
- Civilian satellites, which perform tasks for the commercial, scientific, and government sectors, make up the majority of U.S. satellites.
- Russia's space assets are split nearly evenly between military and civil missions, though there are not separate military and civilian space programs.
- Only a very small percentage of other countries' satellites are military in nature.

Satellites are used for:

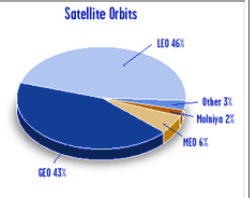

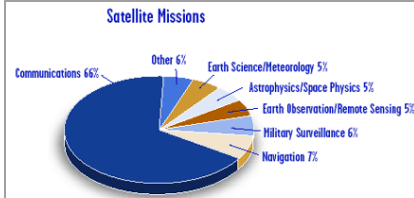

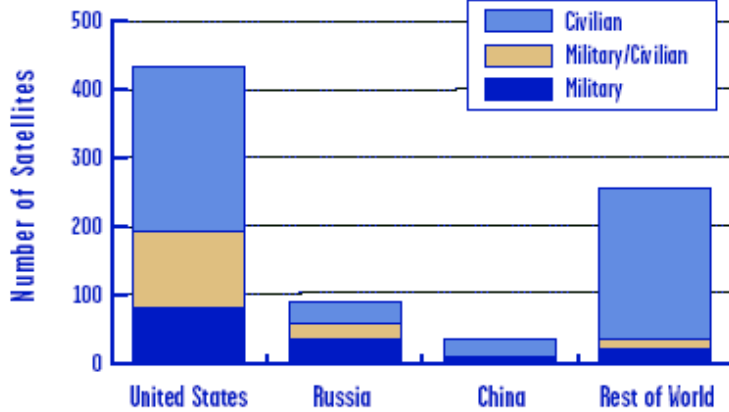

- navigation
- military surveillance
- Earth observation and remote sensing
- astrophysics and space physics
- Earth science and meteorology missions,

...each comprise about five to seven percent of total satellites. Approximately two-thirds of all active satellites are used for communications.

Satellites orbit Earth in several distinct regions of space:

- Low Earth orbits (LEO) - about 80 kilometers (km) to 2000 km above Earth. Includes:
 - military intelligence satellites
 - weather satellites
- Geosynchronous orbits (GEO) - 36,000 km above Earth. Includes:
 - commercial and military communications satellites
 - satellites providing early warning of ballistic missile launch
- Medium Earth orbits (MEO) - between LEO and GEO. Includes:
 - navigation satellites (Navstar, Glonass)
- Molniya orbit - a highly elliptical orbit with a 12-hour period. Includes:
 - communication satellites for regions near the North Pole

Estimates of Space Assets, by Country

Orbital Debris

Orbital debris is any human-made object in orbit that no longer serves a useful purpose, including discarded equipment, abandoned satellites, bolts and other hardware released during satellite deployment, and particles from explosions or collisions. The table below gives current estimates of orbital debris in three size categories. As the table shows, approximately 40 percent of all orbital debris larger than one millimeter in size is in LEO. Large numbers of naturally occurring particles ("meteoroids") add to the total number of orbital objects less than one centimeter in size, but are not included in this table.

Estimates of Orbital Debris

Average Size	Pieces LEO Debris	Total Pieces Of Debris
1 mm - 1 cm	140,000,000	330,000,000
1 cm - 10 cm	180,000	560,000
> than 10 cm	9,700	18,000

What you are about to see is quite remarkable.

It seems that some of the stars above us are not stars at all... as you shall see. A young man by the name of John Lenard Walson has discovered a new way to extend the capabilities of small telescopes and has been able to achieve optical resolutions - at almost the diffraction limit - not commonly achievable.

With this new-found ability, he has proceeded to videotape, night and day, many strange and heretofore unseen objects in earth orbit. The resulting astro-photographic video footage has revealed a raft of machines, hardware, satellites, spacecraft and possibly space ships which otherwise appear as 'stars'... if they appear at all.

There are, indeed, hundreds of satellites in Earth orbit as you will read in the summary which follows. However, the images you will see are clearly of large and sizeable machines which have not been seen before.

Let's start with one such object in orbit as videotaped by John Lenard Walson.

It is the International Space Station... the ISS... take a look...

Keeping that image and it's relative size appearance in mind, now ask yourself, what is THIS?...

And if you find that one intriguing, here are more examples of the scores of space objects above us John Walson has captured on tape...

Once again, here is what the ISS looks like through the telescope and video camera lens of astro-photographer Walson...

And here is the actual video footage from which the above freeze frame is taken followed by some footage of something that is NOT the ISS.

What is it?

If you might be wondering what the Shuttle looks like, here it is...

So, what are these other huge machines and spacecraft?

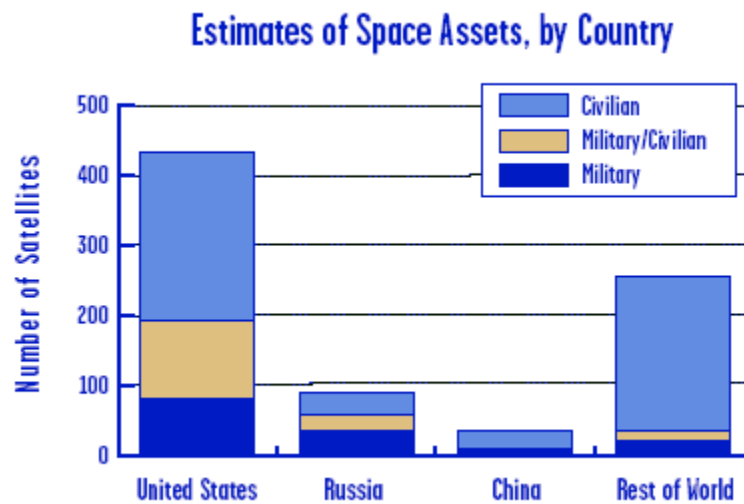

Now let's take a look at some of Walson's remarkable video footage showing satellites and spaceships (?) above our heads in Earth orbit.

How Many Known Satellites Are In Orbit? How Much 'Junk'?

Keeping the footage you've just seen in mind, here is what the Union Of Concerned Scientists has to say about orbiting spacecraft and satellites in Earth orbit...

- There are more than 800 active satellites currently in orbit.
- Amazingly, they represent four percent of the total number of objects currently cataloged by the U.S. space surveillance network; the rest includes abandoned satellites, spent rocket boosters, and other debris.

So,

- What is John Lenard Walson videotaping with his proprietary telescope videocam technique?
- Are these just satellites and space junk?
- Or, are we seeing large and very sophisticated spacecraft for the first time that we AREN'T supposed to see?

Above is another video freeze frame of a sunlit spacecraft shown at the top of the picture.

Below it is a SECOND craft which happened to pass by at an extremely high rate of speed. John pulled a single frame from his video (at 30 frames per second) and sent it to us for a closer look.

Contrast broadening of this freeze frame below reveals hidden visual data, including the enormity of the spacecraft as well as what might be a third smaller craft at the bottom of the frame....

Are We Supposed To Be Seeing These Things?

Walson received the following comment about one of the videos. Does it answer all the questions? No, but perhaps some of them...

"Hello again.

And, again, my congratulations on your superb astrophotography.

MIT Lincoln Laboratory is the group which has built some of the things you are seeing. Much of what they do is what used to be the Star Wars project, which no doubt involves some of your objects."

Maybe some of Walson's images ARE of sensitive, secret US military Star Wars machines. Maybe even 'secret' weapons platforms in space, which the US military has been rumored to have for at least 20 years.

Remember, also, the young UK hacker, Gary McKinnon, who got into the Pentagon database years ago and found a secret US Navy file titled 'Non-Terrestrial Officers'. McKinnon now faces LIFE in a US prison for hacking into those Pentagon files.

Here is more on McKinnon:

Someone Isn't Happy With John Lenard Walson

Judging by the following video footage taken by Walson at his home, it is clear he has ventured into territory that is, shall we say, 'disconcerting' to some government or military agencies who don't like him videotaping these large, mysterious orbiting machines.

The result of Walson's 'impertinence' was the almost immediate inauguration of routine visits from numerous unmarked large helicopters which began regular day and night visits to his home. Here are some still frames from video John recorded of his tormentors.

Pay particular attention to the huge, twin-rotor Chinook's pass right over the tree in his backyard (top right, below) to give you an idea of how serious these flights are.

And how clear the message is intended to be.

Here is a small sample of the video showing the outrageous helicopter harassment, intimidation and threats Walson endures...

Actual Sounds From These Space Machines

In addition to discovering and refining his optical telescope videotaping technique, John has also discovered how to actually hear and record the sounds in real time coming from the particular craft he is videotaping.

By carefully aligning a satellite dish receiver with his telescope, he has been able to record some very unusual and intriguing sound from the different spacecraft...

In summary, what you have seen are spacecraft, and maybe even space ships, parked or stationed in orbit above the Earth. It's clear the major space powers are far more heavily-invested in space than they will admit.

As a reflection of that reality, there has been a lot of recent talk about 'anti-satellite' weapons 'needed' by competing countries to 'protect themselves.'

Most recently, China has been discussing its anti-sat programs and even threatened to destroy or disable all GPS satellites which over-fly Chinese territory.

It's anyone's guess how many billions the US military and government have poured into black ops NASA-facilitated programs of 'secret' spying and surveillance programs, and military space weapons systems over the decades.

John Lenard Walson's video images and sounds may well show some of these advanced machines.

It is also within the realm of possibility some of these items might be products of non-human intelligence. Of course, the people who would know aren't talking. There is much more to the John Lenard Walson story... more images and videos will become available soon.

In the meantime, here are more current examples of Walson's mysteries to consider... all of which he is making available for free...

The reaction to our first story of John Lenard Walson's discovery of very large space machines in orbit above us was as expected, and ranged from shock and surprise to honest skepticism and questions demanding to know his technique. We have received a three more brand new videos from John which are even more provocative than the first group.

Here are some new freeze frames from John's videos that show more mystery machines in orbit overhead...

Site Visitor Reaction To Walson's Videos

Among the many emails received, here is one of particular interest:

Hi Jeff -

Yes, This is all true. These machines are parked everywhere, and they have been for a number of years now. On clear nights at my ranch, it is possible to watch them occasionally entering the atmosphere. Of course, I have reported for years on the many strange objects to be seen in the Yakima Valley and over the Yakima Reservation next to where I live.

When these objects enter the atmosphere they create a brilliant blue flash similar to the old time photo flash bulbs. It is almost as if they materialize out of nowhere and/or de-cloak somehow. Immediately after the flash it is possible to watch them cross the sky as a bright luminescent light. They often will cross over the zenith and continue out of sight but other times they will suddenly stop and remain in place, taking on all the appearances of a star. However, with a bit of training, it is possible to often discern the difference.

In my area, they tend to appear out a west/southwest quadrant bounded roughly by Mount Adams, Mt. Saint Helens and Mt. Rainier. I have often reported on these phenomena in the past. Some of my articles concerning this subject have been posted in years past on Rense.com as well as Rumor Mill News, STA, and other sites. In the Yakima basin, the years 2003 and 2004 were the most active for sightings of these objects. Many other locals in my area have been witness to this phenomena.

Thank you, SO much, for posting this latest report on this incredible issue going on right over our heads. These objects are NOT stars. They are simply masquerading as stars. There are a huge number of them above us at any one time. It is often possible to watch them subtly change orientation against a background of true stars. All it takes is some careful scrutiny to see the truth about what is flying above us all, in low orbit, in our night and daytime sky.

Once again, through his telescope, videocam and perseverance in the face of military/government harassment and surveillance, John Lenard Walson has given the world a fascinating, compelling and intriguing glimpse at what may well be the biggest secret program of all.

At some point, we will gain confirmation as to what these machines are and who constructed and owns them. In the meantime, John Walson continues to give his research to the world through these exclusive reports.

'Stars' Or Space Craft?

In this latest set of videos and still frames, John Walson demonstrates more mystery machines in orbit. It is not known if all of these craft are stationary or move to various positions. Many skywatchers report observing what appear to the naked eye as 'stars' which seem to move to different locations if watched carefully. Some of John's footage seems to show this kind of movement as well.

To begin, here are a series of still frames from his newest telescopic video recordings...

Enlargement

Next is an interesting set of photos taken by the Mars Global Surveyor of two other spacecraft, Mars Odyssey (left) and Mars Express (right), also orbiting Mars. It's notable to see the similarity of how orbiting craft appear both above Earth and above Mars...

Here is the full video segment...

Stars In The Evening Sky? Or Space Machines?

After dozens of hours of videotaping bright lights in the night sky with a camcorder only, Mr. Walson has come to the conclusion these 'stars' are, in many cases, the same large spacecraft he has been capturing through his modified telescope.

These bright star-like lights are at high altitude, or in orbit, and appear as 'orbs' when captured by a regular camcorder at full zoom without his telescope because they are beyond the optical resolution capabilities of a normal camcorder which sees them as round 'orbs.'

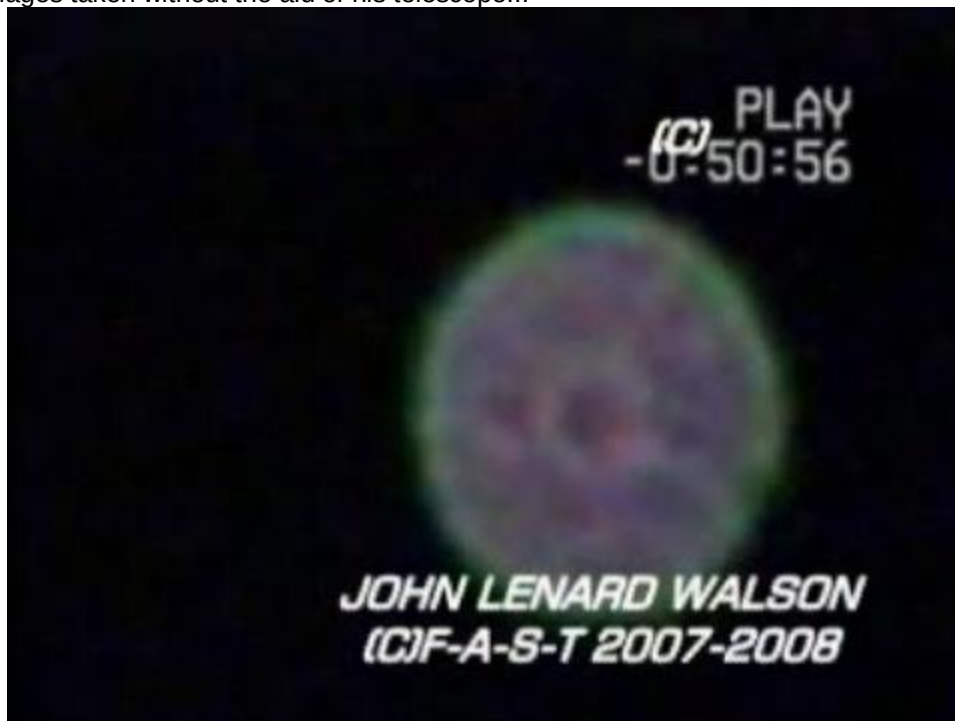

The footage which follows shows a number of these orb-shaped lights as videotaped from the ground without the use of a telescope. You will also see footage taken through John's (modified) telescope which shows what these bright 'star-like' lights really are: large machines in space.

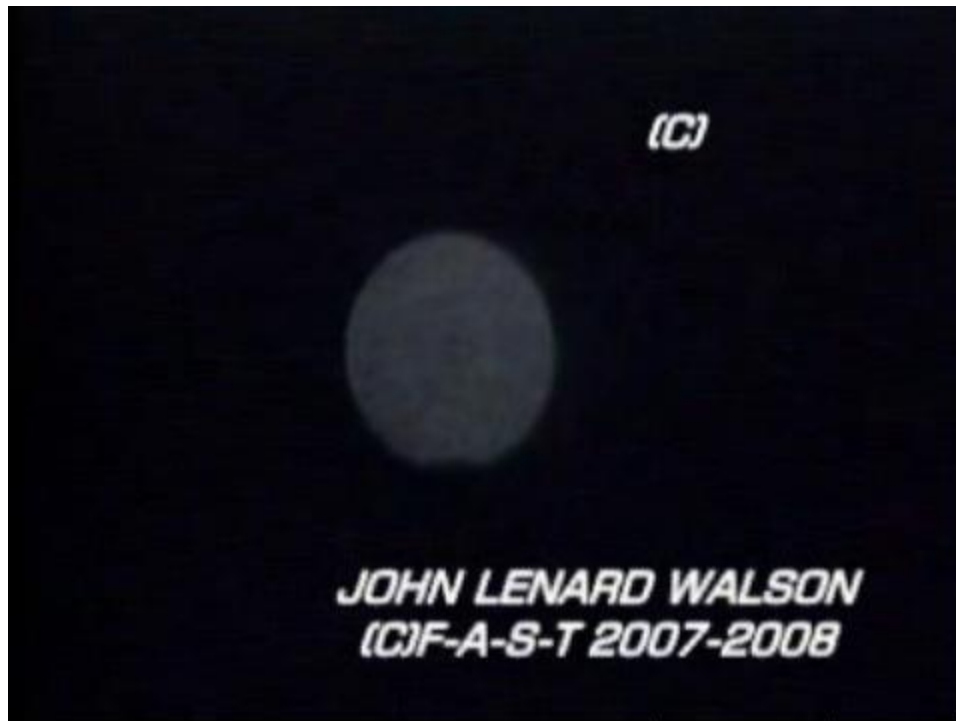

Side Note - About 98% of the 'orbs' captured in common digital and 35mm film flash pictures by the general public are actually dust, pollen or moisture droplets which are hyper-illuminated by the flash and appear, because of the optical resolution of the lens, as similar orbs. There is an excellent explanation of this at ghostweb.com.

More camcorder images taken without the aid of his telescope...

Here is one more perfect example of how an early evening 'star' is not a star at all. It is a space machine of some kind in orbit. In this series below, Walson first images a very small white dot of light with a Sony video camera (left top) and then follows it with a full zoom (left bottom).

He then switches to his telescope and special technique which allows him to focus through the atmospheric glow and into space. The remaining three images, in progressive zooms, show us that the 'evening star' is actually a machine.

Watch the source video for the above still frames....

Here are more new, rotated, images of another object in earth orbit...

One more look at some of the mystery machines hovering above us...

More remarkable videotape from John Walson

There are continuing efforts by a few attempting to discredit and debunk Walson's work videotaping these mystery objects in space. The assaults range from character assassination and ignorance, to the absurd and just plain dumb. It is also clear that a portion of the attacks on Walson's video images are born of jealousy, animosity and anger about lost opportunity to profit from his work.

One of the most absurd attempts to dismiss Walson's videos came from someone who claims these large machines are just 'stars'... imaged at full telephoto zoom.

It is obvious these objects bear no resemblance to stars whatsoever.

NOT A STAR

JOHN LENARD WALSON
(C)F-A-S-T 2008 11 AM

The Walsons made the following point about those who claim these machines are just 'stars'...

"My wife just pointed out something profoundly, embarrassingly obvious the 'star' critics failed to note. If, as many nutty people claim, all my films are just stars, how can I be able to videotape the very same spacecraft both at night and in the day...in the same location? If these were stars, that would be utterly impossible because the earth rotates on its axis, and the stars 'move' constantly.

These machines, whatever they are, remain largely in geosynchronous orbits and that's why they are visible both day and night in the same spots. This simple fact allows me to tape the same object extremely clearly at night...and in broad daylight from 7 am to 11 am when videotaping conditions (sun angle) are best."

One sorry soul claimed Walson is achieving his images by using a 'cell phone in vibration mode' held against the side of the telescope.

Another dimwit chimed in that a cell phone isn't needed because he has 'vibrators' which cost only "$1 and I have drawers of them"... wonder why someone would have hundreds of one dollar vibrators? Yet another said these images can be created by 'stomping on the ground'!

Of course, none of these critics offered proof that by vibrating a scope a star would present as such a clear and completely non-vibrating, stable multi-faceted machine with all kinds of appendages which are quite clear to anyone without a white cane.

One look at Walson's images of the ISS (International Space Station) and Shuttle demonstrates quite clearly the visual parameters that machines in space present in astrophotography.

A couple other pinheads also mentioned that Mr. Walson hopes to make 'millions' - one actually said 'billions' - from his footage. They somehow seem to have missed the fact that the video images in the series on rense.com are being offered by Mr. Walson for no compensation whatever. In fact, the subject of profiting from his discoveries and video tapes has only been addressed by him in the negative... he wants nothing for his videos and believes the world has a right to see them for free and that people should be able to make their own decisions.

A few other keyboard critics also attempted to smear and slander Mr. Walson as hoaxing the videos - with no explanation or examples as to how this is so. They also fail to mention the fact that others have sold DVDs of Walson's footage for personal gain.

One amusing mentally-infirm poster accused rense.com of some sort of dark involvement in this entire controversy because I removed two stories I wrote and presented several years ago when I learned that the images sent to me for the story were unauthorized. Needless to say, I regard theft - most especially for personal profit - of someone else's work... be it in printed word or video tape... as one the most vile of crimes. I am always more than happy to work with researchers who have the legal right and permission to use the work of others in stories.

There is also a little wit-brained chatter about Mr. Walson having 'changed his name' which somehow 'proves' all of his video research is hoaxed. Mr. Walson informed me when I first contacted him that because of the danger in presenting his videos, and the harassment and threats he has received, that he legally changed his name. He is greatly concerned for the security of his wife and himself.

The helicopter harassment videos alone make his desire for insulation from the world at large perfectly understandable.

More remarkable videotape from John Walson.

For those who may have missed it in one of the earlier parts in this series, here is a freeze frame of Walson's telescopic video of the International Space Station (ISS)...

There are continuing efforts by a few attempting to discredit and debunk Walson's work videotaping these mystery objects in space. The assaults range from character assassination and ignorance, to the absurd and just plain dumb.

It is also clear that a portion of the attacks on Walson's video images are born of jealousy, animosity and anger about lost opportunity to profit from his work.

Spacecraft Detail Shown In New Video

John Walson is certainly dedicated. Once again we find him out in the English countryside, in the middle of a very dark night with his telescope and video camera.

In this footage, it is possible to make out some detail in the center section of the spacecraft.

The video itself shows the object clearly and as it moves in orbit, you can hear John coughing in the cold night. More interestingly, you can hear the hum of him using the telescope's motor drive to keep the object in the field of view....

Here are three more freeze frames from John Walson videos showing even more remarkable variety in the shape and configuration of these mystery space craft...

Finally, here is a collection of highlights from many of John Walson's videos... including some close-ups of anomalies on the surface of the moon...

This newest series of remarkable videos from astrophotographer John Walson contain more new provocative images including an unprecedented look at a space machine being moved and repositioned in orbit. This particular footage almost looks as if this machine is alive... so flexible is the portion caught in motion by Walson's telescope and video camera.

First, here are some freeze frames with contrast enhancement of several of the newest items discovered in orbit above us. The first frame below shows the object imaged at night...

Here is the same object videotaped at noon.

So much for the efforts to dismiss these machines as 'stars'...

And here is an enlargement with contrast...

Spies In The Sky?

This video shows several different space craft and ends with an email urging John Walson to go public with his discoveries...

An Eerie Sight... Space Machine Changing Position

The following freeze frames show a space machine... or part of one... in motion. The top, bright part with the 'round' end is being moved downward or lowered - as we perceive it - to a position closer to the wide horizontal main body of the object below it. These four very interesting frames show the progression clearly.

The first frame shows the beginning position of the bright object...

It is now all the way 'down' and perhaps touching or lying upon the primary object to which it is attached. It almost has a serpentine appearance...

Still lower...

And now all the way 'down' and perhaps touching on lying on the primary object to which it is attached...

Video Of Space Machine In Motion

I asked Mr. Walson to isolate the particular segment of the video which clearly and unmistakably shows this part of the object moving on its own or being remotely controlled.

It is possible that the entire machine is rotating toward the observer and that the arm is actually fixed, although that does not seem to be the case from our analysis.

More Images From Space

The next four freeze frames show two more space craft captured by Mr. Walson...

Recording Sound From Space Machines

The following link to a BBC page explains at around the 7 minute mark how easy it is to record sounds from space...
<http://www.bbc.co.uk/science/space/spaceguide/skyatnight/proginfo.shtml>

Here now is another example of apparent sound coming from the objects above. John explains that within a few seconds of locking onto an object, he can, with a dish, pick up the noise from the object trailing slightly behind it...

It's A Big Sky...Where To Look?

How does John Walson know where to train his telescope to find these objects? That's a fair question, and here is his response...

Dear Jeff,

Regarding the inquiries as to how I am able to find so many different objects to videotape. I guess the best word to use is 'intuition'... frankly, sometimes I cannot believe it myself. I often wonder, when standing out in the cold night, hour after hour, how do I 'know' where - and when - to point to certain locations in the sky?

I wish I had a simple explanation. I set up all my equipment and just point my telescope to the location I feel is 'right'... and there is nearly always something to see. How I am able to do this is honestly as much of a mystery to me as are the objects themselves."

And finally, a new Walson video including many of the items above...

Working night after night, John Walson continues to set up his equipment in the cold English countryside. He now estimates to have found around 100 space machines or space craft in the dark skies overhead. There is a great deal of new visual information in this newest installment of our world exclusive series which features four new videos and a number of still frames from them.

One of the videos was recorded with Walson's new HD camcorder and the results are even more stunning. As always, he selects his targets...and then focuses his telescope in on what appear to the casual observer to be 'bright stars'. As we will see, these objects are anything but 'stars'.

Here are four stills frames of two different machines...

Here now are three contrasted versions of the second of the two craft above...

Here is the first of four new Part 7 videos.

Take a close look at the first machine... you can pause the video anytime. Given the fact that these craft are very difficult to image, Walson has been able to capture a great deal of detail... and it is quite intriguing...

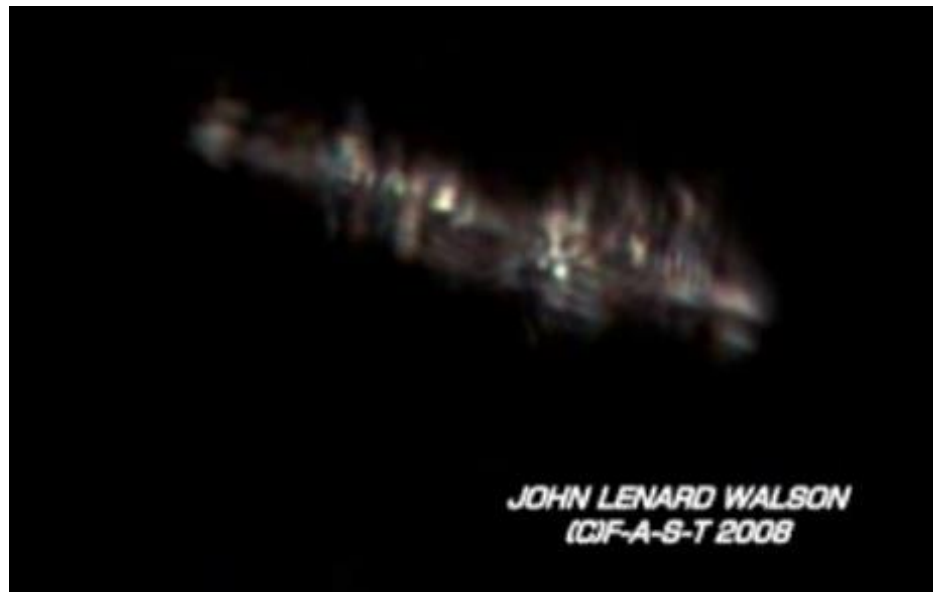

The following three stills show an interesting sequence of contrasted stills showing a second object in motion in the frame... which appears to be near the primary object itself.

The following three frames from a second new video, show more detail of these mystery machines...

The next two stills show some truly sci-fi appearing 'structures' on one of the objects...

This next video shows the objects above as imaged and recorded very recently

Here is the new HD video by John Walson.

Notice how this video is sharper in focus and contrast. The machines shown on it are unique and clearly very intense in their composition. One can only continue to wonder what they are doing up there.

Prepare to see some amazing new things...

The efforts to discredit John Walson's astrophotography are intensifying. It seems rather obvious that certain powers do not want his material to proliferate... even to be seen and considered by those who are honestly skeptical.

Up until now, Walson has been sending in edited pieces - not raw footage - of spacecraft he has videotaped. He has edited out all the zooms and pans and unnecessary video activity. This time, in answer to the debunkers - paid military and government, and otherwise - he shows us the full process of capturing a 'star' and zooming in on it... and revealing what it really is.

One of the chief debunking efforts has come from a source who has made videos of handmade tinfoil 'spacecraft.' Using a couple of lights, and keeping the camera lens in soft focus, this source is claiming to have 'proven' John Walson's videos are faked.

Unfortunately, the debunkers are not smart enough to figure out that Mr. Walson could present his video footage showing him fully zooming in and out on the objects in orbit above us. The debunker's claims are disabled completely by the following series of stills from a Walson video of a 'star' which, when zoomed in on, reveals itself to be anything but a star. There are also many actual stars to be seen behind the spacecraft in Walson's videos.

John also reports that he is being continually hacked... and now has compiled complete records of the hacker's computers and IPs. It is interesting to note how far debunkers will go to smear the work of others. And then there are others who will simply steal the work of genuine researchers on the net and try to sell it for profit. These kinds of things happen all the time now. Theft and plagiarism are some of the lowest and most vile forms of human criminal behavior.

Here now is a fascinating still frame sequence from another brand new John Walson video showing a typical 'star' in the heavens. You can then watch how, as he zooms in on it, the 'star' resolves progressively into an intelligently-made machine of some kind.

See for yourself...

In Part 8, we showed stills and a video of John zooming in and out on a 'star' in the night sky...a 'star' which resolved into a spacecraft when full zoom with the 8 inch Meade telescope was achieved. In further response to the government efforts to debunk his remarkable astrophotography, John had a friend go out with him on one of his near nightly sessions to videotape John at work high up on a hill with a town down below.

He had the person pick out a bright 'star' above. John then acquired the 'star' with the scope and zoomed in on it. Here are some still frames from that video.

The first two frames below show John fully zoomed in on a spacecraft but notice that he has removed the videotape from his camcorder attached to his Meade telescope.

This demonstrates that an object is in the view field but that the camera cannot record it.

Here is a video clip made by John's friend with his camcorder showing the above in motion...

Hold on to your hats, you are about to go on an 'E' ticket ride with John Walson who has just completed another round of finding, and videotaping, more new space machines hovering, maneuvering and lurking overhead.

We begin with a still from the first of several new videos. This object looks a great deal like a space ship. The detail is stunning and provocative to say the least. And it is located above us in orbit right now. Or, perhaps, it has left for a trip to Mars... with its United States Navy crew on board?

Here's the still...followed by the video...

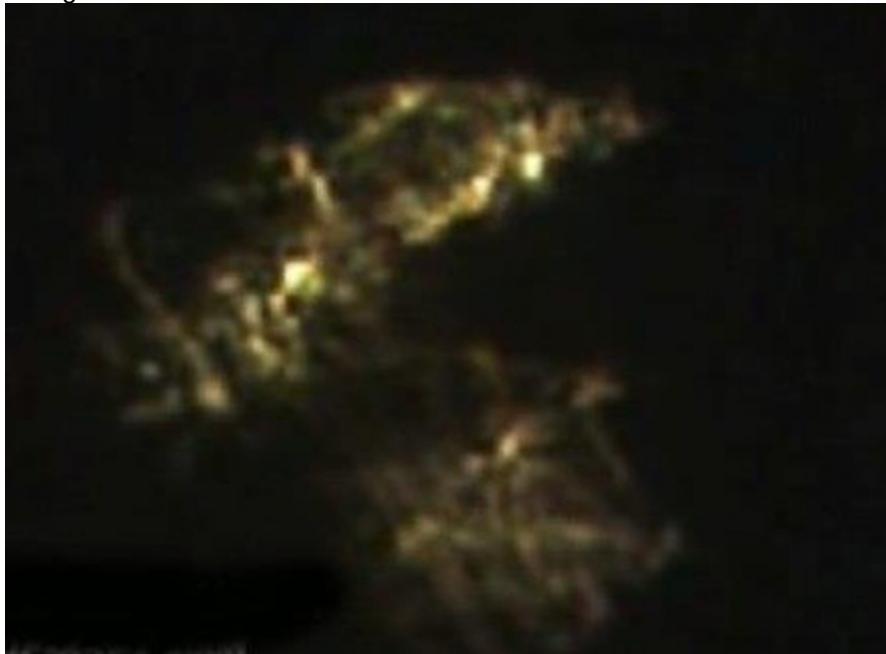

Feel free to go back and watch that again...and share it with your friends. It might well be some of your hard-earned tax money at work. Or, it might be something funded and built by someone else far, far away. We just don't know. Here, now, are two more still of a Walson-found craft that show extraordinary detail.

These do not seem to be 'normal' looking satellites but since the vast majority of those tossed into space are military, we can only guess...

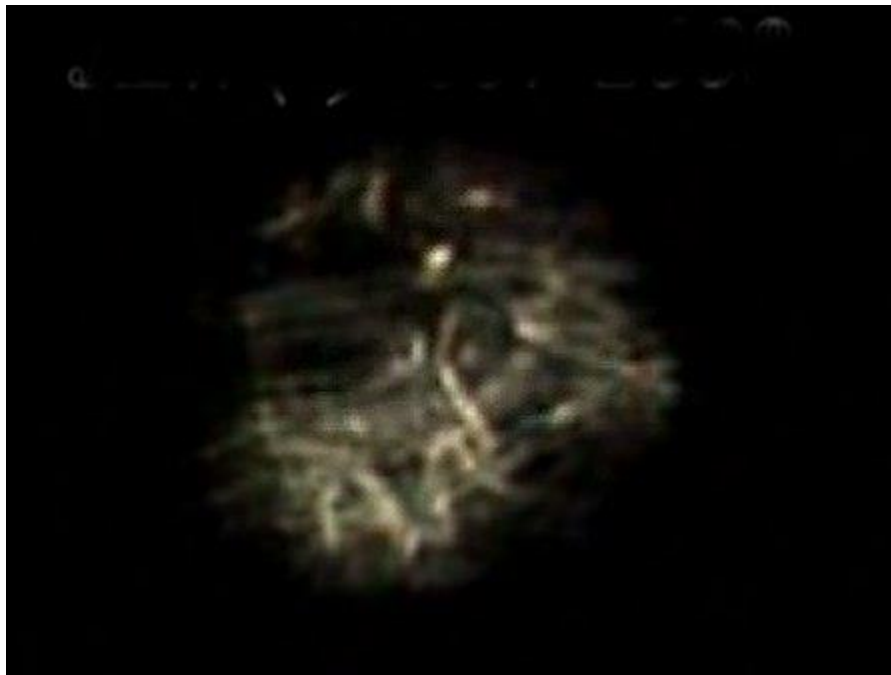

And now another from the next video.

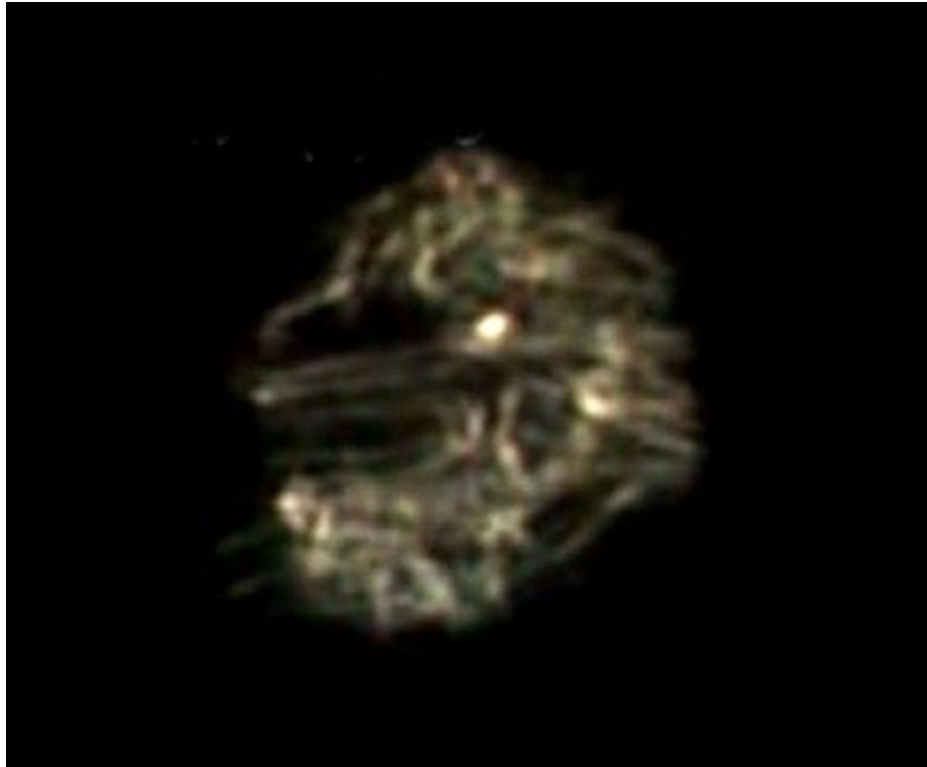

What the hell are these things?

Here is the full video. Note at the end, John has captured a UFO with the Moon as a backdrop....

The following two stills are some of the most bizarre space UFOs that John has videotaped to date. The shape and the structure of this 'craft' is unique and only adds to the mystery of what is 'up there' over our heads, day and night, year after year...

Here is the video itself, showing the above machine and several other new ones.

Earth orbit is a very busy place, indeed....

Here is more exclusive video showing another space machine. John Walson has literally opened the eyes of tens of millions of minds to the fact that the space above us is loaded with machines and spacecraft... and UFOs. The attention John is receiving is of a very high level... the surveillance helicopters are back and he's been followed and observed by several people on numerous occasions recently.

Here's another remarkable video to study...

And for a finale in this utterly sensational series of Walson's research and telescopic videos, John has prepared the following high definition piece which shows still more newly-discovered space machines in intriguing detail. It's time for the closed-minded debunkers - those who are paid and those of jealousy and of shallow conscience - to withdraw and to crawl back beneath their rocks.

Apologies from quite a few of them are clearly in order. Fat chance of that happening. For those of you, like myself, who have intuitively, at the least, known that John Walson has not only made a remarkable discovery of these mystery machines above us, but that he has been able to do things with an 8" telescope and high definition camcorder that wasn't supposed to be possible.

So, sit back and prepare, once again, to see things that we are not supposed to see... or probably know about.

This is truly spectacular footage.

We start out with another truly mind-bending video by John of another space machine.

Again, one must ask:

- Whose is it?
- Ours or ETs?

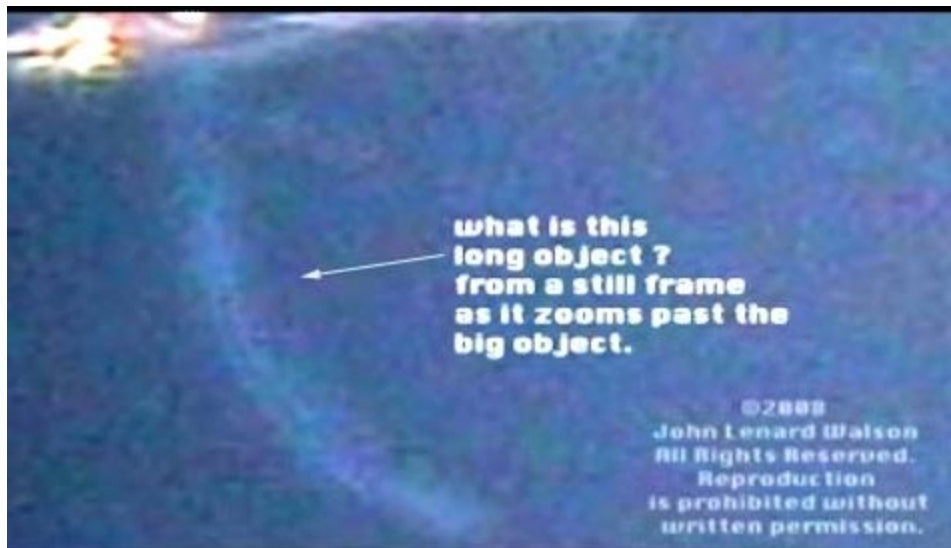

So many of the machines John has videotaped do not look like satellites as we know them. If you have followed the series, you will remember the rather shocking video of one of these objects clearly moving in an almost serpentine fashion.

In this first video of Part 12, Walson has captured another bizarre craft which has enough detail to make one think that it looks nothing like a manmade satellite. Look closely at the details... they are amazing. They do not look like something 'we' would make. Notice how John has also found what looks like a piece of the Space Shuttle Tether... or some other long and large 'snake-like' shape.

Here are some provocative stills from the video...

Notice in this still you can see 'coiled pipes' or 'tubes' wound around the body of the object.

Again, this is extremely strange when one tries to overlay all known satellite shapes over such a sight...

Here is the video of this bizarre machine in its entirety....

Now, here is yet another bizarre-shaped spacecraft in a still frame. Does this look like any satellite you've seen photos of?

Here's the full Walson video...

Take a look at this one...the detail is remarkable. Walson is so right up on the craft that you can see what appears to be 'inside' of it.

But if we are seeing 'inside' of it, we must then confront the problem of what kind of 'satellites' are we making that are 'hollow'?

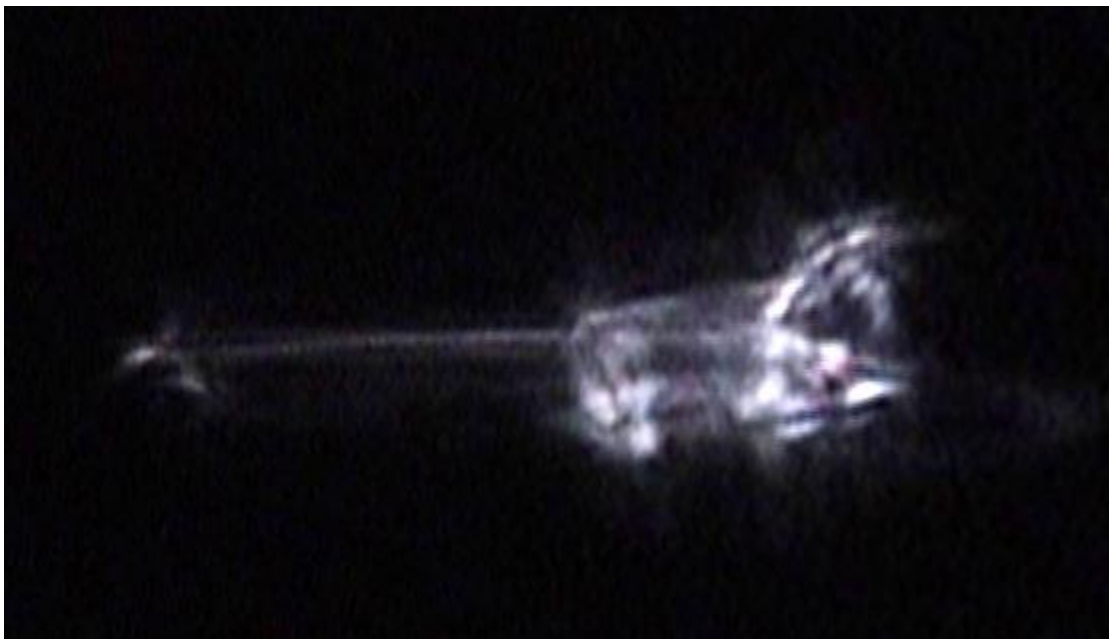

The video, itself, is next and you'll notice the second half of it is another of John's daytime telescope HD camera recordings.

Notice the blue sky...

Still another very strange and clearly visible articulated machine with a long 'tail' heading to the left. At the end of the 'tail' or long projected piece of the object there is appears to be something important.

Whoever made this machine is obviously very capable.

Unfortunately, there is no resolution as to what this machine's purpose is. Many devoted people have spent years endeavoring to prevent the 'weaponization' of space... which seems like it may already be a done deal when one considers the enormous amount of machinery John Walson has discovered and documented hovering in space above US....

Now take a look at this object in its HD video format...

To finish Part 12 in our flat out astonishing series of telescopic video from John Lenard Walson, here is a compilation of some of the incredibly clear objects that hover above us around the clock.

First, here is a high definition video still image of one of the craft in the video that follows...

We begin this tour of objects in Earth orbit with a short Walson video clip of a machine on duty above our heads... or, is that on guard?

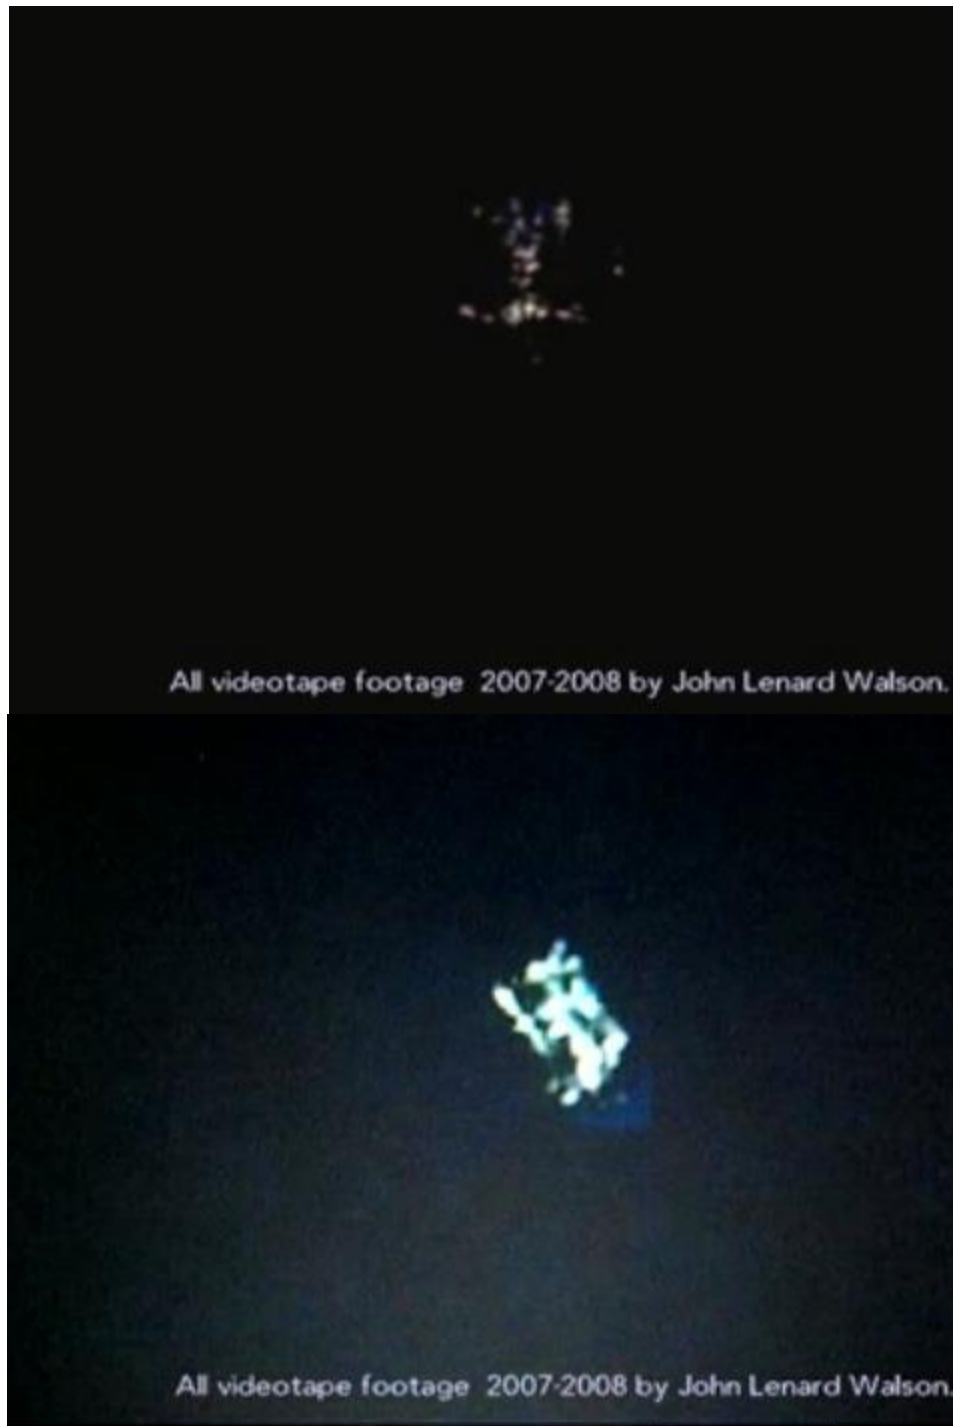

This next clip show an object clearly-defined as being comprised of several identical or very similar segments.

It's important to note that John's original footage is in FAR higher resolution and definition than any the clips he uploads to YouTube...

This third relatively short video assemblage show a dramatically different object in the beginning. Look at the configuration... unlike any other machine we've seen.

The end of the video is a compilation of still images of a number of objects captured by John and his modified Meade scope..

A fascinating video examination of a powerful-looking orbital device.

Note the Walson slow-pan along the length of the craft and see how the articulated sections are clearly identical...

In this short clip, which you'll want to watch several times, you'll see the same machine in a split screen effect. However, as John was taping it, something red zoomed past it very quickly.

He isolates the object as the section of the tape. What is it?

This next one could be a military weapon in space.

The more you look at it, the more it seems like a very serious item, indeed...

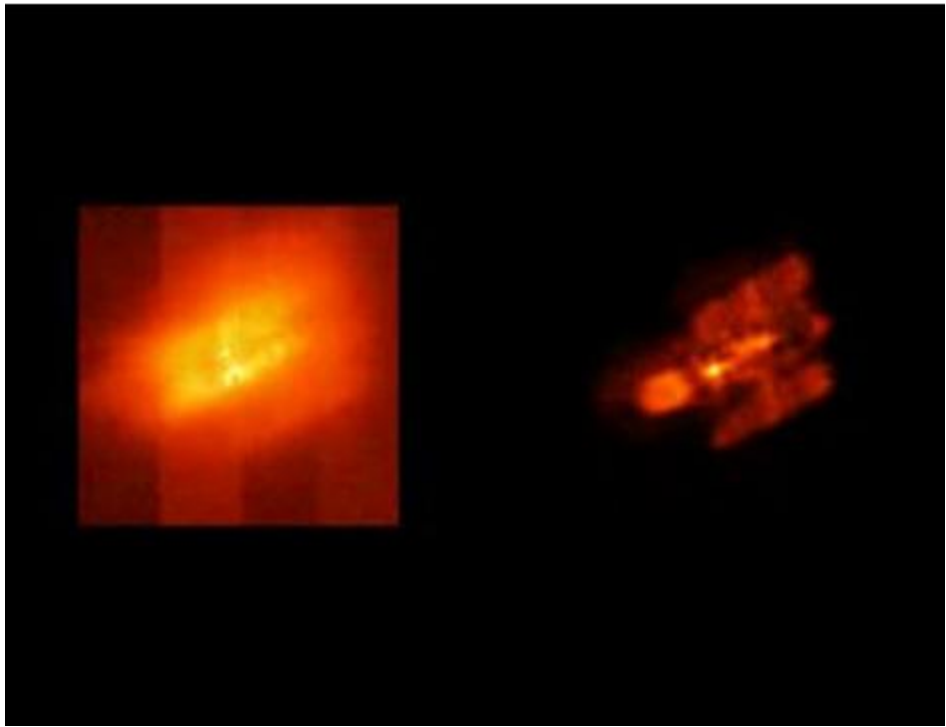

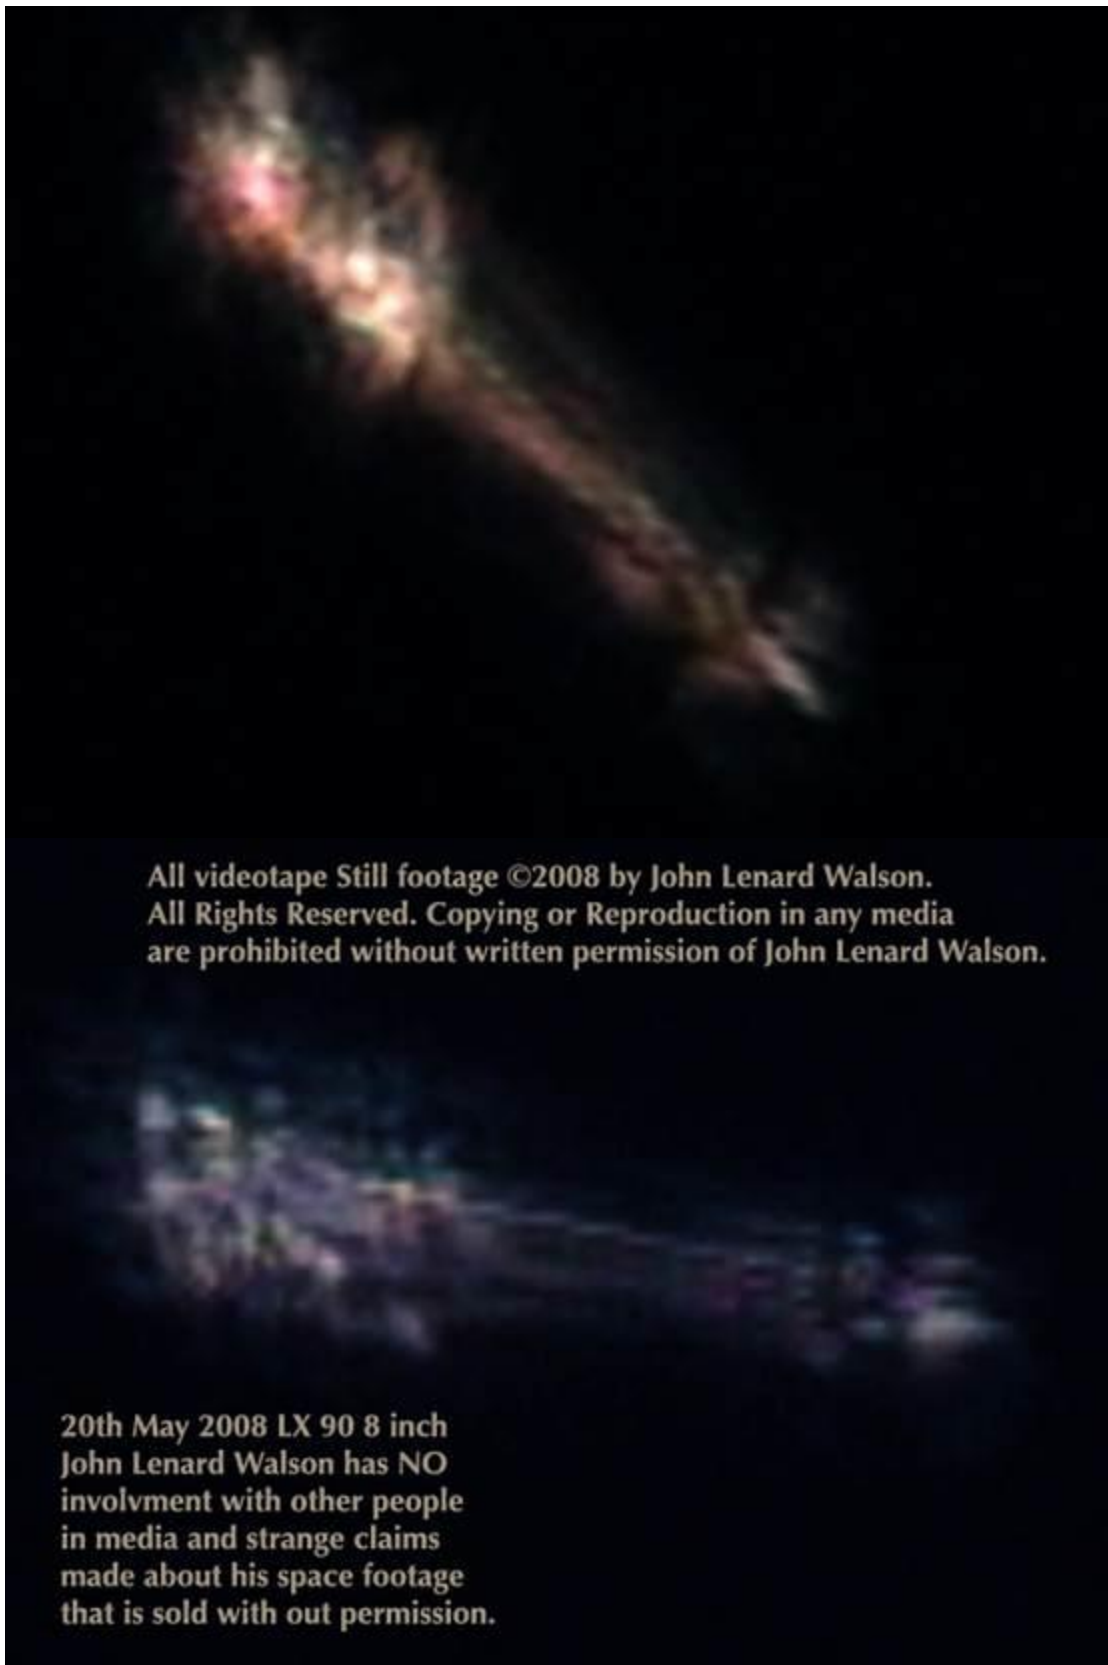

This tape presents two different spacecraft. The first one looks very much like a fish skeleton... although rest assured it isn't!

The second object looks deadly serious and could be another weapon in space...

This last video link is TV program footage made by a 200 inch telescope and shows an object that looks far more like a traditional satellite than the objects John is crawling all over with his specially-modified Meade 8 inch scope...

UK ETs On Video NOT - And Other Important Clips

In the second part of this story, John Walson starts off by exposing a fraud. The beginning of the video footage, shot by John, shows figures at night under a bright light.

This footage was reportedly taken by another UFO researcher and represented to a Hollywood producer as 'ETs walking around' in the dark.

The producer was duped and allegedly paid the researcher's airfare to LA, hotel and meals, and substantial cash, to view the purloined footage. The video, in fact, does not show 'ETs' walking around at all...the figures are white-helmeted firefighters at the scene of a small plane crash in the UK in the year 2000.

Here is part of the original news story of the crash...

Fatal Crash Probe Crash experts are trying to discover the cause of the accident.

The Goodwood Racing Company, owners of the airfield, said in a statement:

"The Goodwood fire crew was on the scene of the crash Aerodrome director Tony Houghton said,

"We are obviously deeply upset by this tragic accident and we extend our most sincere sympathy to the families and relatives.... "

Now, watch the video clip yourself and you will clearly see the alleged 'ETs' are actually Firefighters in white helmets.

Following this opening segment in the following video, there are a number of intriguing clips from other Walson archives...

In this new installment in the extraordinary research of John Walson, we are again treated to an amazing sampling of the videos of some of the strange machines hovering above us. Again, as we've made clear many times, these objects look to the casual observer like stars... but they aren't stars at all.

Through his own technique, Walson is able to zoom in on these 'stars' and work past the glow and normal optical limitations to resolve them into showing up for what they are: space craft.

- Whose are they?
- Do they belong to the American military, the Russians, the Chinese?
- Or, are they from an off-planet intelligence?

In the following series of short video clips, we'll show you a still frame of the object which you can then watch in motion by clicking on the embedded YouTube video clip.

In Part 16 of this series on the astro-videography of John Lenard Walson, we are shown, once again, large machines in orbit above us. Machines that are clearly designed for VERY specific purposes. The enigma of what they are doing up there remains... but the question of WHO put them there seems more and more commanding with each new Walson offering.

Remember, the videos you will see... and the still frames from them... are poor in comparison to the images in the HD video recorded by John through his modified Meade telescope and HD video camcorder.

In this first video, Walson zooms right IN on one of these space machines and we are treated to discernable detail which is intriguing, to say the very least.

Here is a still frame to ponder...

Remember, these machines appear to the casual observer as 'stars' and without John's telescope modification we would never see them for what they are.

Seeing this particular machine, many perplexing and concerning questions arise...

Here, now, is an extreme close-up of this craft.

There is some remarkable detail to be considered...

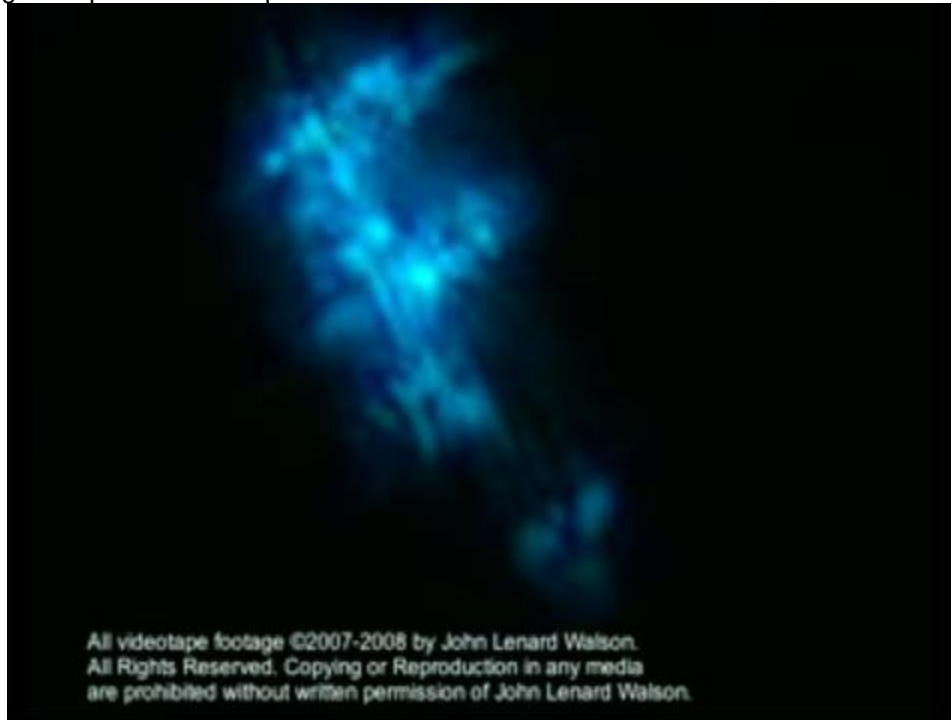

Now, as you watch the close-up video itself, think about the question John poses:
"What IS this, NASA?"

The bottom line is rather obvious... or should that be odious... NASA, of course, knows exactly what this space craft is...

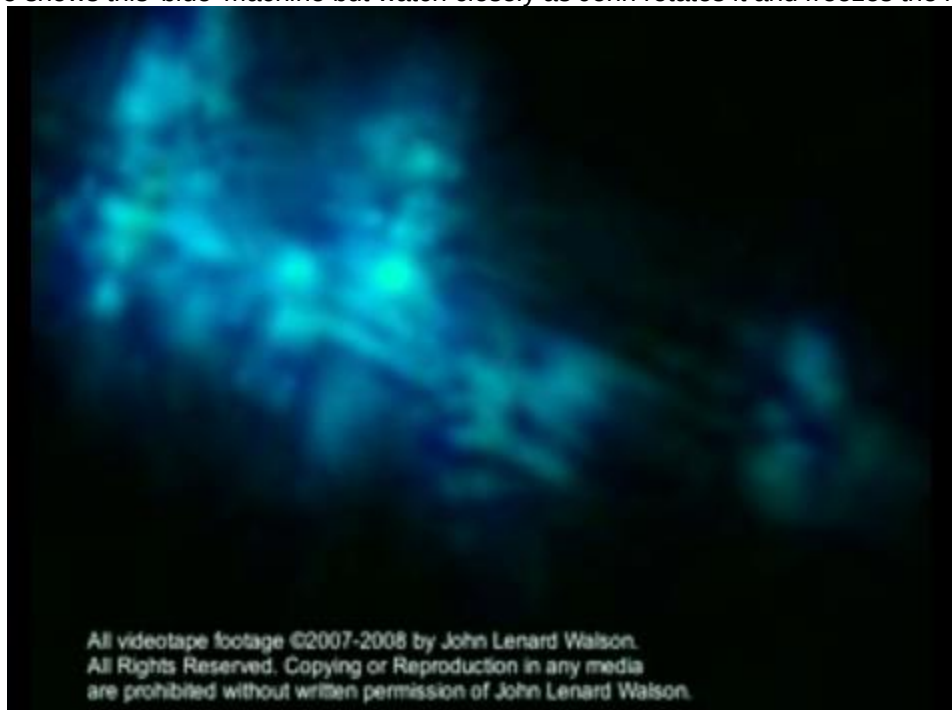

This is an interesting example of a 'blue' space machine.

Watch, now, as John takes us up close and then freezes the action at the end of this clip to allow the eye to process all the angles and obvious PURPOSE in the design of this object...

The next short video shows this 'blue' machine but watch closely as John rotates it and freezes the motion.

Now watch the video... and try to get a sense of the structure and the depth of the object.

You can almost feel the size of it and that this is a large machine... with side connecting structures....

Amazing images. Here is another space craft... look at the detail...

Here's the short video clip...again with real motion and still frame for analysis.

These are very sophisticated...whatever they are.

Ours? Or ET's?

And finally, another Walson exclusive. This space machine is a long one with interesting configuration (they all are). It's difficult to know the lengths of these craft but Walson says they are 'very large'.

One thing remains certain: NASA and the military know exactly what they are, but don't hold your breath waiting for an explanation.

Maybe extradited UK hacker Gary McKinnon discovered at least a part of the answer...

There is so much mystery right above our sorry planet, it is mind-boggling. And without the work and dedication of John Walson, none of us would have a clue about these things.

Who do you think built them?

Here is one of the John's discoveries... a clearly sophisticated machine zoomed in to extreme close up...

Strange Things Above

The ongoing series seen exclusively on Rense.com featuring the work of John Walson is, arguably, the most remarkable, strange, worrying, and disconcerting space photography yet - with the exception of the staggering images from Hubble Space Telescope.

This next installment begins with an eerie, weird space machine hovering above Earth. Here are two stills from the video taken by John in the darkest of night in the English countryside.

What a strange, bizarre object.

Look at the non-linear shapes, the curves, the strange angles.

- What is this thing?
- And what is its purpose?
- Here is a color enhanced still frame of this most unusual space craft... or space ship?

Remember, we do not have the dimensions of these objects... but we do know they are quite large...

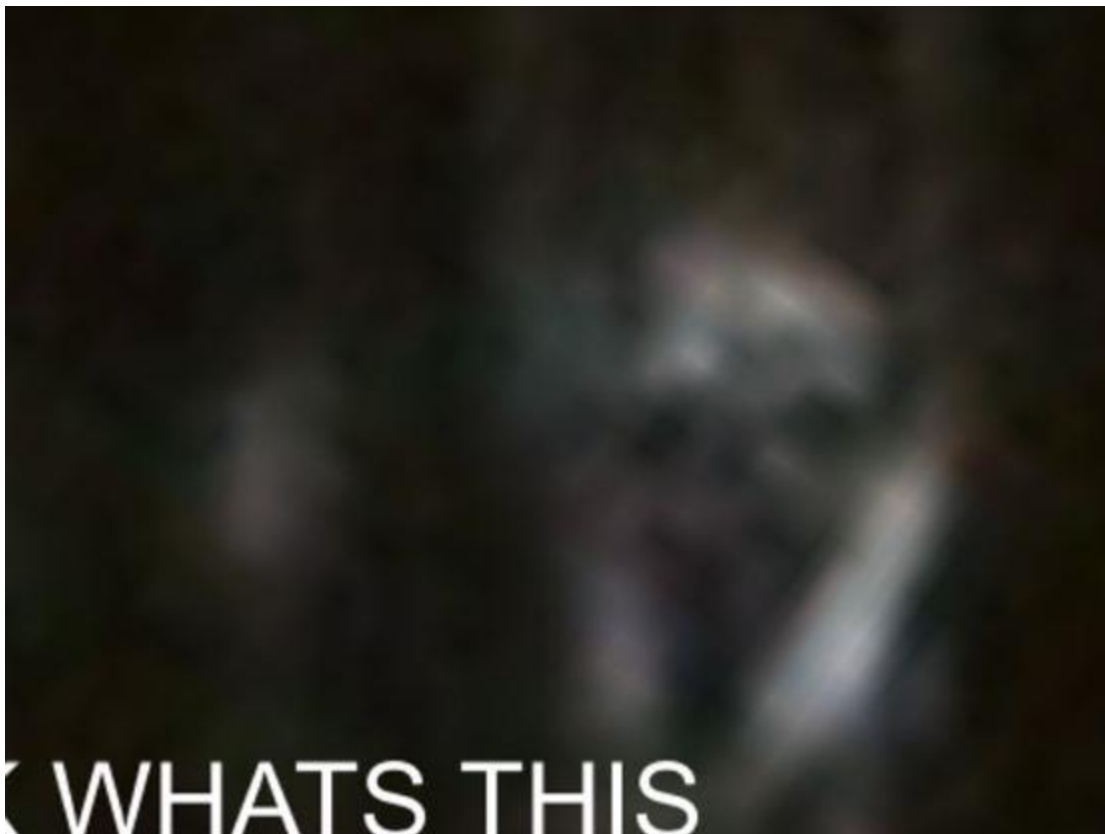

And now here is a short color-enhanced version of the video clip.

If this doesn't cause one to think seriously about the strange things above us, probably nothing will...

Here is a very striking enlargement of a portion of the machine.

Hmm...

Take a look at the video.

This is one strange item, indeed,

Now, on to the next space craft. Or, space ship. This one is vastly different and suggests a far, far different purpose.

As we know, so-called Pentagon UFO Hacker Gary McKinnon has lost his final appeal to avoid extradition from the UK to the US to stand trial. Gary faces 75 years in prison. His description of allegedly finding a US Navy 'Non-Terrestrial Fleet' folder during his hack may well be behind the efforts to put him away for good.

Could this object be part of an Ultra-Secret US Naval 'Fleet' in space?

Here's the video clip.

Again, one marvels at the ability of Walson to capture these objects at such extraordinary resolution...

And this is an enlarged version of the video showing more detail on the left end of this machine.

SPACE SHIP
SEE THE SHAPE ?
WHO IS IN IT?

Here is another view of the same object... but in a different position and sporting a blue hue. Does this look like a telecom satellite? No. Does it look like a GPS satellite? No. At least, not that we've seen. These are large and sophisticated pieces of hardware.

A space ship? Maybe.

What we can be decidedly confident about is that the NSA and other intel agencies - and the higher ups in NASA - know what these items are.

Remember - these objects look like 'stars' from the ground at night, but Walson has devised a way to achieve extraordinary optical telescopic resolution far beyond normal limits. Here is the video of the above still frame...

These next two stills show another large machine. If you look closely, you can get a real sense of the depth of this space craft...

Now, watch the video and you'll get an even better perspective...

And, finally, here is another still and a video clip of what appears to be the same - or same type - of machine featured in a preceding video. These craft, again, are all recorded on high definition video tape by John in the middle of the night above the UK.

One day, we may know what these space craft are - and who made them - but for now, at least, they remain 'Top Secret'...

Welcome to another round trip into near space... courtesy of John Walson's extraordinary skills with his modified telescope and HD video camcorder.

Looking back over the first 17 Parts of this rense.com world exclusive series at many of these strange large objects... machines... that are in orbit above the Northern Hemisphere, it seems reasonable to deduct that most are probably not your friendly AT&T telecom satellites.

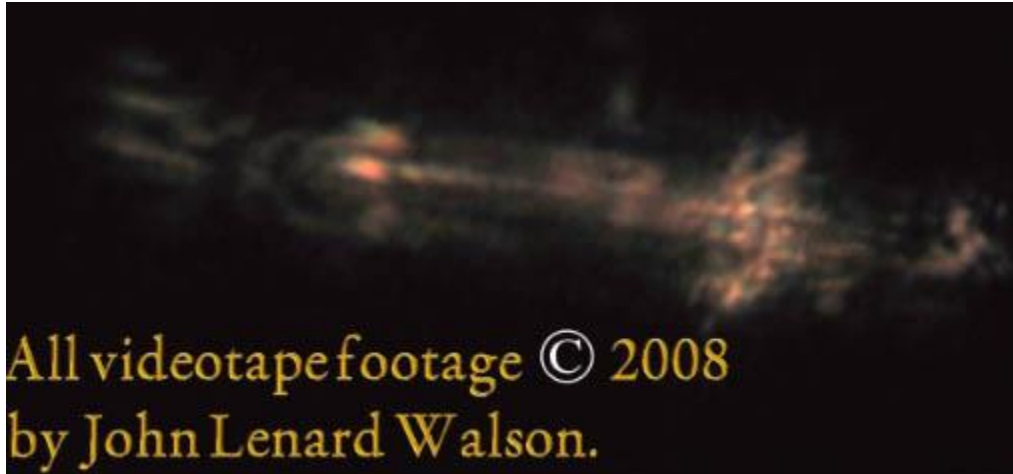

In fact, many - some say most - of today's satellites are clearly military and 'civilian' surveillance machines, which have as their primary roles the destruction of our privacy and to play key roles in the killing of human beings.

Beyond this, we can also ask the legitimate question: are all of Walson's images showing spacecraft of 'human' origin?

The answer is no, not necessarily. Looking at the sizes and configurations of these machines, it is a reasonable speculation that they may be space ships or space vehicles. We know what Pentagon hacker Gary McKinnon found... and that shocking data may end up costing him his life.

Take a look at the first machine below. Does this look like any 'satellite' you've seen before?

Look closely at the details...

Now look at this short video. Notice how Walson skillfully takes us right down the side of the spacecraft.

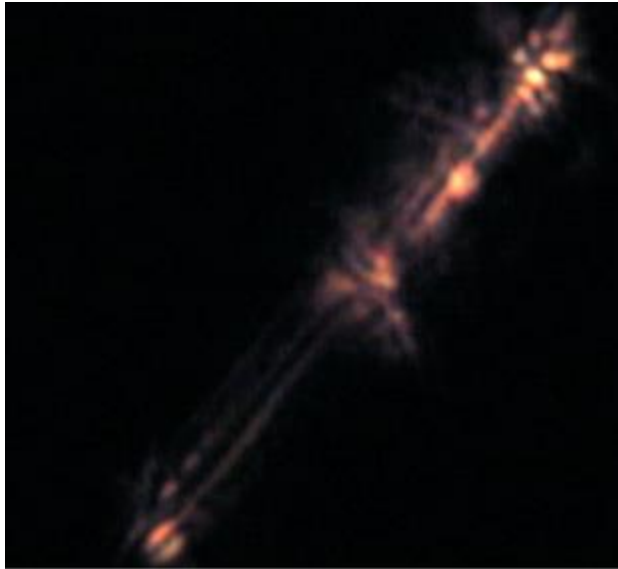

Truly a stunning view...

Here's another spacecraft (spaceship?) which again has an extended, elongated section toward to bottom.

- Why?
- What is the purpose of separating the 'main' part of the ship from whatever might be at the end of this long section?
- Is there a nuclear drive located back there?
- Some sort of advanced propulsion system?

Here is some video footage of the craft.

Walson wisely begins with a still frame of the object which allows us time to give it a good look without having to try to work around the slight 'vibration' in the actual video itself.

Without question, these are very large machines...

The following three stills show us another type of spacecraft, again with the elongated middle structure apparently separating one 'end' or 'function' of the ship from the other.

This craft could be up to several hundred feet in length...we just don't know. Assume it is a couple hundred miles up and being imaged by Walson on nearly full telescopic zoom.

How big is it?

It certainly doesn't seem likely that something this big would fit on top of a Titan 2, or Delta 2 or Delta IV US satellite launch rocket.

Notice the extraordinary detail...

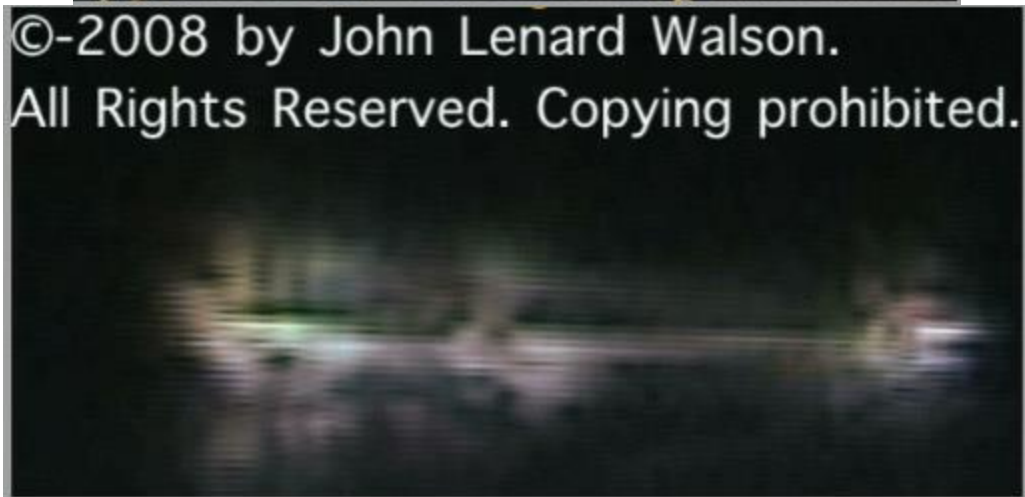

And here is the spacecraft in video format as recorded by John.

Again, both his telescope and CCD HD camcorders have been modified to achieve these stunning images...

Here is a very similar spacecraft... perhaps even the same one... videotaped on a different night...

Here is a short video clip of the object.

It is a space weapon? Could be. Nuclear? Maybe.

Or, might it be a kinetic weapons platform?

Those who still nobly seek to prevent the weaponization of space are, sadly, many years too late, it would seem. Few at the higher levels research doubt that many weapons are aloft in space right now - and have been there for possibly decades.

Here is a truly stunning spacecraft - or is it a spaceship?

This is another mind-boggling piece of advanced technology in any case. The question again arises, it is ours? Or, could it be 'not from here'? It certainly is a challenge to the mind. Look carefully at the shapes and design...use a magnifying glass if you have one.

This is a BIG item...again, do you see it sitting on the payload nose end of a Delta IV launch rocket at Cape Canaveral?

We don't think so...

And now some live motion video of this spacecraft...

More video, now, of another spacecraft.

Remember, these look like bright 'stars' to the average ground observer and it is only through the technical talents and optical skills of John Walson that these objects are available to us.

More stunning images.

Take a close look at the large object that just might be docked or attached to the top right end of this elongated spacecraft. One has to marvel at a man like John Walson who has devoted years and countless hours out in the cold of night to capture these images which he is sharing with the world for no compensation whatsoever.

This World Exclusive series of reports on Rense.com are made available by John to all those who seek knowledge and truth.

And here is a still frame of the big machine turned upside down and flipped 180 degrees...

And finally, here is one more video of the craft shown in the three stills above. It is followed in the video clip by images of an even larger spacecraft.

One thing is certain... there are people in NASA and Moscow who know what these spacecraft are... and to whom they belong.

Hi John,

many thanks for sending your remarkable images: you are clearly an exceptionally talented astro-photographer.

there are of course very many communication, spy and earth-observation satellites in orbit. The best information source I know to identify such things is a distinguished astrophysicist, who used to work here in Cambridge and now works at Harvard, Jonathan McDowell.

his (relevant) web page is and I've taken the liberty of cc'ing him on this reply.

best regards, and good luck in the hunt.

Hello again,

And again my congratulations on your superb astrophotography.

You are clearly getting some images at almost the diffraction limit of your telescope. In the very sharpest images there are hints of diffraction rings visible on the edges of the satellites. That is of course the absolute limit of optical performance, and is only rarely attained.

Interestingly, the process you have, of using a high-quality imaging system, with fast read-out, and then selecting the rare 'perfect' images is something which has been developed and applied somewhat by one of my colleagues here. You might like to look at our local web page presenting some of this:

http://www.ast.cam.ac.uk/~optics/Lucky_Web_Site/

You might also be interested in a journal produced by the MIT Lincoln Laboratory - which is the group which has built some of the things you are seeing. Much of what they do is what used to be the Star wars project, which no doubt involves some of your objects. They don't talk about the military satellites, of course, but there are many discussions of earth surveillance, and related issues.

It is distributed only to academic organizations, so you may need to get your local library to borrow it, but you may be able to get this (for free) from:

Hi John,

my work address is perfectly safe, thanks.

I wouldn't worry too much about Nasa restricting you or your information. They are a civilian agency, and astronomers work with them all the time. Many of my colleagues are indeed nasa staff.

There is of course nothing like posting stuff on the internet if you do feel restricted.

But perhaps more useful might be for you to get the coordinate information to Jonathan so he can identify some of these for you.

Hi John,

Thank you for the images: once again they show that you are an excellent photographer.

There are of course many satellites in orbit, only a few of which are anything to do with JPL, but these are readily seen by astro-photographers like yourself all over the world.

You should just enjoy the excellence of your images, and make them available as widely as is possible, through the public web-sites, magazines, etc, so you can get the credit you deserve for your skills.

best regards

Hi John,

A telescope does two things: it collects more light than an eye, so allows one to see fainter (sensitivity), and it increases the amount of detail (resolution) that one can see.

Sensitivity is simple: it gets better the bigger you are, so you will always see fainter objects with a bigger telescope: that is why astronomers like to build big things,

Resolution is more complicated: the finest detail you will see with a telescope depends mostly on the local atmosphere where you are. This 'seeing' is caused by turbulence in the air, usually at low levels. There is a typical size to these air-parcels, which is a few inches. At a site with very good seeing the parcels are up to about 10-12 inches, more typically they are 5-6 inches at a good site, 1-3 inches are a poor site, or in bad weather. The air-patches, bubbles, are blown by the wind, so keep changing as seen by one person/telescope, which is why some frames have a lot more detail than do others. Most of Southern California - in fact all west-facing ocean coasts - are very good sites, with Mt Wilson and Palomar being famous examples.

The effect of this turbulence is that telescopes only see more and more detail until the telescope is larger than the air bubbles. When several bubbles are seen by the telescope at the same time the image no longer improves. When it is windy the bubbles move past quickly, so that the image is changing a lot, and seems fuzzy. That means that larger telescopes do not see more detail. In fact, a good back-yard telescope, well-adjusted, like yours, see just as much detail as a very large professional telescope, like the Palomar 200-inch. Palomar see fainter of course, but no 'better'.

You will get the best possible image quality with a telescope about the same size as the bubbles, with a magnification which is just large enough so that exactly one air bubble is between the telescope aperture and the target image, and with an integration (frame-rate) time such that the bubble doesn't move by more than one-half its size during one film frame.

Your technique of 'lucky imaging' seems to have identified exactly the correct combination of telescope size, magnification and frame rate to match your local atmosphere and wind.

You can do a bit better by having a larger telescope - maybe twice as big - and using a shorter frame rate, but only when the conditions are very stable, so less often.

Of course, by far the biggest limitation most systems have is poor focus and wobble - poor mounts. Most systems don't work anywhere near their potential simply because they are not setup properly.

You can do better by trying to 'correct' the image for its distortions: that is called adaptive optics, and there are some quite good systems available. Hand-held video cameras already have them built-in, to correct for focus and hand-shake.

So, bigger doesn't always mean better. It depends what you want - to see faint, or to see detail. You can't have both, unless you get above all the air - which is why we build our telescopes on the top of very high mountains, or put them in space. That, however, is expensive.

regards

In Part 16 of this series on the astro-videography of John Lenard Walson, we are shown, once again, large machines in orbit above us. Machines that are clearly designed for VERY specific purposes. The enigma of what they are doing up there remains... but the question of WHO put them there seems more and more commanding with each new Walson offering.

The next short video shows this 'blue' machine but watch closely as John rotates it and freezes the motion.

Now watch the video...and try to get a sense of the structure and the depth of the object. You can almost feel the size of it and that this is a large machine...with side connecting structures....

And finally, another Walson exclusive. This space machine is a long one with interesting configuration (they all are). It's difficult to know the lengths of these craft but Walson says they are 'very large'. One thing remains certain: NASA and the military know exactly what they are, but don't hold your breath waiting for an explanation. Maybe extradited UK hacker Gary McKinnon discovered at least a part of the answer...

There is so much mystery right above our sorry planet, it is mind-boggling. And without the work and dedication of John Walson, none of us would have a clue about these things. Who do you think built them?

This newest segment in the continuing John Walson series of video images of objects in space, on the moon...and on Earth, comprises two parts. The first shows stills of more strange objects in space...in orbit above us right now. The remarkable detail of this unknown space craft is especially notable for the far right end close-up. What does this machine DO?

UK ETs On Video NOT - And Other Important Clips

In the second part of this story, John Walson starts off by exposing a fraud. The beginning of the video footage, shot by John, shows figures at night under a bright light. This footage was reportedly taken by another UFO researcher and represented to a Hollywood producer as 'ETs walking around' in the dark.

The producer was duped and allegedly paid the researcher's airfare to LA, hotel and meals, and substantial cash, to view the purloined footage. The video, in fact, does not show 'ETs' walking around at all...the figures are white-helmeted firefighters at the scene of a small plane crash in the UK in the year 2000.

Here is part of the original news story of the crash...

Fatal Crash Probe Crash experts are trying to discover the cause of the accident.

The Goodwood Racing Company, owners of the airfield, said in a statement: "The Goodwood fire crew was on the scene of the crash Aerodrome director Tony Houghton said: "We are obviously deeply upset by this tragic accident and we extend our most sincere sympathy to the families and relatives...."

Now, watch the video clip yourself and you will clearly see the alleged 'ETs' are actually Firefighters in white helmets. Following this opening segment in the following video, there are a number of intriguing clips from other Walson archives...

Using a different frame of Walson's video than the still on the webpage, I found a clearer view of the telephoto lens. It's almost certainly a spysat. The opening for lens is even aimed at Earth. The square plate-like projections are most likely solar panels. We have to consider the huge size of this lens, for it to be seen with a 6" telescope from Earth:

Mystery Space Machines - Pt 12

Rense.com World Exclusive

We start out with another truly mind-bending video by John of another space machine. Again, one must ask: whose is it? Ours or ETs? So many of the machines John has videotaped do not look like satellites as we know them. If you have followed the series, you will remember the rather shocking video of one of these objects clearly moving in an almost serpentine fashion.

In this first video of Part 12, Walson has captured another bizarre craft which has enough detail to make one think that it looks nothing like a manmade satellite. Look closely at the details...they are amazing. They do not look like something 'we' would make. Notice how John has also found what looks like a piece of the Space Shuttle Tether...or some other long and large 'snake-like' shape.

Here are some provocative stills from the video...

Notice in this still you can see 'coiled pipes' or 'tubes' wound around the body of the object. Again, this is extremely strange when one tries to overlay all known satellite shapes over such a sight...

Here is the video of this bizarre machine in its entirety....

For a larger view, click below

<http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=u8znDLU8Dhg>

Now, here is yet another bizarre-shaped spacecraft in a still frame. Does this look like any satellite you've seen photos of?

Here's the full Walson video...

For a larger view, click below
http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=nv6QUaR_Jf4

Take a look at this one...the detail is remarkable. Walson is so right up on the craft that you can see what appears to be 'inside' of it. But if we are seeing 'inside' of it, we must then confront the problem of what kind of 'satellites' are we making that are 'hollow'?

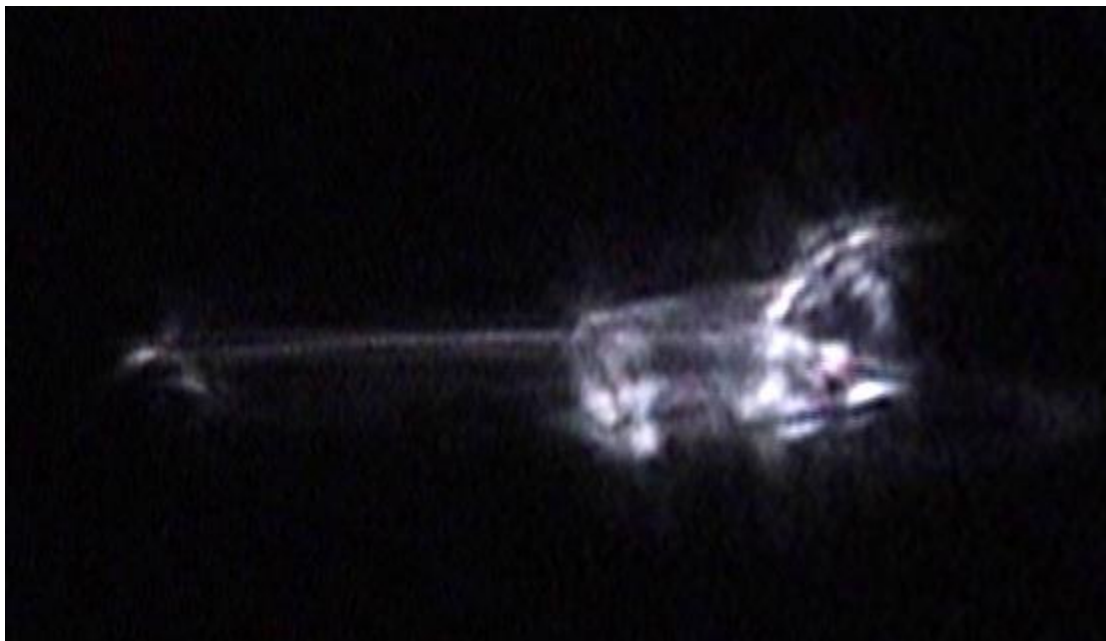

The video, itself, is next and you'll notice the second half of it is another of John's daytime telescope HD camera recordings. Notice the blue sky...

<http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=iHuVJZUgQDE>

Still another very strange and clearly visible articulated machine with a long 'tail' heading to the left. At the end of the 'tail' or long projected piece of the object there is appears to be something important. Whoever made this machine is obviously very capable. Unfortunately, there is no resolution as to what this machine's purpose is. Many devoted people have spent years endeavoring to prevent the 'weaponization' of space... which seems like it may already be a done deal when one considers the enormous amount of machinery John Walson has discovered and documented hovering in space above us....

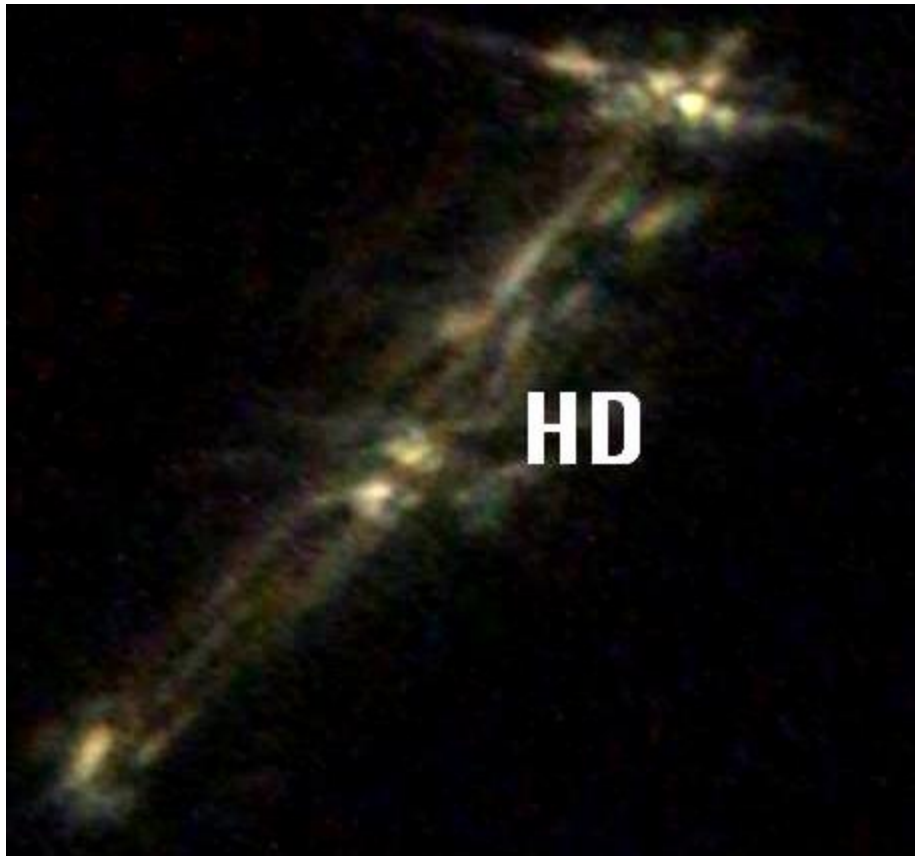

Now take a look at this object in its HD video format...

To finish Part 12 in our flat out astonishing series of telescopic video from John Lenard Walson, here is a compilation of some of the incredibly clear objects that hover above us around the clock. First, here is a high definition video still image of one of the craft in the video that follows...

Hold on to your hats, you are about to go on an 'E' ticket ride with John Walson who has just completed another round of finding, and videotaping, more new space machines hovering, maneuvering and lurking overhead.

We begin with a still from the first of several new videos. This object looks a great deal like a space ship. The detail is stunning and provocative to say the least. And it is located above us in orbit right now. Or, perhaps, it has left for a trip to Mars...with its United States Navy crew on board? Here's the still...followed by the video...

For A Larger View, Click Here
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AcPf4vqmaGk>

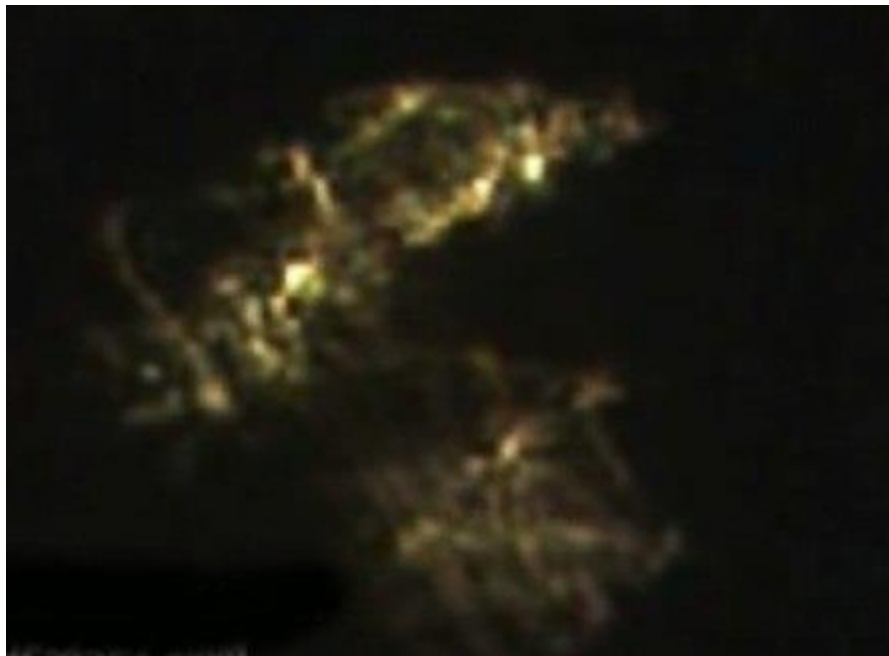

Feel free to go back and watch that again...and share it with your friends. It might well be some of your hard-earned tax money at work. Or, it might be something funded and built by someone else far, far away. We just don't know. Here, now, are two more still of a Walson-found craft that show extraordinary detail. These do not seem to be 'normal' looking satellites but since the vast majority of those tossed into space are military, we can only guess...

And now another from the next video. What the hell are these things?

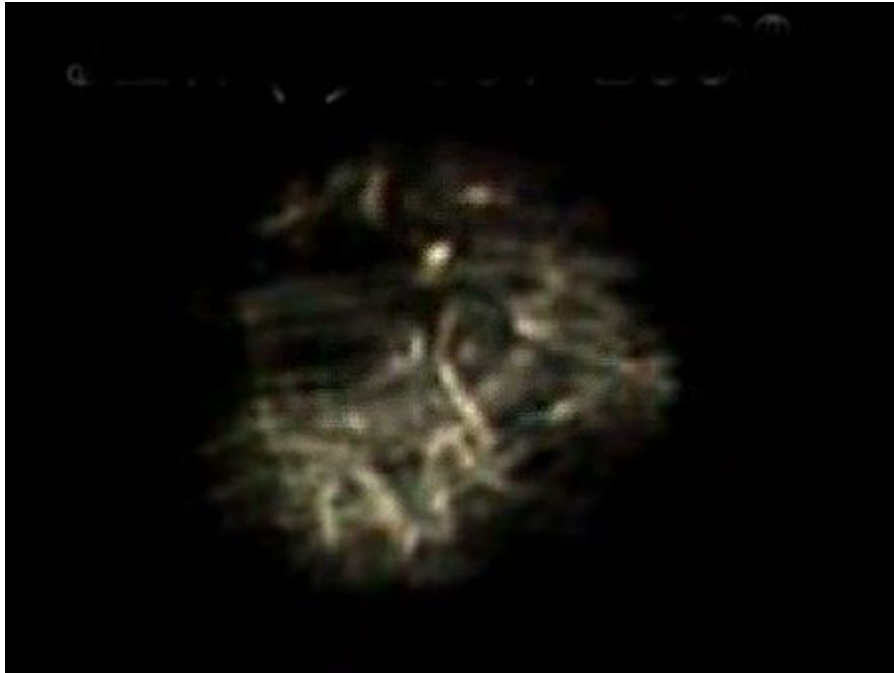

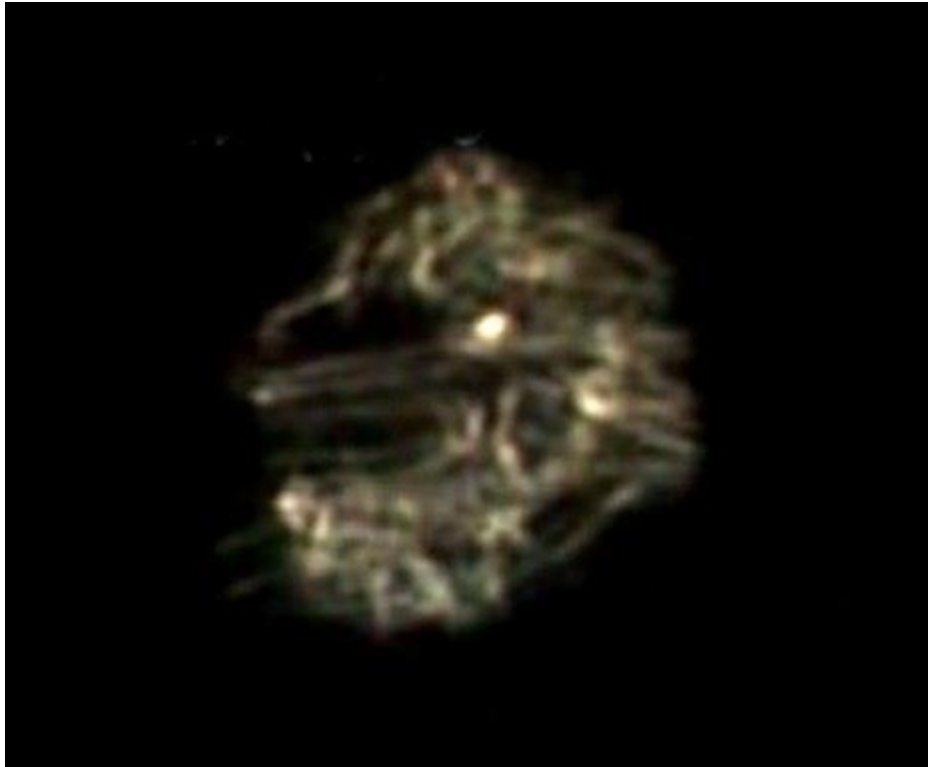

Here is the full video. Note at the end, John has captured a UFO with the Moon as a backdrop....

For Larger View, Click Here

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ui_NFx4Q3Iw

The following two stills are some of the most bizarre space UFOs that John has videotaped to date. The shape and the structure of this 'craft' is unique and only adds to the mystery of what is 'up there' over our heads, day and night, year after year...

Here is the video itself, showing the above machine and several other new ones. Earth orbit is a very busy place, indeed....

For Larger View, Click Here

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NS-e1UPU6Gg>

Here is more exclusive video showing another space machine. John Walson has literally opened the eyes of tens of millions of minds to the fact that the space above us is loaded with machines and spacecraft...and UFOs. The attention John is receiving is of a very high level...the surveillance helicopters are back and he's been followed and observed by several people on numerous occasions recently. Here's another remarkable video to study...

For A Larger View, Click Here

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=saQ6N9_25xU

And for a finale in this utterly sensational series of Walson's research and telescopic videos, John has prepared the following high definition piece which shows still more newly-discovered space machines in intriguing detail. It's time for the closed-minded debunkers - those who are paid and those of jealousy and of shallow conscience - to withdraw and to crawl back beneath their rocks. Apologies from quite a few of them are clearly in order. Fat chance of that happening. For those of you, like myself, who have intuitively, at the least, known that John Walson has not only made a remarkable discovery of these mystery machines above us, but that he has been able to do things with an 8" telescope and high definition camcorder that wasn't supposed to be possible.

So, sit back and prepare, once again, to see things that we are not supposed to see...or probably know about. This is truly spectacular footage.

In Part 8, we showed stills and a video of John zooming in and out on a 'star' in the night sky...a 'star' which resolved into a spacecraft when full zoom with the 8 inch Meade telescope was achieved. In further response to the government efforts to debunk his remarkable astrophotography, John had a friend go out with him on one of his near nightly sessions to videotape John at work high up on a hill with a town down below. He had the person pick out a bright 'star' above. John then acquired the 'star' with the scope and zoomed in on it. Here are some still frames from that video.

The first two frames below show John fully zoomed in on a spacecraft but notice that he has removed the videotape from his camcorder attached to his Meade telescope. This demonstrates that an object is in the view field but that the camera cannot record it.

This third still frame has the second person standing back behind John's camera and telescope. The town's lights are down below to the left. This still frame is oriented so you can still see the object in space in the view screen of the camcorder...that is why the city lights are on an angle.

Here is a video clip made by John's friend with his camcorder showing the above in motion...

The efforts to discredit John Walson's astrophotography are intensifying. It seems rather obvious that certain powers do not want his material to proliferate...even to be seen and considered by those who are honestly skeptical.

Up until now, Walson has been sending in edited pieces - not raw footage - of spacecraft he has videotaped. He has edited out all the zooms and pans and unnecessary video activity. This time, in answer to the debunkers - paid military and government, and otherwise - he shows us the full process of capturing a 'star' and zooming in on it...and revealing what it really is.

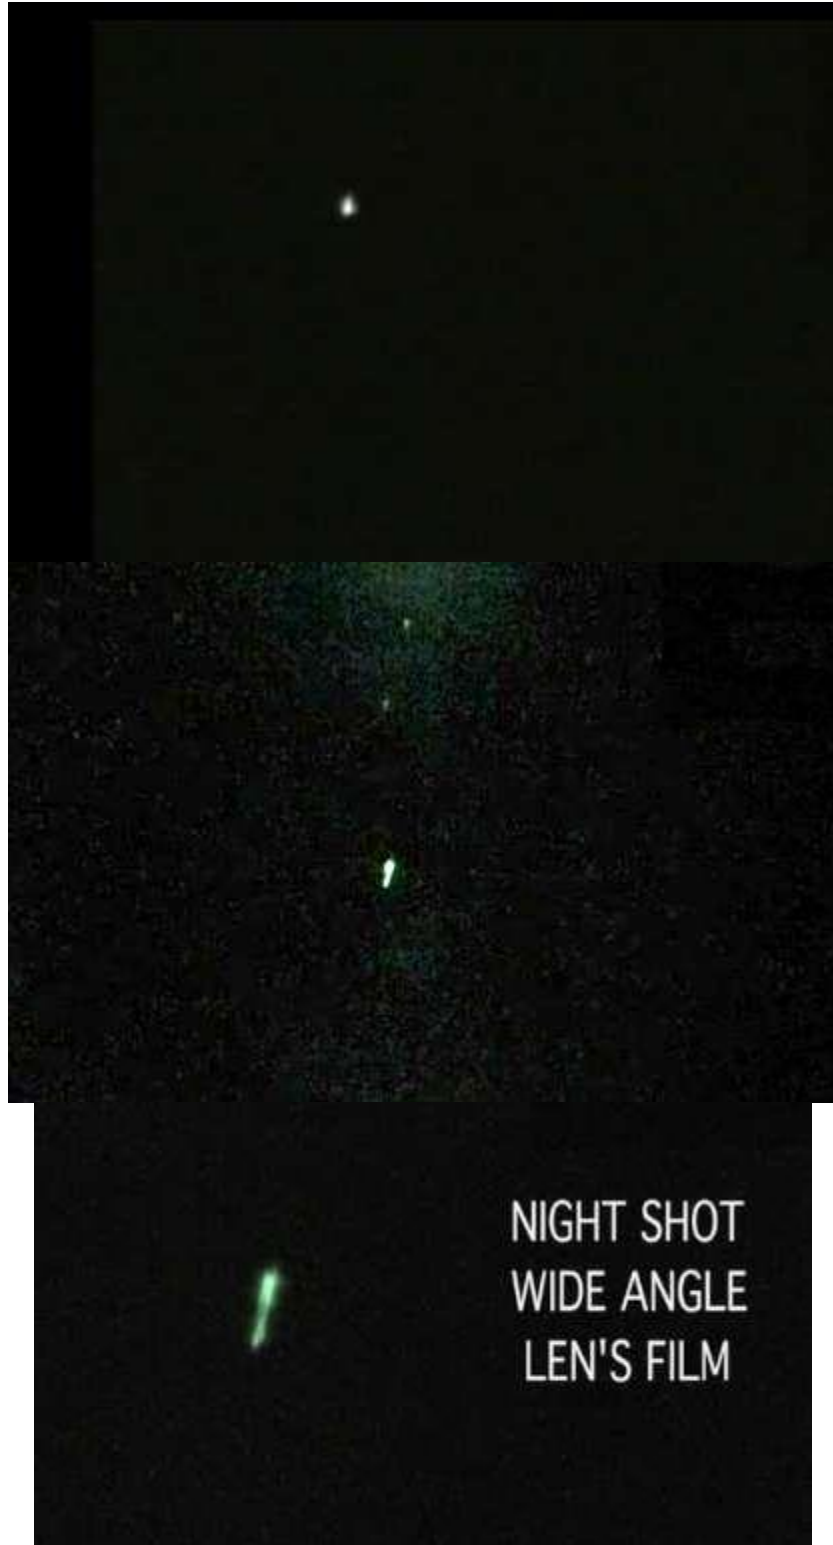

One of the chief debunking efforts has come from a source who has made videos of handmade tinfoil 'spacecraft.' Using a couple of lights, and keeping the camera lens in soft focus, this source is claiming to have 'proven' John Walson's videos are faked.

Unfortunately, the debunkers are not smart enough to figure out that Mr. Walson could present his video footage showing him fully zooming in and out on the objects in orbit above us. The debunker's claims are disabled completely by the following series of stills from a Walson video of a 'star' which, when zoomed in on, reveals itself to be anything but a star. There are also many actual stars to be seen behind the spacecraft in Walson's videos.

John also reports that he is being continually hacked...and now has compiled complete records of the hacker's computers and IPs. It is interesting to note how far debunkers will go to smear the work of others. And then there are others who will simply steal the work of genuine researchers on the net and try to sell it for profit. These kinds of things happen all the time now. Theft and plagiarism are some of the lowest and most vile forms of human criminal behavior.

Here now is a fascinating still frame sequence from another brand new John Walson video showing a typical 'star' in the heavens. You can then watch how, as he zooms in on it, the 'star' resolves progressively into an intelligently-made machine of some kind. See for yourself...

This is the full Walson video showing multiple zooms and reverse zooms of a space machine...not an artificially illuminated tin foil 'spacecraft' in someone's backyard...

Working night after night, John Walson continues to set up his equipment in the cold English countryside. He now estimates to have found around 100 space machines or space craft in the dark skies overhead. There is a great deal of new visual information in this newest installment of our world exclusive series which features four new videos and a number of still frames from them.

One of the videos was recorded with Walson's new HD camcorder and the results are even more stunning. As always, he selects his targets...and then focuses his telescope in on what appear to the casual observer to be 'bright stars'. As we will see, these objects are anything but 'stars'. Here are four stills frames of two different machines...

Here now are three contrasted versions of the second of the two craft above...

Here is the first of four new Part 7 videos. Take a close look at the first machine... you can pause the video anytime. Given the fact that these craft are very difficult to image, Walson has been able to capture a great deal of detail...and it is quite intriguing...

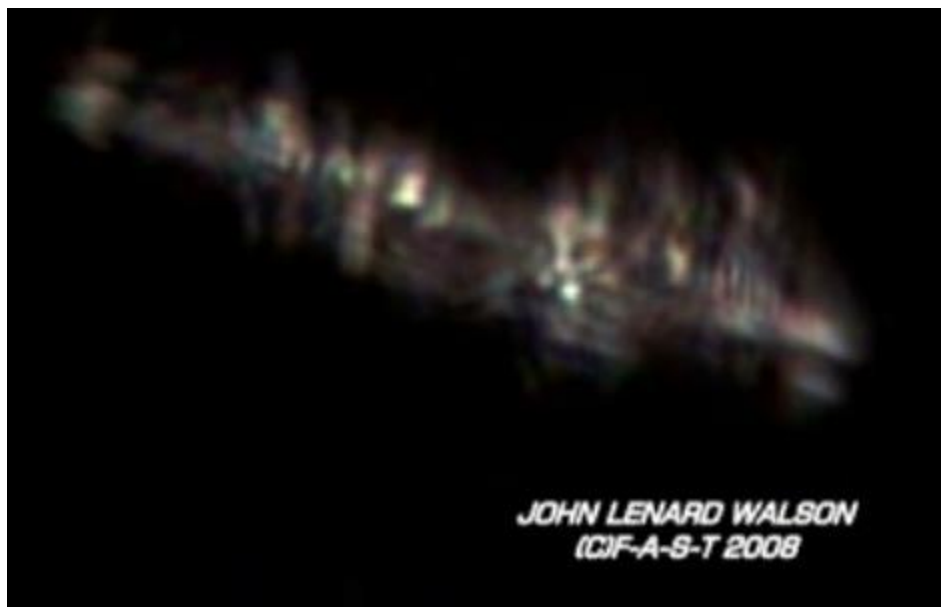

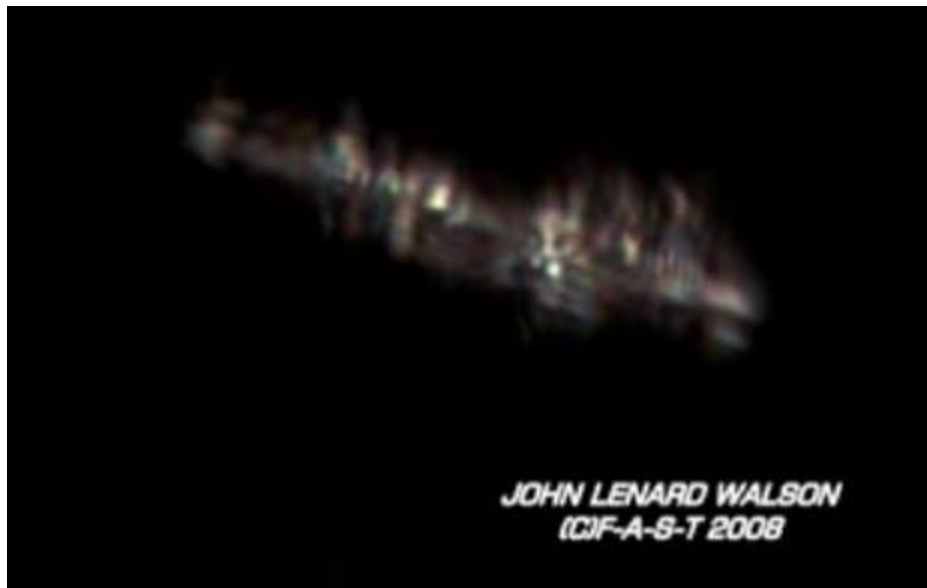

The following three stills show an interesting sequence of contrasted stills showing a second object in motion in the frame...which appears to be near the primary object itself.

The following three frames from a second new video, show more detail of these mystery machines...

The next two stills show some truly sci-fi appearing 'structures' on one of the objects...

This next video shows the objects above as imaged and recorded very recently

Here is the new HD video by John Walson. Notice how this video is sharper in focus and contrast. The machines shown on it are unique and clearly very intense in their composition. One can only continue to wonder what they are doing up there. Prepare to see some amazing new things...

This newest series of remarkable videos from astrphotographer John Walson contain more new provocative images including an unprecedented look at a space machine being moved and repositioned in orbit. This particular footage almost looks as if this machine is alive...so flexible is the portion caught in motion by Walson's telescope and video camera.

First, here are some freeze frames with contrast enhancement of several of the newest items discovered in orbit above us. The first frame below shows the object imaged at night...

Here is the same object videotaped at noon. So much for the efforts to dismiss these machines as 'stars'...

And here is an enlargement with contrast....

Spies In The Sky?

This video shows several different space craft and ends with an email urging John Walson to go public with his discoveries...

An Eerie Sight...Space Machine Changing Position

The following freeze frames show a space machine...or part of one...in motion. The top, bright part with the 'round' end is being moved downward or lowered - as we perceive it - to a position closer to the wide horizontal main body of the object below it. These four very interesting frames show the progression clearly. The first frame shows the beginning position of the bright object...

It is now all the way 'down' and perhaps touching or lying upon the primary object to which it is attached. It almost has a serpentine appearance...

Still lower...

And now all the way 'down' and perhaps touching on lying on the primary object to which it is attached...

Video Of Space Machine In Motion

I asked Mr. Walson to isolate the particular segment of the video which clearly and unmistakably shows this part of the object moving on its own or being remotely controlled. It is possible that the entire machine is rotating toward the observer and that the arm is actually fixed, although that does not seem to be the case from our analysis.

More Images From Space

The next four freeze frames show two more space craft captured by Mr. Walson...

And another craft...

Recording Sound From Space Machines

The following link to a BBC page explains at around the 7 minute mark how easy it is to record sounds from space...

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/science/space/spaceguide/skyatnight/proginfo.shtml>

Here now is another example of apparent sound coming from the objects above. John explains that within a few seconds of locking onto an object, he can, with a dish, pick up the noise from the object trailing slightly behind it...

It's A Big Sky...Where To Look?

How does John Walson know where to train his telescope to find these objects? That's a fair question, and here is his response...

Dear Jeff,

Regarding the inquiries as to how I am able to find so many different objects to videotape. I guess the best word to use is 'intuition'...frankly, sometimes I cannot believe it myself. I often wonder, when standing out in the cold night, hour after hour, how do I 'know' where - and when - to point to certain locations in the sky? I wish I had a simple explanation. I set up all my equipment and just point my telescope to the location I feel is 'right'...and there is nearly always something to see. How I am able to do this is honestly as much of a mystery to me as are the objects themselves."

And finally, a new Walson video including many of the items above...

More remarkable videotape from John Walson.

There are continuing efforts by a few attempting to discredit and debunk Walson's work videotaping these mystery objects in space. The assaults range from character assassination and ignorance, to the absurd and just plain dumb. It is also clear that a portion of the attacks on Walson's video images are born of jealousy, animosity and anger about lost opportunity to profit from his work.

One of the most absurd attempts to dismiss Walson's videos came from someone who claims these large machines are just 'stars'...imaged at full telephoto zoom. It is obvious these objects bear no resemblance to stars whatsoever.

The Walsons made the following point about those who claim these machines are just 'stars'...

"My wife just pointed out something profoundly, embarrassingly obvious the 'star' critics failed to note. If, as many nutty people claim, all my films are just stars, how can I be able to videotape the very same spacecraft both at night and in the day...in the same location? If these were stars, that would be utterly impossible because the earth rotates on its axis, and the stars 'move' constantly. These machines, whatever they are, remain largely in geosynchronous orbits and that's why they are visible both day and night in the same spots. This simple fact allows me to tape the same object extremely clearly at night...and in broad daylight from 7 am to 11 am when videotaping conditions (sun angle) are best.

One sorry soul claimed Walson is achieving his images by using a 'cell phone in vibration mode' held against the side of the telescope. Another dimwit chimed in that a cell phone isn't needed because he has 'vibrators' which cost only "$1 and I have drawers of them"...wonder why someone would have hundreds of one dollar vibrators? Yet another said these images can be created by 'stomping on the ground'! Of course, none of these critics offered proof that by vibrating a scope a star would present as such a clear and completely non-vibrating, stable multi-faceted machine with all kinds of appendages which are quite clear to anyone without a white cane. One look at Walson's images of the ISS and Shuttle demonstrates quite clearly the visual parameters that machines in space present in astrophotography.

A couple other pinheads also mentioned that Mr. Walson hopes to make 'millions' - one actually said 'billions' - from his footage. They somehow seem to have missed the fact that the video images in the series on rense.com are being offered by Mr. Walson for no compensation whatever. In fact, the subject of profiting from his discoveries and video tapes has only been addressed by him in the negative...he wants nothing for his videos and believes the world has a right to see them for free and that people should be able to make their own decisions.

A few other keyboard critics also attempted to smear and slander Mr. Walson as hoaxing the videos - with no explanation or examples as to how this is so. They also fail to mention the fact that others have sold DVDs of Walson's footage for personal gain.

One amusing mentally-infirm poster accused rense.com of some sort of dark involvement in this entire controversy because I removed two stories I wrote and presented several years ago when I learned that the images sent to me for the story were unauthorized. Needless to say, I regard theft - most especially for personal profit - of someone else's work...be it in printed word or video tape...as one the most vile of crimes. I am always more than happy to work with researchers who have the legal right and permission to use the work of others in stories.

There is also a little twit-brained chatter about Mr. Walson having 'changed his name' which somehow 'proves' all of his video research in hoaxed. Mr. Walson informed me when I first contacted him that because of the danger in presenting his videos, and the harassment and threats he has received, that he legally changed his name. He is greatly concerned for the security of his wife and himself. The helicopter harassment videos alone make his desire for insulation from the world at large perfectly understandable.

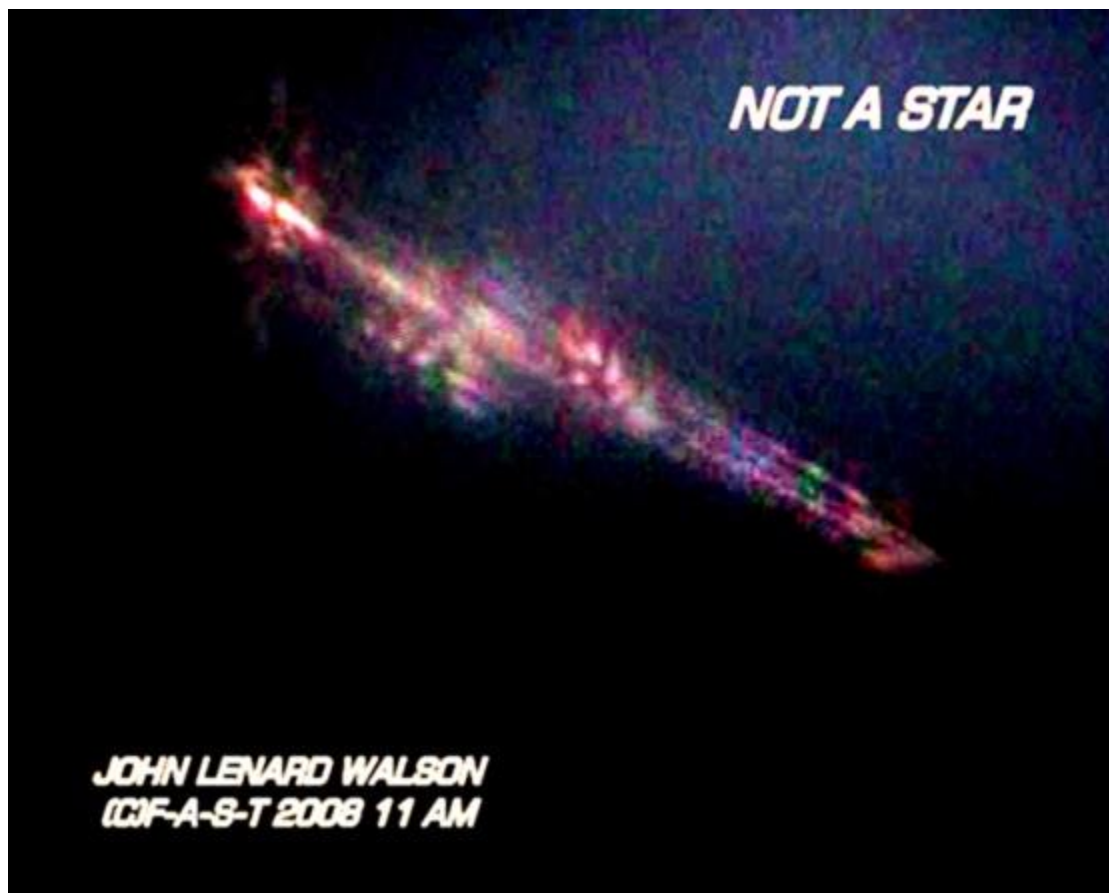

NOT A STAR

JOHN LENARD WALSON

More remarkable videotape from John Walson. For those who may have missed it in one of the earlier parts in this series, here is a freeze frame of Walson's telescopic video of the International Space Station (ISS)...

There are continuing efforts by a few attempting to discredit and debunk Walson's work videotaping these mystery objects in space. The assaults range from character assassination and ignorance, to the absurd and just plain dumb. It is also clear that a portion of the attacks on Walson's video images are born of jealousy, animosity and anger about lost opportunity to profit from his work.

Spacecraft Detail Shown In New Video

John Walson is certainly dedicated. Once again we find him out in the English countryside, in the middle of a very dark night with his telescope and video camera.

In this footage, it is possible to make out some detail in the center section of the spacecraft.

The video itself shows the object clearly and as it moves in orbit, you can hear John coughing in the cold night. More interestingly, you can hear the hum of him using the telescope's motor drive to keep the object in the field of view....

Here are three more freeze frames from John Walson videos showing even more remarkable variety in the shape and configuration of these mystery space craft....

I have just received more, new video from John Walson.

The footage contains some of the most provocative images yet ... stunning examples of these machines that hover above us in the silence of space.

Whose are they? What are they doing? Are we seeing space weapons platforms? Nuclear-powered? DU gravity-directed bombs? Microwave or beam weapons? Super-sophisticated spy satellites? Or, are some of these spacecraft not ours at all?

Here are some still frames from the first of two new videos with contrast enhancement...

John has also posted a short video of a single machine. You can see a great deal of detail in this intriguing footage...

Confirmation Of Walson's Space Machines

Here are some emails between John Walson and a Cambridge Institute of Astronomy Professor, and then between Walson and a JPL/NASA employee about Walson's videotapes of machines in space...and the techniques he has devised to capture the images...click here

'Stars' Or Space Craft?

In this latest set of videos and still frames, John Walson demonstrates more mystery machines in orbit. It is not known if all of these craft are stationary or move to various positions. Many skywatchers report observing what appear to the naked eye as 'stars' which seem to move to different locations if watched carefully. Some of John's footage seems to show this kind of movement as well. To begin, here are a series of still frames from his newest telescopic video recordings...

Stars In The Evening Sky? Or Space Machines?

After dozens of hours of videotaping bright lights in the night sky with a camcorder only, Mr. Walson has come to the conclusion these 'stars' are, in many cases, the same large spacecraft he has been capturing through his modified telescope.

These bright star-like lights are at high altitude, or in orbit, and appear as 'orbs' when captured by a regular camcorder at full zoom without his telescope because they are beyond the optical resolution capabilities of a normal camcorder which sees them as round 'orbs.'

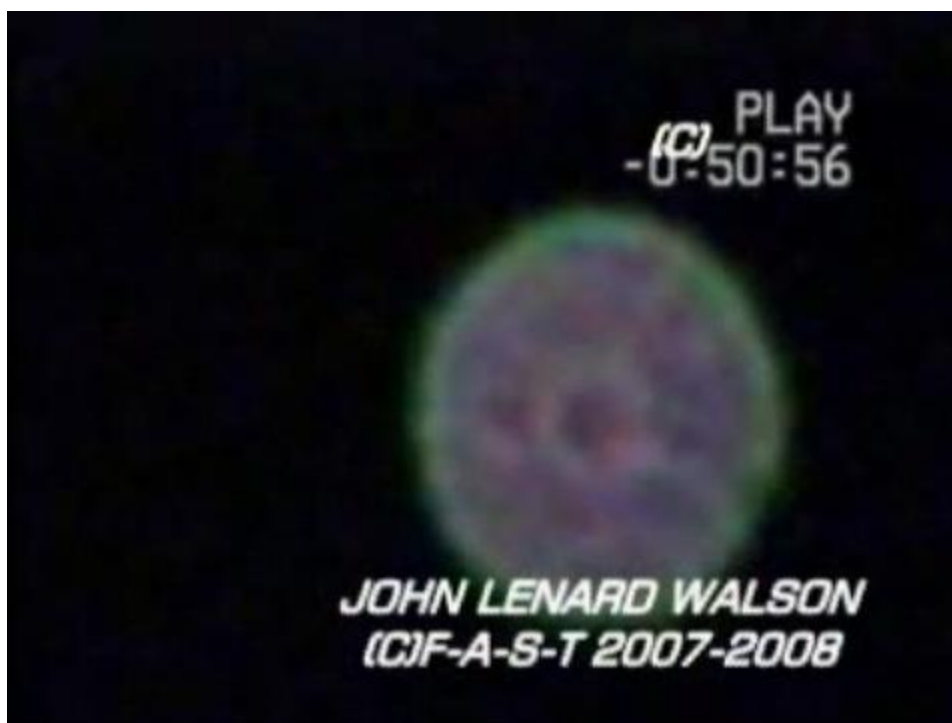

The footage which follows shows a number of these orb-shaped lights as videotaped from the ground without the use of a telescope. You will also see footage taken through John's (modified) telescope which shows what these bright 'star-like' lights really are: large machines in space.

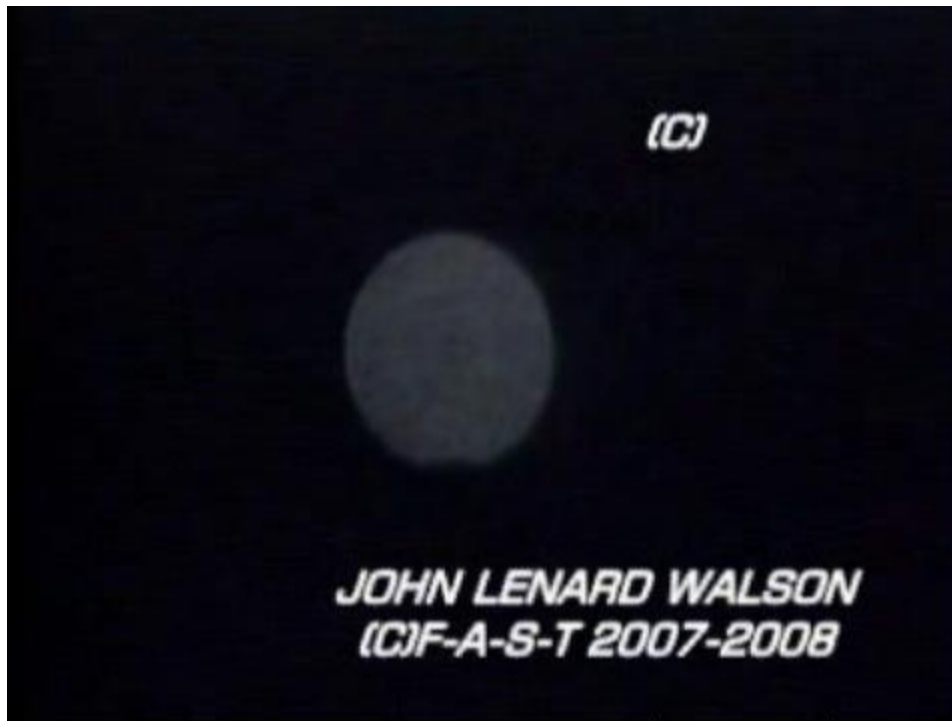

Side Note - About 98% of the 'orbs' captured in common digital and 35mm film flash pictures by the general public are actually dust, pollen or moisture droplets which are hyper-illuminated by the flash and appear, because of the optical resolution of the lens, as similar orbs. There is an excellent explanation of this at ghostweb.com.

More camcorder images taken without the aid of his telescope...

This is a compilation video from John Lenard Walson which shows a number of lights at great distance which, when zoomed through a video camera without telescope, appear to be 'orbs'...

<http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=RGFyGf0MNsk>

Mystery Space Machines - Pt 2

Including Video Of More Government Surveillance And Intimidation

A Rense.com World Exclusive

The reaction to our first story of John Lenard Walson's discovery of very large space machines in orbit above us was as expected, and ranged from shock and surprise to honest skepticism and questions demanding to know his technique. We have received a three more brand new videos from John which are even more provocative than the first group.

Here are some new freeze frames from John's videos that show more mystery machines in orbit overhead...

Contrast Enhanced

Here now, is a brand new video of these spacecraft or spaceships...whatever they are...

Helicopter Surveillance Continues

Mr. Walson continues to draw the intimidating attention of the military and government which are gracing him with many 'complimentary' flights, and picture-taking sessions, right over his head and home.

Site Visitor Reaction To Walson's Videos

Among the many emails received, here is one of particular interest:

Hi Jeff -

Yes, This is all true. These machines are parked everywhere, and they have been for a number of years now. On clear nights at my ranch, it is possible to watch them occasionally entering the atmosphere. Of course, I have reported for years on the many strange objects to be seen in the Yakima Valley and over the Yakima Reservation next to where I live.

When these objects enter the atmosphere they create a brilliant blue flash similar to the old time photo flash bulbs. It is almost as if they materialize out of nowhere and/or de-cloak somehow. Immediately after the flash it is possible to watch them cross the sky as a bright luminescent light. They often will cross over the zenith and continue out of sight but other times they will suddenly stop and remain in place, taking on all the appearances of a star. However, with a bit of training, it is possible to often discern the difference.

In my area, they tend to appear out a west/southwest quadrant bounded roughly by Mount Adams, Mt. Saint Helens and Mt. Rainier. I have often reported on these phenomena in the past. Some of my articles concerning this subject have been posted in years past on Rense.com as well as Rumor Mill News, STA, and other sites. In the Yakima basin, the years 2003 and 2004 were the most active for sightings of these objects. Many other locals in my area have been witness to this phenomena.

Thank you, SO much, for posting this latest report on this incredible issue going on right over our heads. These objects are NOT stars. They are simply masquerading as stars. There are a huge number of them above us at any one time. It is often possible to watch them subtly change orientation against a background of true stars. All it takes is some careful scrutiny to see the truth about what is flying above us all, in low orbit, in our night and daytime sky.

Stalking And Surveilling Walson On The Ground

Here is a photo montage of some government goons surveilling and physically assaulting John Lenard Walson...

9-11-2007

Government Goon #1 took great exception to Mr. Walson videotaping him and you can see the results. Simple assault, at a minimum.

9-24-2007

A diifferent agent, Goon #2, watches John Lenard Walson.

10-11-2007

Goon #2 at work on a surveillance duty a couple weeks later.

10-18-2007

The upper left pic shows a close-up of Goon #1 sitting in his white car. A few moments later, he sees Walson videotaping him and quickly puts a brochure up in the window to hide behind and drives away.

Thugs Be Damned

Standing firm, John Lenard Walson continues videotaping the machines above us. Here are some more freeze frames to ponder...

More Brand New Video

Here is another video segment taken by John Walson. The diversity of the machines continues to impress. This is a major expose and revelation.

Once again, through his telescope, videocam and perseverance in the face of military/government harassment and surveillance, John Lenard Walson has given the world a fascinating, compelling and intriguing glimpse at what may well be the biggest secret program of all. At some point, we will gain confirmation as to what these machines are and who constructed and owns them. In the meantime, John Walson continues to give his research to the world through these exclusive reports. There will be more. Soon.
