

Footwear Program

While attending college, I discovered a summer footwear program with the London College of Fashion. The program was split into 3 sections: Design, CAD Design, and Execution.

- During the Design portion, the class focused on sketching and market research.
- During the CAD Design portion, the class focused on the ergonomics of the foot and how to use technology like CAD and 3D printing to design an efficient shoe.
- During the Execution portion, the class handmade three pairs of shoes. Two pairs were from existing patterns and the third pair was designed by each student individually.

The following pages show projects from this program.
