

I believe in healing, and I know God can heal. The reason I can make this statement with clear certainty is that God has been healing me since before I was born. My sheer birth story was a miracle in itself. I have been the recipient of numerous healings throughout my life, and I am currently awaiting my next physical healing, which was promised to me twelve years ago. God is good and has been good to me.

God's word is very specific when it speaks about healing; Isaiah 53:5 NKJV "But He was wounded for our transgression, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement (punishment, beating) of our peace was upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed." Psalms 103:3 "Who forgives all our iniquities, who heals all our diseases." Psalms 34:19 "Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the Lord delivers him out of them all." God's word is filled with the promise of healing for His people. God even created trees that are planted in heaven specifically for the healing of God's creation. Revelation 22:2 "The leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." If we believe God can heal and does, then we can also expect that He can heal us as well.

Do all of God's children receive healing? No, they do not. Healing of the body requires faith, God's intentional will to be in place, and a personal resignation to the fact that suffering for the believer is also part of the journey with God. God can heal through the laying on of hands (not always required), but He can also use doctors to help a person obtain healing. We must accept that God has given knowledge to man to aid in his health needs. This point cannot be ignored. God does heal in different ways!
